Chapter 873

"That's it then.' Louisa snapped, her anger bubbling over. "They dare to bully my daughter in my house! Gloria, where is Erik? Fetch him for me at once!"

"Right away."

Upon hearing the summons, Erik hurried over. When he saw both Martha and Serena standing off to the side, their expressions clearly disturbed, he turned to Louisa. Her face was etched with a deep annoyance. "Madam, what seemed to be the problem?"

"Set up a higher requirement when you are hiring in the future.

Don't let just anyone in!" Louisa chided. "Bella came back home after such hardship. Kenneth and I couldn't bear to raise our voices at her. But these two servants dare to show attitude in front of my daughter!"

Erik glanced at Arabella and then at the servants behind her. It couldn't be Edith and her group, could it?

Surely not Martha?

He looked at Martha, who shook her head slightly. Erik let out a silent sigh of relief.

"Madam, I am unsure which two servants have upset Ms. Bella. I shall take care of them immediately."

"By the time you do that, the fried chicken will have gone cold! I don't even know how you manage this household! If that happened again, you won't be managing anything!"

Hearing this, Erik quickly lowered his head. "Madam, I apologize. I assure you that will not happen again!"

"Later, you are to call a meeting. Make sure everyone knew their place. If anyone is unhappy, they can pack their bags and leave immediately!"

"Yes, Madam." Erik maintained his bow, surprised at the intensity of Louisa's anger.

"I will go and settle this. Bella, you go and have breakfast. Don't be upset. I will make sure they pay."

"Mom, don't let this upset you."

"My sweet child, you are so wronged but still worry about me."

Louisa's heart ached even more at Arabella's words.

Seeing her storm off, Martha helped Serena back to her room. Both of them were furious.

That damned Arabella was getting more and more in the way!

"Martha, did you hear? Mom said that Arabella is her precious daughter." Serena balled her fists in frustration. Her mother was supposed to be fair, but it was clear where her favoritism lay.

"That was exactly why I told you to use Clark's card and buy more things. If the love is gone, at least the money is still there!"

Serena finally understood Martha's intentions. Martha was the only one who truly cared for her in this house, more than her own mother ever did!

"Arabella is spending more and more time with the lady of the house. It's only natural that she would favor her. After all, she is their real daughter."

Martha's words felt like a knife to Serena's heart.

"But the brothers haven't spent much time with Arabella, Serena.

You need to seize this opportunity!"

Play the affection card and get the brothers to buy things.

"Soon, when Clark wakes up, go find him." Martha whispered something else into Serena's ear.

Meanwhile.

Edith and Gloria couldn't stop thanking Arabella. Arabella replied quietly, "There's no need to thank me. It's my fault that you were treated poorly."

"Ms. Bella, I'm not upset! Seeing Debby and Daisy leave, I feel so relieved, so happy!" Gloria couldn't help but break into a smile.

Doris also laughed. "This is the first time I've seen the lady of the house get so angry. It shows how important Ms. Bella is to her. I'm envious of your bond with her. I lost my mother when I was very young."

Her expression darkened.

Gloria added, "After this incident, I don't think Martha will dare to step out of line. Ms. Bella, we were lucky you were here today!"
