

Chapter 1136 Breaking Into The Military Base

"Idiot!" Trevor couldn't help cursing.

He was running out of time, and Nicolas was in danger. But Hurst was delaying his attempt to rescue Nicolas.

The sentry swung the butt of his rifle at Trevor's face. If it was an ordinary person, he would probably faint on the spot.

But Trevor was not an ordinary person. His eyes cold, he grabbed Hurst without hesitation and pulled in front of him to block the attack.

"Ahhh!" Hurst screamed in pain as his shoulder was hit hard.

And before he could finish shouting, Trevor pinched his neck fiercely.

Trevor threatened in a cold voice, "Take me to General Bowman right now. Otherwise, I'll break your neck."

He didn't have time to explain to Hurst. What he needed now was to see Nicolas. Then he would give them an explanation.

The sentries outside the tent heard the commotion inside, so they went in and pointed their rifles at Trevor nervously.

But Hurst's fat body perfectly covered Trevor's figure, so no one dared to shoot without permission.

Even the reporters in the tent turned pale with fright. They fled in a hurry, ignoring the big news in front of them.

Hurst became the head of the sentries only because of his uncle's position in the army. In short, he had no proper training, and he had never encountered this kind of situation. So he was so scared that he almost wetted his pants.

"I'm warning you. Don't do something recklessly. This is a military base, and there are soldiers everywhere. If you act rashly, I assure you, you will be shot."

But Trevor didn't show any sign of fear at all. Instead, he said coldly, "Cut the crap! I want to see General Bowman."

Hurst hurriedly said, "Okay, calm down. Calm down first. My uncle is Captain Colby Payne. He will definitely take you to General Bowman. Just don't be upset."

"Humph!" Trevor snorted coldly. He did not say anything anymore.

Then he dragged Hurst and limped towards the core area of the base.

Hurst was an idiot, so Trevor didn't believe his words. He chose to find Nicolas on his own.

The sentries followed behind Trevor nervously, still pointing their rifles at him. But they didn't dare to shoot while running.

The situation reached a stalemate.

At this moment, Trevor reached the checkpoint inside the base. He was immediately blocked by a large group of soldiers.

A middle-aged man in a military uniform stood up. With a dignified and cold face, he ordered, "Young man, let go of Hurst and surrender. You are surrounded now."

Trevor hid behind Hurst and said calmly, "General Bowman and I know each other very well, and I have something important to tell him. So let me see him now."

Since the middle-aged man called Hurst by his first name, Trevor thought he must be Colby.

Colby frowned. Obviously, he didn't believe that a young man like Trevor would know a general like Nicolas.

So he said in a cold voice, "I advise you to surrender. Don't resist."

Hurst regained his confidence when he saw Colby. Although Trevor still held him as a hostage, he plucked up the courage to say, "Brat, you're done this time. I advise you to surrender immediately. Otherwise, these soldiers will not spare you. They will shoot you to death before you can break my neck. I don't care what tricks you want to play. But since you have broken into the military base, your only chance to survive is to surrender."

Obviously, Hurst and Colby didn't believe that Trevor and Nicolas knew each other. They also firmly believed that Trevor had no other way out.

Trevor frowned. If he couldn't get rid of this current predicament, he wouldn't be able to save Nicolas. And his life would also be in danger.

The atmosphere was so tense that a conflict could erupt at any time.

Chapter 1137 A Friend Of The General

Trevor knew very well that the longer the delay, the worse the situation would be for him.

The military base never lacked weapons and sharpshooters. As long as the snipers were in place, it would be useless even if Trevor held Hurst hostage.

While the two sides were confronting each other, the commotion finally attracted the attention of the generals.

"What is going on here? What are you doing?" Nicolas asked as he appeared near the checkpoint with a majestic aura.

Trevor's eyes lit up when he saw Nicolas.

Now that Nicolas showed up, things would be much easier for him.

"General Bowman, it's me, Levi. I have something important to report to you," Trevor shouted.

Nicolas finally saw that the person in the middle of the encirclement was Trevor. He was surprised and hurried forward.

When Hurst noticed that the strength in Trevor's hand weakened, he mistakenly thought Trevor relaxed his vigilance. He broke free and ran to Colby as fast as he could.

"Ha-ha! You're doomed! How dare you take me as a hostage?"

Hurst turned to Nicolas and the other generals and reported loudly, "Generals, the safety of our base is in danger because of this intruder."

At this moment, Hurst felt his heart pounding wildly. Just now, his face was pale because of nervousness. But it quickly turned red because of excitement.

The moment he broke free from Trevor's hand, he felt relieved. In his eyes, Trevor couldn't threaten him anymore.

Hurst smiled ferociously, opened his mouth, and threatened Trevor, "You're dead meat!"

He intentionally made a gesture of cutting his neck and said to Colby, "Uncle, hurry and arrest that brat. Let me interrogate him personally."

Just now, Trevor took him as a hostage.

He didn't want to be laughed at, so he must avenge the humiliation he had experienced from Trevor.

Colby felt Hurst made sense, so he agreed.

He thought this was also a chance for him to show his ability in front of the generals. If they saw his potential, maybe it could help in his future promotion.

At the thought of this, Colby no longer hesitated. He waved his hand and ordered the soldiers, "Arrest him!"

But at this moment, Nicolas glared at Colby and ordered angrily, "Stop it!"

The soldiers who were about to move froze in an instant. It was as if time had stopped. Then they withdrew their hands and feet awkwardly, waiting for Nicolas' instructions.

Was the captain's order more important than the general's?

Of course, the soldiers obediently followed Nicolas' order.

Nicolas snapped, "This is my friend, Levi. Lead him to the command room politely."

He was a legendary general, and his prestige in the army was far greater than that of a captain.

The looks on Colby and Hurst's faces immediately changed, and their heartbeats went abnormally fast. They looked at Trevor in shock.

They never expected that this fierce young man in front of them actually knew Nicolas.

Nicolas and Trevor didn't only know each other. They even had a close relationship.

Colby and Hurst now knew that offending Trevor meant offending Nicolas.