Chapter 121

With his eyes still closed, Oscar stretched his hands to the other side of the bed. He couldn't smell her or feel her body so his eyes instantly flung open.

He sat up and took a 360 glance around the room.

"Babe ?!" He called out when he didn't see her in view. His voice came out hoarse.

Oscar got no response.

He tossed the duvet aside, revealing his bare upper body. Oscar got down from the bed in nothing but his briefs and went straight to the adjoining bathroom. He knocked, got no answer for a second, and tried opening the door.

He saw no one there.

With worry etched all over his face, Oscar proceeded into the bathroom. He cleaned his teeth, washed and dried his face, and then went back outside. He approached his closet for sweatpants, and put it on, after which he exited the bedroom.

Peeping into Sophie's room, he saw that his baby girl was still sleeping and most importantly, his wife wasn't there.

After gently shutting the door behind him, Oscar made his way down the stairs. He went straight to the living room and when he didn't find her there, he headed for the Kitchen.

"Babe," He called out to her as he approached her.

"I searched for you everywhere. Good morning." He placed a deep kiss on her forehead, then crouched a little and placed two kisses on her belly. There was a bit of space between where Vee was seated on the stool and the counter so he did that comfortably.

Vicky smiled, feeling his kiss on her belly.

“Are you okay? You should have woken me up if you needed anything. I would have gotten it for you instead of you coming all the way down here.”

‘She shook her head. “You’ve been working so hard, taking care of us since we moved here. You looked tired, that’s why I didn’t wake you up.”

“Besides, the twins wanted to take a walk!”

“You are good? You don’t feel any pain, right?” He brushed the back of his fingers against her cheek.”

Victoria smiled, placing a hand on her bump, and caressing it. Something she had grown so fond of doing lately. “We are fine.”

“I was able to get us an appointment with the best ob-gyn in the city for 1 p.m. today.”

“Are you doing this because of the scare on the last day of our trip?” Vee said softly, staring at him intently.

She had complained of mild pains in her belly but it only lasted for an hour.

“Yeah, I admit I was scared but that is not the case right now. I want you to still get checked up. The last few weeks have been crazy in a good way. You have been really active from the wedding preparations to the event, honeymoon, relocation and all.”

“I was honestly scared. I thought I had been too rough with you in bed and that was why you were in pain”

“I told you that no part of you can hurt me.”

“Everything about you is so tempting that it is so hard to not want to take you anywhere.”

Vee blushed. She could see the desire in his eyes as he spoke. Not that she could blame him. She was putting on a silk nightdress and right now her nipples were standing very hard against the material.

Before she could think of what to say to her husband, Oscar twirled the stool around and once she was facing him, he adjusted the hands of her nightie to the side, revealing her boobs and he leaned closer, latching onto it immediately, sucking her nipples with so much passion. The good thing was that the stool had a backrest. With her hands on his head, Vee threw her head to the back, enjoying the pleasure he was giving her..

It just happened that her position and the height of the stool were so perfect that immediately Oscar released his mouth from her boobs, he positioned her well to slant a bit, then parted her legs afterward.

His eyes didn't leave her as he pulled down his sweatpants along with his brief, then slowly guided his cock into her pussy.

He could never get over the fact that she was always wet for him.

He continued to pleasure her until they both had their release.

"I knew it wouldn't take so long for us to do this!" She smirked, placing a kiss on his cheek after he wore his sweatpants back.

Oscar blushed. "I'm glad I married a woman that understands me well."

"I loved it. But sorry if you felt a bit uncomfortable." He kissed her forehead after she adjusted her sitting position.

"I love how you can be a Mother Hen over me but you need to believe me when I tell you that I'm fine."

Oscar nodded.

"So we are going for the appointment by 1 pm." He reminded.

"Yeah. I miss hearing their heartbeats so yeah, I would love to see them too."

"What about their genders?" Oscar said with a puppy dog face.

"What about it?" She smiled

"Aren't you eager to find out so we can start putting things in place?"

"Things like what?" She teased.

"Decorating their rooms, shopping for them, picking out names, and preparing for a proper baby shower."

Vee chuckled. "Are you ready to accept your defeat on the bet?"

