

Chapter 912 Perform The Operation Himself

Watkins had heard about Liam's expertise in the medical field. But he wasn't quite sure how skilled Liam was.

Watkins found himself in quite a predicament at that moment. His wife's life was on the line, and this decision was crucial.

Lennox, hearing Liam's confident words, scoffed in disbelief. "How can you, so young, claim you're capable of doing such a surgery? What a joke! Do you think this surgery is an easy thing to do? If it were that simple, why would people need us doctors? Fine then, forget about it! I don't care how much money you can offer me later. I'm not treating your wife, Watkins!"

Watkins' face showed a mix of emotions, but seeing Liam's composure gave him a glimmer of hope.

Then, Liam said, "Let me see your wife and assess her condition."

After Lennox directly said no to the surgery, Watkins had no option but to put his faith in Liam. He nodded and led Liam to his wife's bedside.

Liam stood by the bed, observing Watkins' wife's face.

Her face appeared pale, and her body temperature was noticeably lower than what was typical for most people.

had no option but to put his faith in Liam. He nodded and led Liam to his wife's bedside.

Liam stood by the bed, observing Watkins' wife's face.

Her face appeared pale, and her body temperature was noticeably lower than what was typical for most people.

His wife's eyes were shut, her lips devoid of color, and she had a tired, worn-out appearance. She was clearly battling the illness.

In the past few days, Watkins had been collecting funds for his wife's treatment, and the hospital had been looking after her physical needs. Right now, her physical condition barely allowed for an operation.

Liam spoke calmly. "She's in the intermediate stage of leukemia. The best option now is a hematopoietic stem cell transplant! That quack does have some skills, though."

Watkins was astonished to see Liam quickly understand his wife's condition. He started to believe that Liam might really be able to cure his wife.

"Is everything ready for the surgery? Your wife's condition is temporarily stable, but we shouldn't wait. Let's move her to the operating room. I'll do the surgery!"

While Liam was talking, he instructed Carsen and Watkins to move the bed, gearing up to head into the surgery room.

As they were maneuvering the bed through the corridor towards the operating room, Lennox appeared, flanked by a group of security guards.

When Lennox spotted Liam, he signaled the security guard to halt him and then gave him a scolding.

"What on earth are you up to? Do you see yourself as a qualified doctor? I bet you don't even have a medical license. And you still want to do the surgery? You can't administer random treatments here in Beluga Hospital! Get out! And take your patient out with you!"

Lennox was fretting that if the patient passed away under Liam's care here, the head of the hospital would hold him accountable.

Liam glanced at Watkins' wife, lying on the bed, and his expression grew stern. Considering her critical state, transferring her to another hospital could be fatal.

Liam was sure Lennox was aware of this.

Indeed, he noticed a hint of spite in Lennox's eyes.

Lennox understood the gravity of the situation. He was making things difficult for Watkins, hoping for the worst outcome for his wife.

Liam's face turned grim, but he was pressed for time to start the surgery and couldn't spare a moment for Lennox, whom he deemed despicable.

So, Liam said in a low voice, "Carsen, keep an eye on these people! I'm going to start the surgery. No one should interrupt me while I'm operating!"

When Lennox spotted Liam, he signaled the security guard to halt him and then gave him a scolding.

"What on earth are you up to? Do you see yourself as a qualified doctor? I bet you don't even have a medical license. And you still want to do the surgery? You can't administer random treatments here in Beluga Hospital! Get out! And take your patient out with you!"

Lennox was fretting that if the patient passed away under Liam's care here, the head of the hospital would hold him accountable.

Liam glanced at Watkins' wife, lying on the bed, and his expression grew stern. Considering her critical state, transferring her to another hospital could be fatal.

Liam was sure Lennox was aware of this.

Indeed, he noticed a hint of spite in Lennox's eyes.

Lennox understood the gravity of the situation. He was making things difficult for Watkins, hoping for the worst outcome for his wife.

