555 THE AFTERMATH

Ever since what happened in the mountain and how Lu disclosed his ability to control the monster and it was actually him, who had created the monster attack in the palace, though the lycan was adamant it was not him, who had instigated it, Cane had been trying to practice with his ability.

But, every time he did it, black wisp managed to emerge from him, since this ability belonged to the lycan, thus it was only right for this creature to come along when he tried to use it, which didn't help if they were attacked by monsters and were surrounded by people, who was still not aware that Cane was the lycan.

However, Cane was willing to risk it when he watched in horror Iris was in dire situation and Lil Thing wouldn't last for long.

Yet, there was something that obstructed him, as if there was a shield around the monsters that didn't let him to control them. They were out of control, as though there was another power that had controlled them first and the lycan's ability couldn't intervene with that.

It shouldn't be a surprise if Cane took some time to analyze the situation and the monsters'strange behavior or how hard it was for the warriors to kill them off, as if they had grownvery strong.

But, Cane didn't have time and he didn't use his mind when he decided to reveal himself as the lycan, once he saw the carriage Iris was in almost fell off the cliff.

He couldn't reach for the monster and he was so close to let Lu took over his body, as it was the best chance to save Iris, once he caught the sight of another horde of monster that was about to join the fray. Black wisp started to exude from his body, but before Cane could surrender completely to the lycan, the carriage exploded and everything happened so fast.

As of now, Iris was sitting behind Lil Thing and headed toward the heart of the battle, which made Cane lost his cool.

However, Iris seemed to know what she was doing and what to do to save this chaotic situation...

Sliding down from behind the white bear's body, she used Lil Thing to support her body when she casted white light from her palms.

"STOP!" Iris roared on the top of her lungs and strangely enough, the monsters stopped their attack and stood still, this was the same affect like when Lu controlled them. They listened to what she was ordering them to do.

It was not only Lu, who could control the monster, but Iris also? Only then, Cane could feel it, the obstruction that didn't allow him to control these monsters disappeared. He could feel them again.

But, it was not necessary now, because once Iris commanded those monsters to stop, the werewolves warriors immediately killed them off. Without the influence of the black magic, it was pretty easy to take them down, especially when they didn't fight back.

This phenomenon was simply too unbelievable for them to comprehend, but they didn't have time to think about that, as they needed to eliminate the danger first.

Once all the monsters had been killed and the putrid smell of blood filled the air, Iris couldn't hold it any longer. She was losing so much blood and was badly injured, not to mention she exhausted her power as well, thus once the last monster was killed, her body collapsed and Lil Thing was there to catch her fall.

The pain disappeared once she was no longer in tune with this world...

Iris felt her body was so cold when she was going in and out of her consciousness, she felt her ears were ringing painfully, there were a lot of people talking around her, but she couldn't string a sentence from them. The only comforting thing was the sound of Cane's dark voice, it filled with panic and helplessness.

Iris didn't like the sound of it, she wanted to open her eyes and hug him, telling him not to worry, but she could barely open her eyes before she fell unconscious once again.

It was not sure how long she had been in this state, but when she finally had enough strength to open her eyes, she was already in a warm and comfortable bedroom with fire lit up in the fireplace and the lizard curled its body next to her head.

Iris let out a whimper, because her body felt so uncomfortably weak and even though the pain almost didn't exist, but she was so drowsy and her whole body felt like jelly.

She heard a movement and someone talked quickly in low voice in the distance and knew immediately it was Cane. She recognized the way he walked and the sight of him eased her discomfort a little bit.

Cane immediately sat down on the edge of the bed and held her hand.

"How are you feeling?" Cane asked, he caressed her cheek and held her hand. His eyes left no room to hide.

"Exhausted and weak..." Iris replied in small voice. The lizard beside her head lifted its head and blinked at her.

Cane extended his hand and caressed her cheek. He had no words to say, but from the look of it, you could tell how distraught he was. He became even more callous now.

"How long?" Iris asked again when Cane didn't say anything and only stare at her.

"Four days." His voice was so grim. Those were the worst four days. It had been a while since Iris lost her consciousness for that long. Her health was so great recently and now it happened.

"Oh..." No wonder she felt so tired and hungry. "Are we in the Silver River pack already?"

"Yes."

Not long after, Grace entered the bedroom and sat down next to her. She checked her pulse and said something about how her vital was normal but she needed a lot of rest, while Cane held Iris's other hand, he said nothing.

He looked like a calm and cold river, but no one knew the stream beneath it.

