

Chapter 1953 Is Alexandra Missing

Brandon just needed to gather proof that Julian was being exploited. With that, he could demonstrate his own innocence in Julian's demise.

Even though Brandon was thrust into such a dire situation, he had never considered disclosing Julian's exploitation of those innocent girls through illicit photographs.

Aware of this, Johanna and Beal grew even more impressed with Brandon's integrity, and were more inclined to leverage their family connections to help him.

With the support of the White family and Larson Group, the online discussions accusing Brandon of murder were quickly quelled. Likewise, the rumors of Julian's suicide gradually subsided.

Nevertheless, Brandon's company and the White family's business continued to face opposition, resulting in a decline in their stocks.

Upon noticing the impact on the White family's stocks, Brandon approached Beal and said, "It's best you make a statement and distance yourselves from me. There's no reason to drag the White family's business into this turmoil."

Beal dismissed the concern with a wave of his hand. "My business doesn't hinge on stock performance. I can handle a minor financial hit. Brandon, don't talk like you're an outsider. Focus on uncovering who's behind Julian."

"Now that Larson Group is declining, I can't let that affect the White family. After all, our families' business ties run deep. I'll need the White family's support to recover, so I can't let you be dragged down by me," Brandon reasoned earnestly.

"Well, don't say anything more. I don't have time to care about these things now," Beal said, not even looking up.

Used to handling everything by himself, Brandon experienced the rare comfort and security that family brought.

The following day, the IT department of Larson Group traced the account that made the transfer to Julian, pinpointing it to a very distant foreign location.

Upon reviewing the investigative findings, the head of the tech department told Brandon, "It seems like a bogus address. I'll dig deeper for the actual location."

Yet, Brandon was taken aback upon seeing the name of the place.

After hypnotizing Alexandra, Brandon had left him there. Given its remoteness, Alexandra wouldn't find escape easy.

Brandon puzzled over the connection. Could it be just chance that the person who sent money to Julian was at this very address?

His temples pounding, Brandon contacted the security personnel there to confirm Alexandra's presence.

The scented candle proved highly effective. Janet didn't wake up until nine o'clock in the morning. When she descended the stairs, she noticed Brandon sending messages, his expression grave and tense. He was so engrossed that he didn't realize she was approaching.

Upon seeing the message on his phone, Janet asked, "What's this about? Is Alexandra missing?"

Her voice startled Brandon, who switched off his phone and forced a smile to mask his annoyance. "Janet! How did you sleep?"

Ignoring his attempt to divert the conversation, Janet walked over to the couch and sat down, fixing her gaze on him. "Don't dodge the question. What's going on?"

Brandon responded, "It's nothing serious. I just instructed the bodyguards to monitor Alexandra's whereabouts as usual. Given his potential risk, I have to keep tabs on him now and then."

Janet, however, was not convinced by his explanation.