

Arabella 89

Chapter 89

After dinner, Phillip took Bella on a tour around, finally reaching the top floor for a distant view.

“Now it’s getting dark and you can’t see the view very clearly. But during the day, you can see beautiful f lowers, streams, and distant mountains. Bella, you should definitely come and check it out when you have the time.” Phillip said.

“Sure.” Bella glanced at the time, her voice gentle, “It’s getting late, I should head back.

“Don’t leave.” Phillip was a bit reluctant, “Can you stay a bit longer?”

“I’ll come to see you next time.” Arabella said.

Seeing Bella about to leave, Phillip quickly signaled to his butler, Brodie, who immediately understood hi s intentions and discreetly ordered the servants to prepare.

Just as Bella reached the first floor living room, led by Romeo, all the lights in the villa suddenly went out “What’s going on?” Phillip feigned ignorance, “Why is there a power outage all of a sudden?”

“Weird, we’ve lived here for years and have never encountered this situation before! Let me go check what’s wrong. Hang tight, I’ll be right back.” Brodie said, played dumb and quickly for a while.” Phillip then ordered a servant nearby, “Go find some candles and some really nice emergency look for them.” Phillip also found an excuse living room was left with villa clearly had a backup generator. So even if the power went out, there wouldn’t be complete darkness. Was the old man deliberately making a a long time and checked the time, “It’s already half

she stayed too late, her pulled her into his arms, “It’s still early. Stay with me a a long time already enough.” Romeo held her even tighter, “I was he so clingy?! He used to be

me. What if happier if he

Upstairs.

and quickly whispered, "Sir, over to him to look downstairs, "How's it substantial progress." Brodie said.