Chapter 831

Silas widened his eyes; almost tempted to go over and kick his cheeky younger brother.

“I’ve simply never encountered such a handsome man before, so I was a little curious! What if he’s someone who enjoys cross-dressing?”

Alyssa sighed while holding her forehead. Silas’ imagination was indeed vivid!

Axel chimed in, “Why would any typical heterosexual guy be interested in other men?”

Silas retorted, “That just means I’m young. Only older folks lose their curiosity!”

The brothers bantered and bickered, and the night concluded.

The following day, Julien slept until noon due to jet lag.

When he finally opened his eyes, he heard a persistent knocking on the door.

Initially, he was reluctant to open it, but the person outside was relentless and patient. The knock continued without pausing..

“What’s going on? You’re so annoying!”

Julien sprung up from the bed, marched to the door, and flung it open irritably.

Julien raised his eyebrow deviously. He suddenly leaned closer to him. "Do you know that inexplicably nice people often have ill intentions?"

Jonah looked at Julien, and the latter's glistening eyes instantly peered straight into his soul.

They were extremely close. Jonah could feel his eyebrow brushing against the tip of Julien's nose.

Jonah shuddered. He stared deeply into his eyes. "What are you implying Julien's voice was not as feminine as his face. Yet, it carried a seductive and alluring tone to it.

Jonah entered his study and sat at his desk. The smile that hung on his face remained.

He stretched his neck slightly backward and tugged on his tie. He undid the buttons around his collar.

Finally, he could breathe.

A silver cross fell from the opening on his shirt. It glistened faintly under the light.

Jonah closed his eyes slowly. He took a deep breath to calm his restless heart down.

At this moment, Julien's beautiful androgynous features weren't the ones occupying his mind. It was another man—a man he thought he had forgotten yet still longed for—his old flame.

Jonah turned toward the bookshelf wall and picked two books.

The bookshelf made a "click" sound, and a secret compartment appeared to reveal an exquisite safe.

He punched the man's birthday and his own, and the safe opened.

Inside were a few framed photos, a sealed envelope, and a black velvet jewelry box in the safe.

On the table was a pair

The atmosphere turned awkward all of a sudden. There was a subtle yet palpable hint of tension.

Julien's eyes gradually widened, as if he had heard something that wounded his ego deeply. His face contorted and flushed red. After a prolonged pause, he finally exclaimed, "Huh?"

"I think you've stayed too long in Mosgravia, Dr. Lovelace. It must be difficult for you to understand Solanian now. Do you want me to explain it in Grunslanish for you?"

A sharp glint flashed in Alyssa's eyes, her smile carrying a sense of subtle pressure.

Women hardly displayed such a smile.

It exuded the arrogance of a person of great power and the unyielding confidence of a man. The sheer intimidation of it weighed so heavily that it shackled Julien's carefree spirit like a ball and chain.

"Are you saying I didn't want to take Jasper as a patient because I can't heal him? Is that what you're implying?" Julien retorted through gritted teeth.

"I don't see any other explanation." Alyssa shrugged.

Alyssa touched her chin. She didn't think it was a problem.

Julien could never have imagined that the woman he despised, standing before him, was, in fact, Dr. White-the very culprit behind his "kidnapping that had dragged his name through the mud.

Otherwise, he would rather hope the ground would open up and swallow him. He would rather die than face this utter humiliation.

"Dr. Lovelace, do you still doubt this man's character-a man Dr. White is willing to save?"

Alyssa nonchalantly asked with a smile, "Don't you think you are questioning your idol's character?"

She was guilt-tripping him. She had no choice but to use this method to deal with this conniving man.

through the mud. Why is she wasting so much effort to attend to his medical condition? Let him rot and “Just think of her as rescuing a stray dog, then. Don’t take this too personally, Silas comforted him.

“Huh? Do you think Julien will treat this bastard?”

“I think he might. Lyse always gets the job done.”

Axel's eyelashes fluttered as his heart raced.

His heart rarely beat so fast. He was reacting to the woman who couldn't keep her hands to herself.

He wasn't moved emotionally.

The woman in his arms looked exactly like Alyssa. So it felt like he was caressing his sister. He didn't know what to do as his “sister” seduced him.

“Hmm... I-I’m about to puke.” Amber’s eyes welled up in tears. Her body went limp.

She drank a lot and had too much to dance. Her stomach was churning madly. It was unbearable.”

Handsome, c-c-can you bring somewhere to puke? I can’t hold it in anymore.”

If it were another woman, Axel would have darted to the other side of the room-the further, the better.

He wouldn’t want to get puked on.

Amber was in utter disbelief. She never expected to feel such emotions for any man other than Jameson.

“The ladies’ restroom? Look at this urinal. Do you think this is the ladies’ restroom?”

Axel smiled. “I think you’re the one that needs to leave, miss.”

Amber’s face turned even redder. She lowered her head and thought of a quick escape plan. Axel, out of her expectation, grabbed her wrist and pulled her back hard.

Once again, Amber slammed into the man’s sturdy chest hard. Her scalp tingled from the collision. Her heart was racing.

Axel looked at her, a deep glint in his eyes. His lip curled slightly. It was teasingly charming. “How can you leave? You didn’t even thank me yet.”

“T-Thank you.” Amber’s eyes flickered. Her breathing was growing erratic.

“You do what I tell you to do, and you don’t have the qualifications to show off, let alone to be arrogant!”

Jameson’s eyes were full of malice. He increased the pressure of his grip on her neck as if he wanted to strangle her to death.

Sitting in the passenger seat, Carl saw that Amber was about to collapse and hurriedly pleaded for her,

Chapter 840

For a moment, Rose was both surprised and embarrassed. She tightly pressed her lips together, not daring to make a sound.

One of the foreigners challenged Silas in Furancian. "Who are you? Get out of the way! This has nothing to do with you!"

"I didn't see this, then it has nothing to do with me. But since I did, I'll take things into my own hands,"

Silas replied in fluent Furancian with a sly smile.

"Damn! This guy's Furancian was surprisingly good!" Rose was secretly surprised.

What kind of creatures were Alyssa's brothers? Not only were they hot, but they were also so intelligent.

Moreover, Silas looked somewhat sexy, speaking Furancian. Rose couldn't help but blush.
