Chapter 821

Victor eventually arranged for Jameson to take Alyssa home.

Jasper pushed Newton's wheelchair toward the parking lot, with Zoe trailing behind like an annoying tag-along.

"How long do you plan to keep following me?" Jasper suddenly stopped. He did not bother to look back while he asked.

Zoe was taken by surprise. She almost collided with Jasper and stumbled awkwardly.

"Ja-Jasper, I want to accompany you in taking Grandpa home."

Zoe tried to look pitiful and said, "Grandpa just got discharged from the hospital. There must be a lot to take care of. I want to help you..."

"Help? What can you do?" Jasper asked bluntly.

"At times like these, you should hold on to Alice's hand! Despite the rumors or turmoil the Harper family stirred, you mustn't let go of her hand!"

Jasper was against the idea of letting that occur, and he was also not inclined to stand by and observe Alyssa being with Jameson without the capacity to intervene.

“Grandpa, I did say those things, and I did do those things. You can hit me.”

Jasper tightened his fists, his eyes turning red.

“Hit me and scold me as much as you want, then rest early. It’s time to let go of everything between me and Alyssa.”

“Let go? You want me to let go? Then what about you? Are you going to marry that improper girl from the Harper family?”

Newton’s head buzzed with anger, and only with Ben’s support did he manage to stand steadily.

"Mr. Jasper! Wait!" Ben called out to him.

Jasper asked, "Do you have something else to say, Ben?"

"Is it really impossible for you and Ms. Alyssa anymore?"

Jasper felt a stab in his heart.

"I don't know."

“Ms. Alyssa has something on her that you don’t know.” Ben clenched his fist and struggled with the words.

Jasper turned back with a look of intense curiosity, “What is it?”

After hearing Jameson's side of the story, Alyssa couldn't help but find it unbelievable.

Setting aside Jameson's refined and elegant appearance, she doubted whether he could commit such a brutal act. 3

Even if he wanted to deal with David, given his status, he could easily find someone else to handle it. Why would he personally get involved? 1

She regained her composure and asserted firmly, "Mr. David, this is a grave matter, and you need concrete evidence. Furthermore, you should address these concerns with Uncle Victor and the authorities, not with me."

"Ms. Alyssa, you saved me. You are my benefactor! I'm not so heartless as to stand by and watch you walk into the lion's den without knowing its inhabitants!"

With anxiety and sincerity in his voice, David continued, "I know Jameson is after you, and you two appear to be close. I fear you might be blinded by him!

Alyssa remarked, "David lost a leg. He wouldn't frame you so blatantly."

Through gritted teeth, Jameson explained, "David is just a pawn for Josh. He's been involved in various underhanded activities orchestrated by Josh."

"David has accumulated numerous enemies in Solana City, and plenty of people would seize the opportunity to retaliate against him. Besides, what happened to him today, he brought upon himself."

Then, he disclosed everything that happened at the racecourse to Alyssa.

"If there's anyone with sinister motives, it's David!"

Alyssa stared at him calmly.

"Lyse, I've never given much weight to the Schmidt family. If I were to take action against them, I wouldn't resort to such crude methods. It doesn't align with my taste."

Jameson adjusted his posture, raising the coffee cup and taking a sip, projecting confidence and refinement.

Having forsaken his conscience to survive with his mother in Kontina for 15 years, he had become adept at putting on a performance, crafting each lie to be as convincing as possible.

Even in the sincerity of his love for a woman, he found himself instinctively resorting to deception time and time again.

Lies could be virtuous or malicious, but he was confident that all the lies he told Alyssa were driven by good intentions—a manifestation of his love..

Alyssa fixed her gaze on him, the sharp intensity of her eyes causing even someone as strong-willed and ruthless as Jameson to feel a twinge in his heart.

“Jimmy, honesty and kindness matter to me. It’s not about lacking trust in you. I simply hope that you maintain a sincere and compassionate heart, regardless of the future, just as you did in our childhood.

It was nighttime at Belbanks. A sleek black Maserati raced through the rear entrance of Heightsnew Villa, executing a stylish drift before smoothly coming to a stop in the backyard.

After being absent for six months, Axel emerged from the car and headed straight for Jonah, who had been patiently waiting.

“Jonah! I missed you so much!”

“Me too.”

Jonah and Axel exchanged a high-five. Jonah then looked toward the tinted car window and asked, “Is Julien's eyes were red and slightly teary as he stared at Jonah in complete astonishment.

He found himself bewildered by Jonah's twisted mindset.

If he didn't possess such striking looks, Julien might genuinely believe him to be a monster!

"Are you in cahoots with the one who kidnapped me? Are you the kidnapper?" Julien questioned with a trembling voice.

Jonah squinted, extending a gentlemanly hand toward him. 'Let me introduce myself. I am Jonah Taylor, the CEO of KS Group. It's a pleasure to meet you.

"KS...?" Julien was startled, "My aunt. It's you! Are you..."

“Exactly as you think.”

In the blink of an eye, Julien’s body tilted forward. He swiftly clutched onto Jonah’s sturdy shoulders, finding refuge in the firm hold.

Responding with quick reflexes, Jonah intervened to prevent Julien from toppling over, firmly securing him with a grip around his waist.

In that moment, the duo struck a pose reminiscent of a classic romantic scene from a soap opera, leaving Axel, who stood nearby, in utter amazement.

“Uh, sorry about that.” Julien’s cheeks blushed with embarrassment.

Having harbored a lot of pent-up anger, Julien found solace in the embrace, his frustration easing.

“No need to apologize. If anything, we should be sorry,” Jonah asserted without hesitation, effortlessly lifting Julien in a princess-style embrace.

The unexpected move by Jonah caught Julien off guard, causing his heart to pound loudly in his chest.

Alyssa held Axel intimately in the living room, and Axel also embraced his sister. If they weren't siblings, others might think they were a newlywed couple cherishing their reunion.

"Axel, you went through a lot this time," Alyssa pouted.

"It's not a big deal. I just brought someone back. It's nothing exhausting." Axel replied while gently patting her head. His eyes filled with longing and tenderness,

"As long as you'd be happy, I'd even kill him for you."

Upon hearing that, Sean was scared out of his wits, and Silas almost spat out his tea!

At this moment, Jonah descended the stairs,

“He’s asleep.”

“He’s probably exhausted. Let him rest.” Alyssa sighed.

Alyssa pondered the resemblance to the woman who bore a striking likeness to her, causing her to hesitate before uttering her thoughts.

“What’s wrong, Lyse? You’ve always been straightforward. Why are you hesitating now?” Axel asked in surprise.

That woman was no han counter. Besides, a she was far away in Mosgravia.

Even if she had a slight doubt in her heart, she couldn’t investigate it through that woman. She could only investigate through Zoe.
