

Arabella 1571

Chapter 1571

They stood out among the couples with such an effortless grace.

Since the moment they took the stage, David had been keeping an eye on them. Although he had long accepted Romeo as his future brother-in-law, he never imagined that he'd play the role of a matchmaker and witness a proposal, pouring out his blessings.

"How about we give the gentleman a minute to make his proposal, folks?" David's voice filled the room through the microphone. "And for the guys in the crowd, now's your chance to call that special lady and confess your love."

The audience erupted in cheers once again.

David made a shushing gesture, and silence fell over the room once more.

With a gentlemanly wave, he signaled for the men to start their declarations of love as a giant screen began a 60-second countdown.

Each man on stage took a knee, slowly expressing their love to the women before them.

Romeo was no exception. He took Arabella's hands in his and knelt down, his voice tender and sincere, "Bella, from the moment I saw you, you've taken root in my heart. In this lifetime, I want no one but you. Even though we're already promised to each other, I still want to propose properly. Marry me. I want to give you a lifetime of happiness and protection, to be with you forever, openly and honorably, caring for you, being with you, protecting you. Before coming to this concert, I found out about the proposal segment, so I designed a ring especially for you."

opened it to reveal a

Romeo urged, his expression

David cooed at the women, "Ladies in the audience, do you wish to marry in unison,

merely smiled, gazing at the man

Romeo grew more anxious.

the men hear your hearts," David consent, Arabella also spoke up, her beautiful lips forming the words Romeo longed to hear his for, fellas? Put the Romeo slipped the diamond ring onto Arabella's finger, they both removed their masks, and shared a kiss filled of couples, each locked in a sing his third song, "Romance," and even the couples in the audience couldn't resist venue was awash with warmth petals continued to flutter

As David finished the chorus, some couples slowly pulled apart, their eyes brimming with sweetness and joy.

They sang along with David, dreaming of their happy futures together.

When the song ended, David announced with a smile, "Tonight, as your matchmaker, how about I treat everyone to wedding candies? I'm thrilled to witness such an important moment in my fans' lives and wish all of you who receive these treats a future filled with happiness, adventure, and soaring success."

Suddenly, the sky rained down countless foam heart-shaped boxes in pink, light blue, and all sorts of colors.

The fans screamed with delight, reaching out to catch them.

These foam hearts were soft to the touch, and inside each was a pair of wedding candies.

The newly engaged couples on stage also received envelopes from the staff, filled with surprise and joy at the unexpected red packets.

Some opened them on the spot to find two concert tickets with no expiration date, meaning they could attend any of David's future concerts.

No more tickets needed.