

Arabella 421

Chapter 421

The white curtains in the bedroom fluttered with the wind, just like a beautiful scene from a movie. She picked up her phone, only to find a new order worth a whopping billion for a straightforward task, to be kinder to the people around her.

She was puzzled. What was going on? Did the person place the order by mistake? Was she really going to get a billion for being a little nicer to people? Was this some sick joke? But the money was already transferred into her account, and the task was automatically activated.

Sighing, she opened the chat box and sent a question mark. After that, she got up to tidy up and headed downstairs.

Romeo stood by the huge floor-to-ceiling window, tall and straight. He held a glass of red wine and stared at the scenery outside, deep in thought.

“Didn’t you take a nap?” Arabella thought Romeo would rest after wrapping up his work. But there he was, standing by the window. Was he dealing with some tricky issue?

“Are you awake? Romeo turned around, placed the wine glass on the waiter’s tray, and walked towards Arabella.

He gently touched her cheek, gave her a peck, and asked, “Did you stay up late again last night?”

“No.”

items on the garden table, he couldn’t help but steal another glance at Arabella. Ms. Bella looked even more stunning than the last time he saw her. Perhaps it was because she just woke up, her eyes sparkling like stars in the sky. Mr. McMillian was indeed lucky to have her as his better

At night, David sat on the swing in the garden, his gaze fixed on the direction of the front gate. It was getting late, and Bella hadn't come home yet. Had she been taken somewhere by Romeo? He wanted to call Romeo but held back. They were probably almost home.

Edith, while massaging Louisa's shoulders, laughed and said, "David seems to be anxiously waiting for Bella's return."

"Let him wait, and he should have come home earlier to look after Bella, Louisa said.

"I heard David was on a variety show. He's super busy and can't get away." Edith explained.

"So, for him, making money is more important than looking after Bella?" Louisa retorted.

Many girls' dreams of dating Mr. McMillian were about to drain!

Before entering the theatre, Romeo saw other girls' boyfriends buying popcorn and drinks, so he leaned in and asked Arabella, "What do you fancy to drink?"

Arabella wanted to say that the drinks at the cinema could have been better, but remembered that this was Romeo's cinema. So, she casually said, "Orange juice, I guess."

"Alright, wait here." This was the first time Romeo used a vending machine. He glanced over the instructions and quickly bought drinks, popcorn, and chips. Other girls, seeing him buying so much, were green with envy. Damn, other people's boyfriends were not only good-looking but also generous! Arabella saw him carrying a lot of stuff and offered, "Let me help you."

“You can hold onto me instead.”

He could have asked for a bag for the snacks, but he wanted Arabella to hold onto him, so he played a little trick.

Arabella saw through his intentions but didn't say anything. One of her hands wrapped around his arm. Who knew this guy was such a schemer? After getting their tickets checked, they walked into Theatre 1. Romeo found two middle seats, put down their stuff, and helped her lower her seat. After a while, the movie started.

Romeo held her with one hand and fed her drinks and snacks with the other..

“Looks like you know my family?” The guy said proudly, “Right on, I'm Carson's only son, Zack Porter. People call me club prince!”

Arabella thought to herself, his nickname didn't sound that cool.

“You know my dad’s name, and then you must know how much he spoils me! There is nothing in this world that I can’t have, including people!” Arabella raised an eyebrow, indifferent, “Oh, so, if I don’t go with you today, you’re going to make trouble for us?”

“You’re pretty sharp!” Zack laughed smugly, “But, as long as you do as I say, I can let your boyfriend off the hook.”

“And if I don’t do as you say?”

“Then your boyfriend will be in trouble!” Zack said triumphantly, “Just one phone call, and I guarantee your boyfriend will have problems.”

Half an hour later.

The movie ended, and Arabella grabbed Romeo’s hand, saying, “Let’s go check it out”

Arabella took the initiative to hold his hand?

A smile spread across Romeo’s face. He tightened his grip on her hand and headed to Hall 7 with her.

Carson got to Hall 7 first Seeing his son Zack sitting on the floor with a swollen face, he rushed over, “Zack, my baby, are you okay?”

“Dad, what took you so long!” Upon seeing the dozen or so bodyguards brought by his father, Zack brimmed with confidence, wearing an expression full of arrogance. “Those security guards hit me. It was the guy from Hall 1 who told them to do it. Go in there, and get the guy in row 6, seat 15”

“Heard you’re looking for me?”

As Romeo walked into Hall 7, a few security guards, upon seeing him, finally spoke up. “Mr. McMillian, per your instructions, we’ve been keeping an eye on him. But he initiated the fight. We accidentally hurt him in self-defense.”

