

988 HE IS MINE

Iris and Abby would be the last Serafim, since Decratic had gone, the circle of the Serafim would stop at them.

They were discussing about this topic and currently, Iris and Cane were sitting together with Abby and Cedric under pergola. They stared at how the weather changed.

It had been a month, since their coronation and Cane did well to navigate this almost collapsed kingdom. It helped since he had a handful capable people that he could trust.

Weirdly enough, Cane and Lou got along really well in a sense, as they handled the matter with the merchant and approached them with a business opportunity.

They lost more than half of the population and there were only three packs that left. There would be not enough member if they wanted to build the seven packs again, thus Cane wouldn't do that.

Right now, Howling Wolf pack and Blue Moon pack merged into one area, which they called the capital city, while Crystal Moon pack would be the central of their business because they had the advantage of the harbor.

And the second pack would be Celestial Moon pack, but now they would call it as North pack. Cezi would lead a few warriors there and some family to build a new pack.

Just like before, they needed a strong defense against monster attack from the Untouched Land.

Meanwhile, the land between the south and the north would welcome the merchant from Karam continent, people from Andelus Continent and many more.

To increase their revenue, Cane and Lou played with the price of the magic stones and made a deal with the merchant, since the only source of magic stone was this continent. The king and the merchant worked well together, showing their cunning side without any scrupulous.

Lou was Cane's advisor now, though the former said he did this for Iris, but he rather enjoyed his new position, feeling great when he managed to close deals and fooled the merchant from Karam continent.

"The earliest ship to Andelus continent is next week and we will take it," Abby informed Iris and Cane. They had discussed this matter before and they agreed Cedric would come with Abby. She needed his support more in the Holy Kingdom to control the people and put real power into her status.

Without the elders and Rei, it would be a little bit easier.

More so, Iris had a lot of people, who helped her here, three of her protectors were here with her, thus Cedric was not really needed to stay.

"I see," Iris mumbled. She felt a little bit sad, because she grew fond of her. Only if they didn't start their relationship on a bad note, they could be best friend. Well, Abby was her aunt actually. "I hope everything went well for you."

"Thank you," Abby stood up and she hugged Iris. www.NoVeLWôrm.cOm

Iris was surprised, but she hugged her back. She liked this end. There was no animosity between them and she really hoped, Abby would make a great Serafim. She knew she would be able to achieve that. She was born for that. www.NoVeLWôrm.cOm

She might be frail, but she was stubborn and had this strong determination.

Later that night Iris and Cane put their babies to sleep, Lil Thing was also sleeping on its warm carpet, curling itself close to the cribs, after that the two of them took this time to stroll in the garden when Iris's stomach growled.

"Hungry?" Cane kissed her cheek, smiling at her red face. He always loved this side of her.

"You could hear that?" She was sure the sound was not that loud. "As loud as a dragon's roar."

Iris hit his arm playfully for that comment. "I will ask someone to make something for me," she said, but before she could leave, Cane stopped her. www.NoVeLWôrm.cOm

"What do you want? I will make it for you."

Iris pressed her lips to stop herself from smiling. "It will be my honor if the king wanted to cook something for me. I would love to eat anything that your highness made."

Cane pulled her and tasted those sweet words that came from her lips. "It will be my honor to take care my mate, the mother of my children."

Cane ordered all the guards to step back, while the two of them headed to the kitchen, having their own late night dinner.

"I will get the drink!" Iris said when she saw Cane almost finished with their meals.

"Hm."

Iris left the kitchen, but not long after someone entered and her scent made Cane growled dangerously. There, Laluna was standing, looking so pitiful.

"You shouldn't have done this. You tricked me. You shouldn't have the coronation." Laluna started to cry. "If you really wanted to be the king, you can be with me and we can rule together."

Laluna must have gone insane from all of her own expectation to think it was right for her to say something like that. "Vemion deserved a father, he is the heir to the throne, but you snatched it away!"

Laluna rushed toward Cane, she attempted to hug him, to show how much he had hurt her.

However, all of sudden she felt this pain in her chest and dropped to the ground, panting heavily, she felt like someone just squeezed her heart ruthlessly and when she lifted her head, she saw Iris walked into the room.

The queen spared a disdainful glance at her and walked toward her king.

"Don't you dare to touch him," Iris growled dangerously. "He is mine."

The queen's voice was very possessive, as she grabbed Cane's collar and pulled him down, so she could kiss him. Iris bit his lip, annoyed because he didn't say anything to this insane woman, while her mate enjoyed her aggressiveness.

"You are so adorable when you were jealous," Cane said against her lips.

"You will find me fabulous if I accidentally killed her."

"Please do."

Hi, author here. Firstly, I want to thank you for supporting this story. I truly appreciate all the comment (I read them all even when I didn't reply) and all of your support in any form you can show me.

And just like every beginning, we come to the end of the story. (what a wonderful journey that I have with you all!) Secondly, I want to apologize for all the inconvenience throughout the story. (Personally, I am not that cruel. Lil Thing is my animal spirit.) www.NoVeLWôrm.cOm

The story after this will be Bonus Chapters and Side Stories of each character. There is nothing major will happen, since the main story has come to end. I will reduce it to one chapter a day.

In the bonus chapter, I will focus on Iris and Cane little family, while the Side Stories will focus on each side character (their back story before the main story or their story after this war. Since, I can't write them and squeeze their stories into the main plot.)

I hope you enjoy these chapters. (Treat this as a therapy and my apology for the trauma. ^^)

Last but not least, please support my new story if you like my imagination of werewolf story: Replacement Bride of the Alpha From the North.

Thank you so much from the bottom of my heart.