Oscar frowned for a few seconds, "I don't think I am going to lose the bet. But either way, I am dying to know what they are and if it is okay with you, I want us to know the gender today."

"I can't wait to find out too. Then today it is!"

"Sophie should come with us. What do you think?" Oscar suggested.

Victoria smiled. "Of course, I would love her to witness this with us."

"Same here." Oscar smiled.

"I need to be in the Office for a very important meeting in two hours. The meeting is going to take just thirty minutes, then I will be back home to come pick you all up for the appointment!"

"We can come with you to the office."

"You would do that?" She did see the joy in his eyes as he spoke.

Victoria shrugged, smiling. She honestly had no idea why she said that.

"Let's say I want the whole of Wayde Enterprises to know that I am back in your life."

Oscar smiled proudly. "It would be a big pleasure to show you off. I would love for you and Sophie to come with me."

Chapter 122

Oscar and Vicky kept themselves busy with random conversations until their daughter was awake. Vee got Sophie ready for the day, after which she and her husband got ready too.

They had breakfast which was prepared by the chef, after which they made their way to the car where the driver was waiting for them.

While Oscar was busy answering Sophie's questions, Vicky smiled at them and mostly spent her time giggling at the conversations the duo were making and also taking note of her environment by staring out through the window.

"Anything changed?" Oscar asked, noticing her countenance.

She turned to him and smiled. "Not really." They were a bit apart from each other since Sophie was sitting in their middle, her attention now on her iPad.

"Does Julian still work for your company?"

Oscar shook his head. She could see the hesitation in his eyes for not wanting to speak but she was glad when he shrugged it off and decided to say what was in his mind.

"After you left, I heard of his advances towards you and how he made this workplace hell for you so I fired him. We got someone better to take over his role."

"I'm sorry for all the pain that he caused you."

"I don't like it when you start to get really sad. I am over the past and trust me, I wouldn't be here or even come to work with you if I am still triggered by all those events."

"We are good now so there is nothing to apologize for." She assured and her words awfully calmed him.

Oscar found himself leaning closer to her, mindful of the fact that their daughter was in their middle, and he kissed Vicky on her lips.

They heard the little Princess chuckling, making them pull away.

"No. Don't stop, I like it." Sophie grinned, looking from her Daddy to her Mommy and then back to her Daddy.

Vicky turned her attention back to the window, trying to hide her blush.

"You do? You like it when I kiss Mommy?" Oscar chuckled, facing his daughter.

Vee took a glance at them, rolling her eyes, before turning her attention back to the window. There was no denying that her husband and daughter loved to tease her a lot.

“Yes, Daddy. I love it very much.” The little girl’s cheerful voice came through. “Uncle Gabriel calls Aunt Lara his baby and they share really good hugs. I’m happy Mommy is your baby. You can take care of her when I’m not staring.”

Vicky’s cheeks were even more red at this point.

“Did I tell you how much I love you?” Oscar stared at his daughter with so much pride in his eyes and heart. He couldn’t believe this little angel was his and God knows he would do anything for her..

She nodded, smiling. “You told me this morning.”

Oscar smiled, kissing his daughter’s head.

“Daddy, are we almost at your office?”

“Yes, my love. We will be there in a few minutes.”

“Cool. I want to see your office. Is it finer than the one in the house?”

“I’ll let you decide when you see it.”

Sophie nodded, turning her attention to her iPad.

Just as Oscar told his daughter, in a few minutes they arrived at Wayde Enterprises. The driver opened the door and Oscar got down first. He helped his daughter out first and also gave a hand to Victoria.

“Wow!!!” Sophie said when she took in her view.

Oscar chuckled. He crouched down to his daughter’s height to see the amusement in her eyes better. “You love it?”

“Is this your office?” She asked in disbelief. As far as Sophie knew in her mind, She had been to her Mommy’s office and it wasn’t this huge.

“Yes, my love. This is your Daddy’s company. Soon it would be yours. That is if you want it.” Oscar said and kissed her cheek.

He knew his kids were going to inherit all that he owned and had worked for but he had it at the back of his mind to allow his children to pursue their dream. If Sophie wouldn't be interested in running the family's business then hopefully one of the twins would.