The founder and top dog of Allbara Investment?!

Allbara Investment was a big-name venture capital group under Solterra, and its founder, Allbara Investment, was known as the “god of investment”. Any project that she approved and invested in all turned out to be tremendous success.

A lot of small businesses had grown leaps and bounds because of their investments.

Back when he went to Allbara Investment to seek funding for a project, he had the chance to meet this female powerhouse.

He was quite a distance away, but he could see the respect that Solterra's CEO, Dylan, had for her. He was taken aback.

The outside world was unaware that the founder of Allbara Investment was actually a woman.

His dumb son actually dared to cross two of the most influential people they should never mess with.

He was almost out of breath, bending over to pay his respects, "Ms. Bennett, I didn't expect to see you here. If it wasn't for you approving our project and giving us the funding, we wouldn't be where we are today. Without Allbara Investment, there would be no Porter group."

Romeo heard, Allbara Investment? Ms. Bennett??

The only person who could make Carson grovel like that, and who had the power to approve Allbara Investment's projects.

Who else could it be but the founder of Allbara Investment?

So she was Allbara Investment?

Allbara Investment was Arabella?

Interesting.

Arabella didn't expect to reveal two of her identities in one day, and she was momentarily speechless.

"Ms. Bennett, you're the benefactor of the Porter group. My son actually dared to offend you." Carson turned around, grabbed his son's ear, and brought him to Arabella, kicking him down onto his knees.

"How many other identities do you have that I don't know about?" Romeo asked, looking down at the little girl beside him.

"Not many."

So did that mean there were still more?

Romeo's gaze softened. He hadn't expected her to have so many identities. What had she gone through to become so strong?

"Were the Murphys mean to you?" Romeo seemed to have guessed something and suddenly asked.

"Indeed they weren't the kindest."

"You must have had a tough time when you were little," As Romeo mentioned this, he halted his steps and couldn't help but hold her tightly.

Arabella was suddenly embraced by him, smelling the fresh scent from his body. A wave of warmth enveloped her, thawing her icy heart bit by bit. "I'll be here for you from now on," Romeo raised her face, looking at her tenderly. "If you ever feel wronged, tell me. Don't bottle it up, okay?"

David glanced at his watch. Holy smokes, it was late. Didn't Romeo know the meaning of time?

His little sister was still just a kid, why was she coming home so late?

As the clock struck nine, Romeo's car suddenly pulled up in front of the villa. David saw it and immediately rushed over with joy..

His little sister was home. She was finally back.

As soon as Arabella got out of the car, she saw David looking at her with anticipation and warmly calling her Bella.

She was a bit puzzled, what was he expecting? Could it be?

“I didn’t bring you any late–night snacks.” Arabella stated honestly.

“No worries, I’m not hungry. I don’t eat late–night snacks.” David asked with a smiling face, “Did you have fun today?” “Very fun.”

“Were you bullied by anyone?”

“No.”

“You really don’t need to work your butt off, I’m loaded.” After saying this, Arabella added, “I’ve got more than enough.”

“Bella, listen to me, sweetheart. Money you can’t use should be socked away. Life’s a long haul and there will always be expenses. It’s always good to be prepared.” David added, patting her head with a grin, “I don’t feel worn out at all. Don’t worry about me.”

As they stepped through the grand entrance of Reflections Villa, Arabella took notice of David’s dapper outfit. “You look really sharp today,” she commented.

“Really? You like it, Bella? Then I’ll wear it just for you every day.”

Arabella was speechless. That was not necessary.

She had already given her money several times before.

"I've been throwing chump change at you before, but today your bank card's got no limit. Just buy what ever you fancy, don't sweat it."

"Mum, why are you copying me?" David, who was munching on snacks, quickly looked up. "Are you trying to outshine me? Do you know how hard it was for me to win Bella's heart?"

"So, only you can shower Bella with gifts, and I can't?" Louisa insisted she accept. "Just take it. I didn't bring it out earlier because Serena was there, and I didn't want her to think I was playing favorites."

Upon hearing this, Serena upstairs clenched her fists in frustration. How could this be fair? Wasn't this blatant favoritism?

"Just take it. No more refusals. Louisa wouldn't let her return the card. Holding her hand, she said, "Your dad told me you aced the test, so we have to celebrate. Your grandparents aren't well yet, and your other grandparents and uncles are abroad. We don't want to invite those distant relatives, so we're thinking of having dinner at Romeo's place and introducing you to your uncle."