"The situation in this continent is not right, we need to leave, Abby." Liam rested his hand on the hilt of his sword. He had sneaked into the Serafim's room in the middle of the night to persuade her. "You don't need to meet with the alpha from the Red Claw pack. I don't think he is trustworthy. The king is dead and from what I heard, the man on the throne is not a good person. Rumor said, he used black magic."

"He was framed. He was the one, who contacted us."

"There is no proof he was not using black magic and tried to lure us here. There must be a hidden motive."

Abby sat down on her bed, she was contemplating her next words. She knew how much Liam was worried about her. "No, Liam. We need to stay. That's the more reason for us to stay here. We need the magic stone for our magic user. If something went wrong here, the supply for the magic stone for our people could be cut off. The magic users rely heavily on the magic stones."

And the Red Claw pack was one of the packs that provided magic stone, aside from the Howling Wolf pack.

Currently, they were in the Winter Moon pack, alpha Dax, the alpha of the pack, was the first person, who greeted them once their ship anchored. From him, they learned about what was going on in this continent and how the power had divided because of the death of the king.

They couldn't receive any news, while they were sailing, more so because the Holly Kingdom had never intervened with the shifters, aside from their deal with the magic stone, thus they didn't have people in this continent to inform them about the shift of power during such period of time.

"The need is mutual, Abby. The magic stone trade between two continents will still continue," Liam emphasized this. He knew this was the excuse Abby used to intervene, though this was not her strong reason why she wanted to stay and finish her duty, especially with the black magic involved.

As a Serafim, Abby wanted to prove herself. She had been sick for so long and her health was not that great, thus bad rumor about her started to spread that she was the weakest Serafim in history. Liam knew how much it hurt her, since she had never accomplished anything.

But, this was a different problem.

"The shift er has no use of magic stone and thistrade is their biggest source of income."

"It will still affect the trade," Abby said adamantly.

Liam sighed and then approached her, she had this look, whenever she was being stubborn and no one could change her mind.

"Abby, you don't need to do this to prove yourself. You are enough. You are chosen to be the Serafim for a reason."

Abby pressed her lips into thin line when she heard that. She knew Liam would be able to see through her. "I chose to stay and we will stay. We will meet with alpha Colter tomorrow."

Because of the location between the Winter Moon pack and Red Cla w pack, it took so long for alpha Colter to be able to cross the border and meet with the Serafim. He would come with his beta, Koda, who was also the great grandfather of the crown prince.

Unfortunately, Red Claw pack lost the battle.

556 PROVING THEIR POINT

If the Red Cla w pack managed to support the baby to his given position, Koda must be the regent now until the baby came to age to take over the throne.

"This whole situation is so fishy, Abby." Liam grew frustrated. In the public, there was no way he would voice out his displeasure with her decision, as her protector, his only duty was to serve, obey and protect her.

However, thing between them was more than that. He cared deeply for her, not only because of a duty as the Holy knight. 1

"I know. That's why we need to know more aboutit. The activity of black magic becomes more and more active nowadays, you know that as well, Liam. This is my duty to eradicate it."

"Abby..."

"I don't want to hear any more protest, Liam. Your duty is to protect me, not to advise me," Abby said sternly and it seemed, her words had hurt the knight, as his body stiffened and his voice became a little bit cold.

"Apologize for overstepping my station, Serafim. I will take my leave. Have a good rest."

After saying that, Liam turned around and Abby felt the pang in her heart. She hated it when she hurt him and not listened to him.

They should be in the capital city, but because of the recent power struggle, it was hard to say whether this new king was a safe option, even though prince Alan was the person, who had informed them about the activity of the black magic in this continent, but rumor said it he got involved with black magic too.

More so, alpha Dax had disclosed about lady Cyan and how she was the dark witch, who had killed the previous king and Alan was her son.

Abby curled her body, hugging herself while thinking about the meeting with alpha Colter tomorrow. From the letter she received, there was something very important that needed to be discussed in person, that's why the alpha and a few of his people took the risk to cross the border to meet her in person.

Since the day of their attack, Cane had never left Iris's side, he sent Ethan to lead a few warriors to learn the situation in the Silver River pack and reported it back to him.

Though this was not efficient to do this and he used to inspect everything on his own, but he couldn't bring himself to go out, until Iris was in a good condition and he was sure she was out of danger.

It was not that Iris was in a life threatening condition, since Grace herself said she only needed to rest, but in Cane's eyes she was. She looked so pale and lethargic, and most of the time, she would sleep without moving at all.

In his fear, Cane would put his finger under her nose and only could feel slightly relief when he could feel her warm breath, or he would place his palm over her chest and felt her heartbeat.

"You can control monster?" Cane asked on the fourth day when Iris looked a little bit better and she could hold a long conversation.

