

Chapter 907 The Investigation Was Hindered

Jaylah couldn't stop thinking about the possibility of the Wilson family's real daughter returning.

Would she still be welcomed with open arms as she was now? Could she lose everything she held dear?

With these thoughts, Jaylah felt a shiver run down her spine. Glancing at the rearview mirror, she saw a woman with a ghostly pale complexion.

Rumors had it that she bore a striking resemblance to the Wilson family's true daughter.

Jaylah reminisced about the day she became a part of the Wilson family.

Despite her young age, she remembered a few things. She came from a humble background. Upon her adoption, many remarked on her fortunate circumstances.

Her resemblance to Joseph's missing daughter was the reason the Wilson family took her in, hoping to bring some solace to Aubria Wilson, the grieving mother of the noble-born girl.

Jaylah had always had a knack for understanding people. Aware of the Wilson family's wealth, she knew this was her chance.

So, she went out of her way to endear herself to the Wilson family. She was especially kind and gentle, recognizing Aubria's longing for her daughter. Over time, Aubria grew fond of her.

Aubria's affection for Jaylah led Joseph to develop a deep love for her as well, treating her like his own daughter and even extending his affection to Kaley.

However, Jaylah was aware that Joseph's heart still held a place for his missing daughter, Tessa Wilson.

Should Tessa return, Joseph would surely shift all his love back to his long-lost daughter, pouring it out like never before!

Then both she and her daughter, Kaley, would be in danger of losing everything.

The more Jaylah pondered these scenarios, the paler her complexion became.

She clenched her teeth, determined to stay firm.

What would she do if history repeated itself? As long as she and her daughter could continue to live a rich and carefree life, she would do anything for it!

After much thought, she contacted her trusted ally once more. "If anyone starts investigating the necklace, find a way to stop them. Ideally, figure out who's behind the investigation!"

By taking the initiative to prevent the mystery person from interfering with the Wilson family, Jaylah believed she could safeguard everything.

In Zodiac, the weather turned significantly colder than in Vagow, especially after a bout of autumn rain. Loraine had solidified her position within the Universe Group's branch, earning widespread respect. Her resilience was well-known throughout the company, ensuring that no one dared to disrespect her as they had upon her initial arrival at the company.

Loraine had no intention of taking complete control or making harsh changes at the branch company. She softened her approach over time and turned her attention back to her own business.

With a coffee in hand, Loraine gazed out the window, her thoughts wandering to her parents and occasionally to Marco.

After a brief encounter with Marco that day, their resolve to tackle their issue swiftly grew, hoping to reunite sooner.

Lost in thought, she was interrupted by a knock and the entrance of a visitor.

It was Remy Avila, her team member tasked with restoring recordings. Anxious, she asked, "What's the update? Any progress?"

Remy, smiling, confirmed the good news and handed her a USB drive with a freshly restored recording.

Eagerly, Loraine played the recording and was greeted by the soothing voices of a woman and a man.

They were having a conversation. The woman said softly, "I want to give the best to Lorrie. My father passed this necklace down to me. Now, I intend to redesign it for my little princess."

The man answered with affection, "Lorrie is your little princess, and you are my little princess..."

Could this be her father speaking?

Tears welled up in Loraine's eyes as she listened to the warm and genuine exchange between her parents, feeling as if she were witnessing their love firsthand.

Then, she focused on her mother's mention of the necklace.

Did her grandfather give the necklace to her mother?

Loraine realized she had never heard discussions about her mother's side of the family, yet they were able to gift such an expensive necklace, suggesting her mother's background was not ordinary.

After some thought, Loraine decided not to trouble Aldo with this and, deeming Wesley too unreliable, she reached out to Rowan instead.

Upon hearing the situation, Rowan pondered deeply before he sighed and said, "When your parents married, none of her family attended. Your mother... She never explained why. It seemed she preferred not to discuss it, so we didn't force her to tell us."

Although the response was underwhelming, it wasn't unexpected. With a heavy heart, Loraine instructed her team to delve deeper into the necklace's origins, believing it might lead to discovering her mother's family.

Finding her mother's family might unveil stories from her mother's younger days.

As Loraine contemplated this, Remy approached with a troubled look, reporting, "Miss Torres, something is wrong. All the leads we had have vanished. It appears someone is deliberately hindering our investigation!"

