

Even After Death by Lilting Champ Chapter 1572

Even After Death by Lilting Champ Chapter 1572-Troy turned around and saw his cousin, Graham Fordham.

He hadn't seen him for a few years, and Graham had grown from a young kid to a superstar in the entertainment industry.

The two of them had some bad blood between them.

Back in the day, Troy spent one whole year making a wood carving of the Mona Lisa.

It was a great project that took great effort for him to accomplish.

Graham, who was ten years younger than him, destroyed a part of it when the housekeepers weren't watching out of mischief.

His actions caused Troy's work to be incomplete.

Troy had planned to take that piece for a competition, so he reprimanded Graham harshly.

They were family, but everyone had always felt that David doted on his eldest son the most.

The others were less loved.

David was angry when he found out about that.

He caned Graham and locked him in the private chapel for three whole days.

That incident sowed the seed of hatred in Graham.

Even though Troy later apologized to him, Graham never accepted it.

David's siblings, Henley and Emery, got along very well but weren't close with David.

The fourth sibling, Sawyer, had it the worst.

He was Janice's childhood friend but was abandoned by her in the end.

The trauma from his unrealized love for her caused him to stay single since then.

He never had any offspring.

Troy met Graham's gaze and saw the hint of joy in his eyes.

"When Grandpa was still alive, he said that our family would only grow stronger if we stood united.

If we were divided, we'd fall.

Now, the family is in trouble, but you're still able to smile?" Graham lowered his head and grabbed Troy's collar.

"Do you know? I've always hated your family.

You guys always have that holier-than-thou attitude.

"I don't know what lies you all fed Grandpa for him to treat you so well! We're Fordhams too! It's good that he's dead now.

The unfair treatment is finally behind us." Troy was furious when he heard what Graham said.

"You bastard! He was your grandpa too! What the hell are you talking about?"

Graham sneered.

"He caned my hands so severely back then and even shut me in the chapel for three whole days.

How old was I? I was only seven years old! How could he do that to me?

"Since he never loved me as his grandson, why would I recognize him as my grandfather? Troy, are you angry? Do you want to hit me? "Unfortunately for you, karma has come back to bite you and crippled your hands.

Didn't Grandpa use to say that you had the hands of an artist? You had this coming!" Troy knew that Graham didn't like him, but he didn't expect Graham to harbor such hatred for him and Douglas.

Weren't they family? "I didn't want to stay in the Fordham family because of you.

“My dear cousin, your family is doomed! We’ve prepared a nice present for you.”

Troy felt uneasy.

What are you going to do?” “What am I going to do? Well, you’ll soon find out.

Troy, this is what you owe me.

The troubles within the Fordham family were more complicated than he thought.

Graham left with a smile on his face while Troy was gripped with unease and fear.

“What’s wrong, Mr.

Troy?” Olivia went up to him and asked when she saw the mixed emotions on his face.

“You were right, Dr.

Fordham.

Brandon Simmons isn’t the only suspicious person.

Even After Death by Lifting Champ Chapter 1573-Olivia handed Troy a glass of water to try and calm him down.

“I don’t really understand what’s going on. Can you tell me about the traitors you mentioned?” “That guy who just walked away is Graham Fordham. He’s working in the entertainment industry. He’s Uncle Henley’s youngest son. Garrett, who died a while back, is his brother.

“Avery had never suspected anyone in the family for the longest time because he thought we were all bound by blood.

“He thought it was only natural for all of US to work toward building the family up. Who in their right mind would bring ruin to their own family? I never expected them to harbor such malice toward US.”

Olivia was confused. “Why would Mr. David treat his children unfairly?” “It’s just how it is with the older generation. They just dote on the first son. Dad was Grandpa’s first child. That was why he loved Dad to the point of spoiling him.

“His love even extended to Dad’s children. Every time our cousins tried to compete for things with US, Grandpa would be more biased toward US. This bias caused hatred to fester in their hearts.”

Olivia looked at Troy’s saddened expression and said, “Maybe there are also grudges that we don’t know about. But I think Graham might not be the one plotting against the Fordham family.” “Why?” “No actual bad guy would tell you that he’s a bad guy. Besides, the culprit has plotted for around two decades.

They’re very patient and cunning.

They’ve been destroying the Fordham family slowly but surely. The most vicious dogs are those that don’t bark.” “That makes sense. Then...”

Olivia gave him a mysterious look. “It doesn’t matter if we want to or not.

We’re already pieces on the board. The game has already begun.”

Troy was able to calm down after talking to Olivia.

“What do you and Avery have planned?” “You don’t need to do anything, Mr.

Troy. Just stay on the sidelines and observe. The enemy should be revealing themselves soon.”

The sun had set, but the Fordham residence was still very lively.

Everyone was curious to see who would take charge of the family after Douglas’ passing. 1 The Fordhams had accumulated their wealth for over a century. It was a very massive fortune. Douglas’ death was very sudden. He probably died before he had the chance to leave behind a will. Things were getting very interesting.

Jacqueline spaced out as she looked at the moon.

“He was actually quite good to me.”

Alexander grabbed her shoulders and turned her around. “Jacqueline, don’t be naive. Are you really regretting everything when we’re already at this stage?”

Jacqueline suppressed the complicated emotions she was feeling. “Let’s head back and finish this.”

Even After Death by Liting Champ Chapter 1574-There was a sending-off ceremony for family members of the deceased at night in Zelotria. Olivia hid in the crowd as she looked at the members of the Fordham family.

Other than Douglas’ offspring, there were also the offspring of his brothers and other branch families. The Fordhams were a huge family.