Liam's face turned grim, but he was pressed for time to start the surgery and couldn't spare a moment for Lennox, whom he deemed despicable.

So, Liam said in a low voice, "Carsen, keep an eye on these people! I'm going to start the surgery. No one should interrupt me while I'm operating!"

Chapter 913 The Operation Was Successful

After saying that, Liam pushed the stretcher into the operating room and closed the door behind him.

Lennox wanted to ask the security guards to intercept Liam, but he swallowed the words when he saw Carsen blocking the way. Carsen completely dwarfed all the guards, and it was apparent he could squash them all without breaking a sweat.

After a moment of staring at the closed door of the operating room, Lennox growled and stamped his feet in anger. Again, he glanced at Carsen, knowing fully well that the people he brought with him were no match for Carsen.

Left with no other option, Lennox started shouting and cursing.

"You guys are lawless! You want to use the operating room of our hospital without a valid certificate. Just wait to go to jail!"

Then, he turned around and stormed off.

He was heading straight to the office of the director of the Beluga Hospital to report Liam. Then, he would call the police to come and arrest Liam.

When Watkins heard Lennox's cruel words, he couldn't help but feel nervous.

He was not only worried that Liam would get into

Chapter 913 The Operation +120 Points at most trouble because of him, but he was also afraid for his wife.

Watkins closed his eyes and muttered desperate prayers.

The operation had to be successful!

In the operating room, Liam was well prepared and composed. He arranged all the surgical instruments needed for the operation in order.

The leukemia operation was not difficult for him. While he was preparing to perform the operation, a sudden whim sprang up in his mind.

His own primogem energy was very beneficial to ordinary people. If he could inject some primogem energy into Watkins' wife during the operation, it would help her recover faster.

Liam's eyes lit up. Yes, this was indeed a good idea, and it wouldn't harm Watkins' wife in any way.

As the equipment started up, Liam set to work.

Time passed by in the blink of an eye.

Finally, the operation of Watkins' wife came to an end.

In the last stage, Liam successfully injected a small amount of primogem energy into her body.

At the same time, a small crowd had gathered outside the operating room.

Most of them were hospital staff, and they were all trying to get into the operating room. But Carsen resolutely stopped them all in their tracks.

Among them, there was Emmitt Jensen, the director of the Beluga Hospital, and a group of medical experts he had brought along.

Lennox had indeed called the police, and several officers stood amongst the crowd.

Just then, the light above the operating room was turned off, indicating that the surgery was over.

The demands for Carsen to step out of the way stopped, and everyone's attention went to the door.

Sure enough, the next moment, the door of the operating room was opened, and they saw Liam step out.

Seeing this, a vicious expression settled into Lennox's features, and he once again cursed Liam in his heart.

Now, he was curious to see how Liam could escape his doom.

Instinctively, everyone rushed towards Liam the moment the door of the operating room opened.

However, Carsen was quicker on his feet and blocked everyone who tried to move towards Liam.

At this point, the policemen were tired of being resisted by Carsen and took out the guns holstered to their waist.

At the same time, Liam closed the door of the operating room and turned to look at the crowd that had gathered. Immediately, he saw Emmitt and the police chief in the crowd.

The police chief also recognized Liam the second he saw his face.

In an instant, the police chief broke out in a cold sweat. This was the big shot related to the general!

Before, he had led his team to help Liam search for Asher.

The police chief was secretly glad that he recognized Liam before he made a grave mistake.

The police chief quickly ordered his officers, saying, "All of you, put down your guns! Don't act rashly!"

Then, the police chief quickly walked forward and greeted Liam with a warm smile.

Liam nodded at the police chief slightly, then his eyes fell on Emmitt.

At this time, Emmitt also recognized Liam. His wrinkled face went round with surprise. He quickly hurried to Liam's side and said in a respectful tone, "Teacher Hoff, were you performing an operation just now?"