

Chapter 1018 Townsend's Revenge

In Rosefinch Tower, Townsend had begun to resemble a human again after several days of recovery. Gone was his previously withered appearance.

Even though he had regained his human shape, he remained frail, losing most of his former strength.

This setback hit him hard.

Frustrated, he wreaked havoc in Rosefinch Tower, his rage manifesting in a cacophony of destruction. His fury spilled over in curses.

"Damn it! To think I've been brought low by a nobody like Liam! He's dead. I swear I'll kill him!"

Marcelo, witnessing Townsend's fury from a corner, shivered. After gathering his courage, he said, "Mr. Chapman, perhaps we should seek your uncle's assistance. Liam's unexpected strength caught us off guard. If we let him be, he might become an even greater threat in the future."

Townsend's glare turned icy as he faced Marcelo, his voice laden with scorn. "Do you truly believe I cannot handle Liam on my own?"

Marcelo recoiled under Townsend's glare, opting for silence.

Townsend's rage subsided somewhat after his outburst. Calmer, he instructed, "Marcelo, send someone to Salem. Kidnap Liam's son. Let's show Liam the price of defiance."

Meanwhile, at the Hoffman family's main hall, the situation was dire.

The entire family had marks on their bodies; they had clearly been tied up and brought here forcefully.

The atmosphere changed when Liam entered with Julie.

The Hoffman family, recognizing Liam, was stunned.

Despite their captive status, they whispered among themselves, trying to decipher Liam's intentions.

Their betrayal of their own family hung heavily in the air, with Benedict and his father feeling the weight of their fear the most.

They remembered back in Salem, Liam had boldly declared his intent to overpower Leandro and reclaim the Hoffman family.

At the time, they had doubted him, thinking Liam was on a fool's errand given the powerful figure backing Leandro.

Yet, to their astonishment, Liam had realized his promise!

Benedict, overwhelmed with fear, turned ashen. He trembled so violently that he couldn't muster a plea for mercy.

Liam, hand in hand with Julie, approached the gathered crowd with deliberate steps.

Surveying the scene, Liam could almost see the Hoffman family in better days, along with his grandfather and loyal friends who had stood by him.

It was as if their spirits were smiling down on him in approval.

Burning with rage, Liam's voice thundered. "You stood against Julie and me. You set off a chain of misfortunes with your actions. I might have spared you for that alone. But your betrayal, your eagerness to capitulate to our foes, marks you for death. Today, I, Liam, am here to uphold my grandfather's legacy and deliver the Hoffman family's justice upon you traitors!"
