

Married At First Sight Chapter 3373

Married At First Sight Chapter 3373-Pedro was silent for a moment, then said, "There is a new discovery in Wiltspoon. I haven't found out what it is yet. Let's see if Ms. Hunt can reveal some information to you."

Kathryn said, "It doesn't matter whether she reveals it or not. After all, she and I are competitors. To be honest, I dare to trust her, but she doesn't dare to completely trust me. If she dares to completely trust me, she is not suitable to take over the Farrell family."

Before the truth about the deaths of her aunt and younger aunt came to light, Kathryn would not hand back anything belonging to the Farrell family.

She said that if it was really her mother who killed her aunt and younger aunt, she would cooperate with Liberty and return everything that belonged to her aunt's descendants. She would go far away and not cause any trouble or threat to Liberty's succession.

If the deaths of the eldest and younger aunts were really accidents, Liberty would have to compete fairly with her if she wanted to get to the top. If she could pull her down or surpass her, she'd be willing to lose.

Therefore, she would do something for Liberty and the Farrell family. Liberty cannot trust her 100%.

Liberty, of course, had always been wary of her and didn't truly believe her.

In Liberty's eyes, she was Clarissa's daughter, and most likely the daughter of the murderer who killed Liberty's grandmother. Liberty might be thinking about how to cut her into pieces in the future.

How could she possibly trust her completely?

She had a good impression of her, and they had private contact. Their relationship seemed to be good. That's because she didn't grow up in the Farrell family, and her values and behavior were relatively normal.

If she were like Shiloh, she would have fought with Liberty to no end.

Pedro said, "Yes, the matriarch's going away might be related to the new discovery made by the people in Wiltspoon."

Clarissa was looking for the assistant of the previous head of the family, saying that the assistant had disappeared after the previous head of the family died.

It was originally suspected that the assistant disappeared with the two daughters of the head of the family. Back then, the daughter of the previous head of the family had been found, and the whereabouts of the two daughters were known, but the whereabouts of the assistant were not.

Audrey was also searching for her mother's assistant.

This showed that when the incident happened decades ago, the two daughters of the owner were not taken away by the assistant.

The assistant left Jensburg alone, and his whereabouts were unknown.

Why did he leave?

There had been no news about him for decades. Was he dead?

Decades have passed. Clarissa, who was in her twenties back then, is now almost seventy-one. The previous assistant to the family head was approximately twenty years older than Clarissa. She's afraid he passed away a long time ago. Even if he is still alive, he would be in his nineties or nearly a hundred years old.

At such an old age, was he still sane?

Kathryn asked in a low voice, "You mean to say that my aunt's assistant has been found in Wiltspoon? Is the assistant still around? Do you have any confirmed news? Go ask around, but don't alarm my cousin; she's not someone you want to mess with. Why did that assistant leave? He was the most loyal to my aunt. Why would he just leave after my aunt died unexpectedly? Did he know the inside story, or was he forced to leave? If my cousin really finds someone and asks around, is there any evidence to prove that my mother killed my aunt?"

When Kathryn said this, her expression changed a little.

She felt like the truth would come out soon.

She had mixed feelings.

She hoped that her aunt's and her younger aunt's deaths were accidents. If it was her mother who did it, how would she face Liberty and the others?

well!

Why were there so many disputes between people?

Couldn't people from the same family work together to ensure the family's prosperity?

She had to fight and struggle just for a little power and profit.

It was true that wherever there are people, there is a world of martial arts.

It had been two years since Kathryn returned to her biological parents' home, and she really didn't like the environment in the Farrell family.