"I did it out of impulse." Iris bit her spoon and thought about that. "I think have done it before..."

She indeed had commanded the monsters to stop out of impulse. She felt like she had done this before and when she thought about it, she remembered, it was when she saved Ania when they were in the Blue Moon pack's mines and there was a monster attack.

"I didn't realize it at that time that I can make them stop, but to think about it again... I think I did it when there was a monster attack in the palace too when Lou saved me."

Cane scoffed derisively when he heard that. If Lu refused to admit he was the one, who had summoned the monsters in the palace, even though the lycan said proudly that he was the one who escalated the situation, there was no other people, who could do that aside from Lou, especially when the merchant was actually a magic user too.

And when Cane thought what kind of benefit the merchant would get, he actually got a lot of benefit from the incident.

However, Cane was not in the mood to bring him in this conversation.

"How can you do it?" Cane emphasized the main topic.

"I don't know, it just happened. Oh, I think you couldn't do it because those monsters were controlled by black magic. That's why you feel the obstruction."

"I guessed as much." Cane nodded.

Since Iris could purify the black magic, so it was possible for her to take the control back. But, until now they were still not sure, whether she purified the black magic or absorbed it...

Iris glanced at Cane, she put her spoon down, feeling so full. She ate too much, but he always said she had not eaten enough. Well, compared to him, the amount of food she ate was insignificant. "I think it will be the same feeling when you control the monster."

"I don't think so." In Cane's case, he had exerted his effort to take control of the lycan's ability, but when Iris did that, she did it effortlessly.

However, when Cane tried to communicate with the lycan. This cursed creature actually shut him off, he refused to talk, but Cane could feel his anger to see Iris was hurt.

"Do you think the ability of the first Serafim and the lycan to control the monster is somehow related?"

"Probably," Cane replied. He forked a piece of meat and placed it on her lips for her to eat it. "I am glad you have this ability, so no monster will hurt you in the future." Cane's eyes then filled with amusement when he remembered another thing. "And no shifter will be a bother for you if they still want to live."

Iris chuckled. "You make it sound like I am a badass!"

"Finish your meal," Cane said, he caressed her head. "I will leave for a while this afternoon." He had been by Iris's side for days and the matter in the Silver River pack fell so behind, it couldn't be delayed anymore.

"I am full," Iris whimpered. "You have not yet told me about how the situation in the Silver River pack."

They had arrived for almost a week, but because of Iris's condition, she needed to recover and rest inside the bedroom, thus aside from this room, she had never been anywhere and heard anything about the matter at hand, since Cane refused to talk about it with an excuse she needed to rest.

"Later." Cane leaned over and kissed her lips, his method to distract her and make her stop talking. Who said her mate was timid? She could be so bold whenever they were alone...

Because Cane refused to tell her about what was going on, Iris had a way to get a little bit of information about what the situation they were in at this moment.

However, Aliana seemed to focus on a different matter.

"Luna! You can control monster?!" Aliana looked excited when she came to bring her lunch. All this time, no one was allowed to enter the room, aside from Grace, as she needed to check her condition from time to time. The food would be delivered to the door and the alpha would get it.

Therefore, this was the first time for Aliana to talk and meet with Iris in person after the incident on their way to the Silver River pack.

"How can you do that?! That's awesome! All the warriors have been talking about it!" Aliana looked so enthusiastic, as she pulled a chair and sat down, eager to listen more about Iris's explanation. "When did you realize you can control the monster?"

"It's not that I can control them as I like..." Iris grimaced.

However, Aliana waved her hands impatiently. "A handful warrior said it's only a great timing and the monsters were only shocked when you screamed for them to stop, thus they didn't move, but that's crap is nonsense. All of us witnessed how the monsters stopped moving when you commanded them to do so."

Those warriors were the warriors, who still held grudge against Iris. It was well known that the provocation from the royal warriors when they stayed in their pack had affected them so much, it brought back unpleasant memories and incited their hatred toward her again.

"Eron and Dyne have been bragged about it and will tell anyone, who wants to listen about how awesome to have you as the luna." Aliana grinned when she saw how Iris's expression turned into horror when she heard that. She didn't like to be the center of the attention and the two warriors simply dragged her to be one.

"I think I need to have a talk with the two of them..." Iris muttered under her breath, she had been with the two of them long enough to know that they could go overboard with their dramatic story.

Aliana chuckled when she heard that. "Don't be too harsh on them, luna. They are so happy to prove it to everyone that you deserve your title and how good you are." Of course, Dyne and Eron were well aware about the hatred that was directed toward Iris from their fellow warriors and they did this to prove their point of how wrong it was for them to hate her.
