

Chapter 427 Thank You

Cecilia and Zoey both found themselves taken aback, with Zoey struggling to comprehend how to explain her presence in Duefron.

She privately criticized Mark for his lack of resilience.

But she didn't want to inconvenience Cecilia.

Particularly in light of her son's health condition, which necessitated three years of continuous monitoring.

While pondering this, Zoey heard Cecilia calling out to her and couldn't help but burst into tears.

She contemplated her response but ultimately chose to remain silent.

At that moment, a nurse wheeled Rena and the baby out of the delivery room, with Waylen by her side.

"It's a little princess!" the nurse exclaimed, smiling.

The Fowler family members gathered around to catch a glimpse. Korbyn beamed with joy, expressing his excitement. "Well! Well! Alexis now has a little sister to play with."

Alexis had also come over to see her sister.

Juliette, who had been in a bad mood lately, softened when she saw the adorable baby.

She glanced at her husband and teased, "You can't be so partial."

Korbyn played with the baby and couldn't help but smile. "What's wrong with my partiality? The little one doesn't even understand, but when she does, Alexis will indeed be old enough to take care of her."

Alexis was thrilled to hear that her little sister could play with her.

She then leaned against the moving bed and kissed her mother.

"I love my sister!"

She was so fond of her new sibling that she squealed with excitement.

Leonel harbored affection for this little sister but remained introverted, offering a smile in response.

Afterward, they moved to the spacious VIP ward, covering an impressive 100 square meters in size.

Rena made a swift recovery after giving birth. Waylen took a seat at the head of her bed, and she reclined on his lap, finding comfort in his presence.

The Fowler family recognized their affectionate relationship and gave them some space.

They gathered around the crib to marvel at Elva one by one.

Rena leaned against her husband and witnessed this heartwarming scene.

Compared to the somber occasions of Alexis' and Marcus' births, this child was receiving a wealth of blessings. While Rena might occasionally reflect on the past and feel sadness, this moment was the most important.

Waylen was attentive to her.

Noticing her emotions, he tenderly caressed her hair and murmured, "You mustn't cry during postpartum care."

"I'm not crying," Rena replied, suddenly wanting to act a bit spoiled.

She secretly held onto Waylen's leg.

Waylen lowered his head, his handsome face radiating an abundance of tenderness.

Elva's birth bore witness to the genuine happiness and solace that Rena and Waylen found in each other.

Cecilia was grappling with mixed emotions.

She observed the baby and absentmindedly touched her own belly, realizing that her child would be born in a few months.

She couldn't keep this pregnancy hidden forever from the Evans.

She wondered about her relationship with Mark.

Would he want another child with her?

Her thoughts were in disarray and chaotic.

Zoey stared at Cecilia in silence.

Having experienced a lot herself and given birth to her own children, she could instantly sense something was different about Cecilia.

It was clear as day that she was expecting.

Zoey was overjoyed by this discovery.

The couple had just gone through the divorce proceedings, yet they suddenly had a child. Zoey was thrilled at the thought of the coming grandchild, but she also felt a sense of responsibility.

Even though Cecilia was pregnant, Zoey couldn't push Mark back.

Cecilia had clearly planned to raise the child on her own, without telling Mark.

Zoey had also made up her mind.

The most important thing now was for Mark to recover.

With her resolution in mind, Zoey left quietly.

Later, she had her servants send a mountain of tonics to Rena's ward.

After some time, Rena was able to leave her bed.

As she inspected the tonics, she said to Waylen, "There are many items suitable for pregnant women among the foods sent by grandma, but I've already given birth to our girl. Also, we won't be having a fourth child."

Waylen, changing Elva's diaper, patted her chubby bottom gently.

Elva began to cry.

Rena scolded him.

Waylen quickly changed the diaper. Afterward, he picked up Elva, kissed her, and called himself a 'Bad daddy.'

Upon lifting his head, he noticed Rena's gaze on him.

He noticed she was focused on him with loving and gentle eyes.

Waylen responded with a smile.

The atmosphere in the room suddenly grew ambiguous. Rena wondered how they could maintain such enthusiasm even after three children and many years of marriage.

She had just given birth and wasn't in the mood for intimacy.

Rena then whispered, "Don't provoke me!"

Waylen smiled and put the baby in the crib. He said casually, "Did you mention those tonics earlier? People say pregnancy makes a woman acting a bit silly. True, our Ms. Gordon is indeed a bit confused."

He liked to tease her by calling her Ms. Gordon.

Rena rolled her eyes at his playfulness.

Waylen, playing with the baby, said slowly, "Zoey still has sharp eyes. She's probably figured out that Cecilia is pregnant, but she doesn't want to delay her future because of Mark's illness. So, she's using your condition as an excuse to send tonics to Cecilia. Let's wait and see, the baby will be born with blessings."

Rena finally understood after he finished speaking.

She admired Zoey's thoughtful approach.

At the same time, she worried about her uncle's health. Waylen playfully added, "Don't worry! He'll be alright. He won't dare to leave too soon with a baby on the way right now."

Rena pondered the situation.

Zoey would surely tell Mark about Cecilia's pregnancy.

Besides, it was impossible for Cecilia to hide it forever.

After soothing the baby, Waylen bent down to kiss Rena and whispered, "Stop thinking about it. It's only been two days since you gave birth. You should care of yourself first."

Rena smiled.

He hadn't been close to her for days, and with no one else in the room, he couldn't resist kissing her passionately.

After a while, he stopped and, in a hoarse voice, said, "Rena, thank you."

He had been born into wealth and had been proud his whole life.

But without Rena and their children, his life would be dull.

He thanked her for bringing love into his life.

Rena was touched and gently stroked his handsome face. She couldn't help saying his name passionately. Cecilia happened to enter the room at that moment and witnessed the scene.

She blushed and exclaimed, "Hey! This is the hospital!"

Then she placed something down.

Cecilia couldn't resist adding, "Waylen, you're quite cheeky!"

Waylen came over and pinched Cecilia's cheek, teasing her, "We're a legally married couple. We can do all the things legally married couples do."

Cecilia scolded, "Rena has recently delivered!"

Waylen tugged her ear playfully and asked with a teasing tone, "What did I do? Am I really that obnoxious to you?"

Cecilia's ears flushed.

Rena couldn't resist coming to her defense. "Don't tease her all the time!"

Waylen shot her a meaningful glance and then casually said, "By the way, there are some tonics sent by Zoey here. Some of them may not be ideal for postpartum women, but they're suitable for pregnant women. I can assist you in moving them to the car so you can have them."

Cecilia gazed at the stack of tonics and ran her fingers over them thoughtfully.

"How can I finish all of them?"

Waylen let out a mischievous laugh and said, "Just go ahead and take them! They're a gesture of love from Zoey after all!"
