

Chapter 1047 Laura Rhodes

Adamson found it quite gratifying to see Shayla suffer.

He raised his head and looked at Julie, who had a dismal expression and appeared to have lost all hope. Then, he told Rohan, "I will leave this woman to you."

After that, Adamson grabbed Shayla and took her away.

Tears glistened in Shayla's eyes as she grappled with the unwelcome truth. Despite her reluctance, she had no choice but to embrace the harsh reality for the sake of her brother.

In that fleeting moment, her last flicker of hope centered on Liam's escape, praying he would return to rescue her.

However, Shayla wrestled with doubt, questioning her worth in Liam's eyes and whether it would compel his return.

As Adamson escorted Shayla away, Rohan took Julie into the lab and instructed the doctor, "Make some changes to this woman!"

After issuing his orders, Rohan swiftly exited the lab.

His expression darkened.

into the lab and instructed the doctor, "Make some changes to this woman!"

After issuing his orders, Rohan swiftly exited the lab.

His expression darkened.

Despite a satisfactory outcome today, being bested by Liam once more had left him feeling discontented and humiliated.

Rohan made a silent resolve and whispered, "Liam, next time we meet, I will emerge victorious!"

A day passed.

In a distant suburb far from Invone, where few ventured, stood a dilapidated old house.

In the room of the decrepit house, a woman in white exuded refinement, her cold gaze fixed on the unconscious man sprawled across the bed, concern etched in her eyes.

Cold sweat adorned the unconscious man's forehead, as though he had endured a harrowing nightmare.

Even in his state of coma, the man continued to call out, "Julie... Asher..."

This man was none other than Liam, who had narrowly escaped death at Adamson's hands the day before.

Witnessing Liam in such a state, the woman swiftly dampened a towel and placed it on his forehead.

At that moment, his eyelids quivered slightly. Observing this, the woman's face lit up with joy. She hastened to his side and called out, "Liam! Liam! Can you hear me?"

Liam slowly awakened. Upon opening his eyes, he found the woman looking at him with concern.

The woman in white before him was Laura Rhodes, Sumner's granddaughter.

Liam was slightly taken aback to see her. He asked softly, "Why did you save me?"

Laura's expression remained calm as she replied, "The president sent me. He knew you were in danger."

Liam glanced around the room, surprised to see only Laura and himself were in the room.

Feeling anxious, he asked in a trembling voice, "Then... Where are the others? Where is Julie? And where is my son, Asher? And Shayla... Haven't they left the Duncan family?"

A bitter smile crossed Laura's face as she shook her head and replied, "How could I have saved everyone? I saved you this time with the one-time treasured object Grandpa gave me. The cost of using it is very high, and with my strength, I could only save you. I didn't have the time to save everyone."

Liam's face paled upon hearing her words.

Julie and Asher remained in the Duncan family's control!

Liam struggled to his feet, hastily slipped on his shoes, and resolved to return to the Duncan family once more.

Chapter 1047 Laura Rhodes

 +120 Points at most

He couldn't bear to leave Julie and Asher there, knowing Townsend would subject them to unspeakable cruelty!

Our ads aim to provide better support for authors.