The ceremony was about to begin. David was supposed to be the one to pay his respects first, but since he had already passed, Henley was the one to do it instead.

Everyone else went to take a flower of their own. Troy and Sean were wheelchair-bound. So, Jacqueline suggested that she would get the flowers for them.

Before she could reach out to get the flowers, someone grabbed her wrist.

Graham said, “This ceremony is for family members only. I’m afraid you don’t have the right to participate.”

As soon as he said that, Troy snapped back, “Enough is enough, Graham!

We’re mourning Grandpa right now. How dare you do this right before him? Do you really want to cause him more trouble even after he’s dead?”

Troy didn’t mind the minor spats they had before. But there were a lot of outsiders present that night. That wasn’t the place for Graham to be spewing nonsense.

Sean had become calm. No matter how ignorant Graham was, he shouldn’t be causing a scene at a time like this.

Moreover, Graham worked in the entertainment industry. He should know the gravity of such a situation. He had to be well-prepared if he was acting so arrogantly.

Sean looked at Henley, who had just suffered the loss of a child. He looked a little frail. Garrett's body had been dug out. His son had died for so long. How could he not be sad to send his son off?

That was why he didn't say anything to stop Graham. His eyes were soulless, and he was completely spaced out.

Instead, Henley's wife, Aubrey Goode, took a step forward and said, "Please calm down, Troy. Besides, Graham isn't wrong. It's not only Jacqueline. You and Sean don't have the right to pay respects to Dad either.

Jacqueline had always been very docile when she was with her elders, but even her expression changed at this moment.

"What are you saying, Aunt Aubrey? Even if my dad and Avery aren't here, we're still Grandpa's family. Why don't we have the right to pay our respects to him?"

"Why?" Graham sneered, the mockery in his expression was clear. "Are you acting dumb or do you really not know the truth? You're all so shameless."

"Graham, if you have an issue with me, we can talk it out in private. Do you have to cause a scene right here and now? Aunt Aubrey, he's young and clueless, sure. But are you really so ignorant as well?"

"Why are you allowing him to run his mouth and bring shame to the family?"

Grandpa cared about the family the most when he was alive..." "Oh, wow. You keep talking about the family. How nice of you. But I'm going to talk about it right here and now. I want everyone to know how shameless the lot of you are.

You've lied to all of US for so many years."

The crowd heard Graham's words and knew that a massive secret was about to be revealed. Some of them had the urge to get some popcorn to watch whatever was about to happen.

Olivia didn't see this coming. She felt like whatever Graham was going to say wouldn't be good.

Someone in the crowd squeezed her hand. She looked and saw that Ethan had already appeared next to her.

She met Ethan's gaze and saw that he looked like he knew what was going to happen.

"Do you know something?"

Before Ethan could speak, Graham had already started talking.

Even After Death by Lifting Champ Chapter 1575-"What nonsense are you saying?" Troy's face was flushed with rage. If his hands weren't injured, he would've already slapped Graham.

Jacqueline and Alexander looked at each other. The two of them were also thrown for a loop.

Olivia turned to look at Ethan. "What's going on? Is he telling the truth?"

Ethan said softly, "Olivia, I just got the news too. Look at who this is."

Ethan showed her a photo on his phone. It was a photo of a woman with a great figure in her 30s.

Olivia immediately knew who the woman was when she saw the mole under the corner of her eye.

"It's Natalie!"

The photo was different from the black and white photos she had seen before. It was a colored photo, and the image was very clear.

Although it wasn't as high definition as photos taken by modern devices, it was still better than the old photos.

"That's right."

Olivia asked excitedly, "Have you found her?" Ethan gazed at the Fordhams and said, "Perhaps they'll reveal the answer to your question."

Graham's words sent shockwaves into the crowd. "What's going on? Is Mr.

Graham joking about this?" "I don't think so. No one would be stupid enough to joke about something like that in this situation. I think there are a lot of things we don't yet know about the Fordham family." "Seems like things will be getting more interesting."

Jacqueline composed herself and said, "Graham, I know there are some misunderstandings between you and Troy, but this is not the time for jokes. We should get on with Grandpa's ceremony and stop wasting time."
"Grandpa?"

Shut up! What right do you have to call him your grandpa?" "That's enough, Graham! Don't you think your joke has gone too far?" "You bastards are the ones who have gone too far!"

Graham clapped his hands. Someone had already prepared a projector in advance.

"Everyone, I'm sorry I have to reveal this information under these circumstances. But I really want you all to be witnesses.

"The Fordham family will be weeding out the imposters so that certain people can no longer stay in the family shamelessly!" "Mr. Graham, what is the Fordham family hiding? Please tell US now." "Graham, you claim that we're not Fordhams. Do you have any proof?" Troy asked as he suppressed his anger.

"Don't worry. Naturally, I made these claims because I have proof."

The photo of a woman appeared on the screen. The woman resembled Olivia a lot. Even if it was a blurry, old photo, it was still clear that the woman was very pretty.

"This is my grandma, Natalia Bardanne." 2 It was rumored that Douglas used to be a ruffian in the past and was very influential on both sides of the law. He was also a prominent figure in Zelotria who was feared by many.

How much did he love his wife? He didn't let her show herself publicly.

Other than the Fordhams, no one knew what Natalia looked like.

“Why are you showing Grandma’s photo? You know that Grandpa didn’t like “Grandpa didn’t like it when other people saw Grandma. Do you know why?”

It was because she was married once before she became his wife.

“She even had a child with her ex-husband. That’s right. Your father is that very child. He isn’t Grandpa’s son!”