Chapter 511

But people can't just look down on everyone just because she had some talent! Sending people off to the loony bin liked it's nothing, that's way too much, man!

Not far off, Mrs. Panter was all bummed out cause she can't get close to Olga. She spied the scene unfolding and made a beeline for Arabella.

"You frivolous girl! My son is about to engage to Yoli, and you're still here, sticking like glue? And in front of my future daughter-in-law? How can you be so shameless?"

Even though Arabella was a high-profile piano maestro, Mrs. Panter reckoned that even the best maestro can't hold a candle to the property the Murphy family just bought for a fortune!

In terms of benefits, Yolanda still had the upper hand!

Yolanda was taken aback by the word "daughter-in-law". She didn't expect Mrs. Panter to publicly acknowledge her status. She felt a sense of elevation. "Me? Bothering your son?" Arabella found this amusing. "Is your vision impaired, or is something wrong?" She pointed at her head. "Do you need me to book an appointment with a doctor? Does your family have some sort of special advantage? Or is the Panter family in line for royal status? You're so full of yourselves, and I thought you were royalty."

Chapter 512

Now, Mr. Panter and Attlee Murphy can't sit still and come at once. "Ms. Archer, who are you?"

"You keep saying all kinds of bad things about my niece in front of me, and you still bully my niece here? You really think I'm easy to bully!"

Hearing this, the crowd was immediately shocked.

Niece? Arabella was Erlinda's niece?

How was that possible? Wasn't Erlinda still unmarried?

A person who didn't even have a spouse, where can she get a niece?

Could it be that she treated other people's children as nieces?

The Panter family and the Murphy family were shocked.

"I remember I don't know you well. I didn't invite you to dinner tonight, did I?"

As soon as Erlinda's voice fell, a person came out of the crowd and said respectfully, "I'm sorry, Ms. Archer, I invited them."

"There seems to be something wrong with your vision. I guess your work is not very good either. If I don't see your resignation letter tomorrow morning, I will make you unable to stand in this industry!"

Hearing this, the man was so scared that his legs went soft. "Ms. Archer."

"Let's go!"

"Sure." The man didn't expect to lose his job because of it, and his eyes were full of resentment when he looked at the Panter family and the Murphy family!

Erlinda looked at the Panter family and the Murphy family coldly. "I have invited my niece for three years, and she finally came to my dinner party, and you self-righteous people messed her up."

"Ms. Archer,

Arabella was a bit taken aback and asked, “What brings you here?”

If I hadn’t shown up, I wouldn’t have known someone was messing with you.” Romeo gently patted her head, then glared at Mr. Panter, “Mr Panter, are you going to discipline your kid, or should I do the honors?”

At those words, Mr. Panter nearly lost his legs from fear and apologized profusely, “This is just a minor issue; no need to bother Mr. McMillian. Seeing the affectionate interaction between Romeo and Arabella, it was clear as day they were a couple.

Knowing his son messed up big time, Mr. Panter was filled with regret. But all he could do was wipe the sweat from his forehead and face his good–for–nothing son.

Either Mr. Panter kept teaching him a lesson with the bat, or Ms. Archer stepped in. If Zachary got hurt, he can't blame them.

Mrs. Panter was heartbroken but can't stop it. After all, her son had pissed off three families today!

Each of these families was seriously heavy-duty!

He can only bear the pain!

Mr. Panter closed his eyes, picked up the bat, and kept walloping Zachary.

"You ungrateful brat, you've lost face for the Panter family." He went on for a while.

"Mr. Panter, knock it off." Erlinda repeatedly said, "The bat isn't doing much good. Let's get Mr. Panter something else."

“Which hand of yours touched Arabella?”

Zachary’s voice trembled as he watched his father approaching step by step, “Dad, I won’t do it again.”

“I asked which hand touched Arabella!”

“Dad!” Zachary trembled in fear, tears streaming down his face.

Soon after, a scream echoed from the garden.

Romeo covered Arabella’s eyes, speaking softly, “Don’t look.”

The sight was too bloody.

"Absolutely, the event was a smashing success. If anyone asks tomorrow, I'll tell them the donation segment tonight was unforgettable."

"Indeed, the Murphy family are as tight as a drum, and I must spread the word about this."

"Nothing else noteworthy happened, right?"

"My memory is stuck at the donation part."

On the other side.

The house where Attlee used to live had been sold.

Right next to the old house was a villa owned by an old lady.

Before Olga went to a charity dinner, she had the nanny at home pick the lock of the old lady’s villa and moved in directly.

Otherwise, it’s not sustainable for their family of three and four or five nannies to live in a hotel every day!

Not long after the four or five nannies moved into the new house, a plainly dressed woman suddenly showed up at the villa where Attlee used to live. When she found out Attlee had moved next door, she found the villa next door.

One of the nannies frowned immediately when she saw her and said, “You again? Didn’t I tell you not to come here?”

Olga rolled her eyes. She thought she was going to get something special, but instead, she got a bunch of nonsense!

“I don’t need this; take it back!” Yolanda, holding Olga’s hand, was about to go inside.

“Yoli!” Yvonne hurriedly stopped her, watching her daughter’s unfamiliar back. Tears flashed in her eyes.

“This might be the last time I come to see you, and I might not show up again. Just take it, and then I’ll leave!”

This might be the best wedding gift she could give to her former daughter.

"Ma'am, hold on a second. I'll check if there's a first aid kit in the old lady's room."

This villa was never really theirs!

After a while, the nanny finally found a first aid kit, and luckily, some of the medicine was still good.

Attlee, reeling from the pain, slumped on the couch while the nanny cleaned his wounds, "Easy, easy, oh my God, my back!"

"Mom, how could Arabella possibly be Kenneth and Louisa's biological daughter? And how could she be Romeo's fiancée? She's also recognized as Mr. Rollins' granddaughter and Ms. Archer's niece."

“Who told you this? Is it true? Did you ask for clarification?” Olga asked hopefully, “Why haven’t we heard of this before?”

“All the big companies knew about this, so the bidders this time are all top-tier companies. They’ve got the dough, so even if they shelf the property for five years after buying it, it won’t affect their cash flow.”

But they just can’t do that!

They’ve borrowed a ton of money, including bank loans and personal loans, even sold some stuff, and finally scraped together $1.2 billion!

They originally planned to flip the property right after buying it, and they had no plans to hold onto it for long!

“The day I won the bid, the documents I signed already mentioned this situation.” Attlee was full of regret.
