

Chapter 1944 Teach Julian A Lesson

The guard scratched his head and said with annoyance, "We could just hand this lowlife over to the police. The stuff on Julian's phone and computer will put him away for years."

Janet glanced at Julian with revulsion, his glasses somehow making him appear dignified. She nodded and warned, "Be careful. Make sure he doesn't escape."

The guard assured her confidently, "Don't worry. Mr. Larson is taking care of it personally. Everything will be fine."

Having overheard everything, Lexi shook with rage upon discovering Julian's true nature. Clenching her teeth, she turned to Janet and exclaimed, "He took photos of you and misled Kenna. He can't be let off for what he's done. I'm so furious that I want to hit him."

Janet looked towards Lexi, intending to soothe her, but before she could, Lexi stormed over to Julian and struck him across the face.

Lexi hit Julian repeatedly, and soon, blood trickled from his lips. He tried to scream, but his voice was muffled by his bloodied and injured mouth.

The guard, tasked with restraining Julian, grimaced with distaste. Looking embarrassed, he said to Lexi, "Enough. Stop hitting him. You'll get your clothes all bloody. It's disgusting. He'll get what's coming to him once he's behind bars. You don't need to dirty your hands."

Witnessing Julian's bloody chin, Janet felt nauseated. She covered her mouth, fighting back the urge to vomit.

Realizing Janet was unwell, Lexi refrained from attacking Julian. Instead, she wiped her hands with some tissues and in a moment of disgust, tossed them onto Julian's face.

"You've crossed the line! Who do you think you are? How dare you treat me this way! Just you wait! Just you wait!" Lexi's actions humiliated Julian. He glared at her, his eyes seething with rage, but he was firmly restrained by the burly guard and couldn't move.

"How dare you threaten me?" Annoyed once more, Lexi kicked him twice before storming off.

"Calm down, Lexi!" Janet quickly stopped Lexi, worried she might lash out at Julian again. She pulled Lexi closer to her.

Next to Janet, Lexi's voice rose intentionally as she vented, "Julian is such a disgusting voyeur. He needs to disappear from this world soon. He does nothing but cause pain. His life means nothing."

A guard nearby laughed loudly, but Janet saw Julian

Chapter 1944 Teach Julian A Lesson 🎁 +120 Points at most staring at Lexi with fierce and resentful eyes, reminiscent of a viper eyeing its prey.