

Chapter 48 Exposing The Truth In Public

Barr recovered from the shock and picked up the document.

He looked at it and mumbled, "There is no problem with it."

Klein lost his cool when he heard that. "Miss Torres, please explain to this idiot."

Lorraine cleared her throat and gave a detailed explanation of Barr's ridiculous suggestions.

"Well, Mr. Powell asked us to keep the trees in the development area to retain green space. But he forgot the growth of these trees will affect the construction and destroy the buildings. Considering the cost, he intended to design straight roads, ignoring the basic topography issues. In addition to that, he wanted to add more bars and ballrooms and place them next to the school and the library."

Everyone present at the meeting had relevant experience in architecture.

Lorraine's explanation enlightened them.

Even a novice architect wouldn't make such stupid mistakes. It was appalling for Barr, a so-called experienced engineer, to make such mistakes.

Everyone unanimously turned and cast a scornful look at Barr.

He couldn't bear the humiliation.

"Mr. Moore, this isn't right!" Barr angrily pointed at Loraine. "She is trying to ruin my reputation. She has tampered with my proposal. I never said such things."

A smile emerged on Loraine's lips, for she expected Barr to say such a thing. "Stop lying." She pointed at his signature on the plan. "You have already signed it and approved the plan." Looking at the irrefutable evidence, Barr couldn't deny it anymore.

Only then did he realize that Loraine had tricked him. But it was too late.

Countless thoughts ran through Barr's mind. "Mr. Moore, it's a misunderstanding. I only wanted to discuss the plan with Miss Torres and didn't check the plan carefully."

"Oh, it was just a discussion," said Loraine, pretending as if she had just understood his words. "I thought I offended you in some way, wanted to discuss the plan with Miss Torres and didn't check the plan carefully."

"Oh, it was just a discussion," said Loraine, pretending as if she had just understood his words. "I thought I offended you in some way, so you were making things difficult for me."

Hearing that, everyone burst out laughing.

Barr's face reddened as Loraine exposed the truth.

He squirmed in humiliation.

Klein lost all respect for Barr because of his incompetence.

"Stop giving stupid suggestions." He glared at Barr. "From now on, Miss Torres will handle everything. If such mistakes occur again, I'll fire you!"

"I'm sorry, Mr. Moore. It was my fault. I will listen to Miss Torres and won't make any mistakes again."

Barr nodded earnestly.

Although he seemed cooperative, he despised Loraine.

It was all her fault. 2

Barr gritted his teeth and swore that he would avenge for all the humiliation he had suffered today.

Klein and Marco left one after another after dealing with the issue about Barr.

After the incident, Barr seemed to behave himself.

He stopped being arrogant and domineering and started showing respect to Loraine.

He listened to Loraine's every word.

After the meeting, Barr stood up and apologized to Loraine in public.

"Miss Torres, it was all my fault. I overestimated myself and let you down. I'm really sorry. How about I take you out for a meal to express my apology?"

However, Loraine refused without hesitation.

"No, thanks."

But Barr didn't give up. "Miss Torres, if you don't have a meal with me, I'll assume you still haven't forgiven me! Mr. Moore will blame me."

Loraine frowned. She didn't believe Barr would change his attitude merely because he was reprimanded in front of everyone.

Loraine was used to his arrogance, and his hypocrisy made her sick.

Seeing Loraine's reluctance, Barr added, "I really want to make it up to you. I will invite Mr. Moore as well."

Lorraine's brows shot up.

She was curious that he would invite Klein as well.

She wanted to see what Barr was up to.

Out of curiosity, Loraine smiled and agreed, "Okay, sure."

In the evening, Loraine arrived at the private room of Rose Restaurant that Barr had booked. She waited for a long time, but Klein didn't show up.

Barr suggested, "Mr. Moore is probably caught up in work. I guess he won't be here in a short while. Let's have dinner first."

Lorraine took a deep breath and nodded. "Okay."

Barr was overjoyed. He poured a glass of wine for Loraine and handed it to her.

"This is my token of apology to you, Miss Torres."

Lorraine stared at the foamy wine in the glass and cautiously shook her head.

"Sorry, I don't drink."

"Okay, let's have some beverage!"

Barr didn't get angry. He put down his glass and pushed a glass of beverage toward her.

He expected that Loraine would be on guard.

Therefore, he prepared a beverage as well.

He had drugged both the wine and beverage.

Loraine nodded and accepted the glass of beverage.