Oscar picked Sophie up in his arms and then turned to face Vicky.

"You good?"

Vicky nodded, smiling. She took a step closer to Oscar and kissed Sophie who was still in Oscar's arm on the cheek.

"What about me?" Oscar pouted.

"I kissed you earlier?" She blushed, referring to when they were in the car.

"I initiated that."

Vee scoffed, slightly rolling her eyes, not believing her husband was whining like a kid because of some attention"

"Come on, mommy." Sophie grinned.

Vee smiled, shaking her head in disbelief. She leaned closer to Oscar to kiss his cheek. He was able to move his face in time so the kiss landed on his lips instead.

Victoria intertwined her hands with Oscar's own and then they made their way into the office building, with five guards walking behind them.

Victoria Wayde felt her heart was going to burst with pride with every step that she took. She could literally feel all eyes on her as some staff greeted Oscar.

For someone who was literally chased out of the company five years ago, it felt good to be back in here as not only a survivor but also a more important person. Vee felt there could be no better comeback than what the staff were seeing now.

She, Oscar, and Sophie really looked like a happy family. Especially Sophie who couldn't stop smiling and making conversations with her Daddy. While holding Sophie with one arm, Oscar had his other hand intertwined with Vicky's own and she held onto him really possessively.

Vicky couldn't help but pat herself on the back for her outfit. While Oscar was in his well-tailored suit and Sophie in some beautiful casual clothings, She was putting on a black bodycon dress that revealed her well-defined bump, and matching boots, and her wavy hair was let down. She knew she looked gorgeous. Oscar said so to her six times this morning, right before they left the house.

She could see some familiar faces stare at her with shock and she smiled at them. She could also see some faces staring at her with admiration, they were mostly females, while some stared with so much envy. Vicky couldn't care less because it was something inevitable. Being with Oscar meant being watched and admired by all. That included people who were jealous and all of that.

Soon, they made their way into the VIP elevator that led to Oscar's floor.

"All my life, I've always had so much attention but I've never experienced an attention as fulfilling and amazing as this." Oscar smiled at Vee.

She smiled back. "Why do you say so?"

"First time in public with my family. We definitely gave them a show. They probably thought I wouldn't be happy again after Ingrid. All eyes were on you."

Vee shrugged. "I saw a couple of familiar faces. You know we never revealed anything about our relationship so people are definitely going to be shocked seeing us together."

"Well, they would get used to it because you're bound with me forever."

The door to the elevator opened and they got out of it, proceeding to Oscar's office. He opened the door and let Vicky go in first.

“Still looks massive and very beautiful,” Vicky mumbled, taking in her environment. The only difference she noticed were new decorations and furniture.

“Your office is beautiful, Daddy.” Sophie smiled, looking around, liking what she saw.

“So which do you prefer? This one or the one at home?”

“This one.” She grinned. “It’s really big” She made some kind of gesture with her hands “And Very gorgeous.”

Before Oscar could say anything else, they were interrupted by a knock on the door.

“Come in.” He said and the person on the other end came in.

“Good morning, Sir.”

“Good morning, ma.” She directed at Vee who responded with a polite smile.

“Everyone is ready for the meeting, Sir.”

“I’ll be there shortly.”

She nodded and took her leave.

“That’s my Secretary.”

“She looks chilled.”

“Yeah, Fedora recommended her. She has been working for me for nine months now which is strange because the highest I’ve had is 4 months. You know how crazy they are all the time.”

Vee chuckled. “They always want to eat you up.”

“And I don’t like mixing business with pleasure.”

“Oh really? It’s interesting how that rule didn’t apply to me.”

“I made every exception for you because you had me wrapped around your fingers.”

Victoria blushed. “As I should.”

“My love,” Oscar turned his attention to his baby girl who was still in his arms. “I need to go.”

Sophie frowned. “Where?”

“I have a meeting to attend. I’ll be done in 30 minutes.”

“Can I come with you, Daddy? Please?” She looked at him with puppy dog eyes.

“I’ll be good. I promise, Daddy.”

“Sophie, this is work. Daddy really has to attend his meetings without any disturbance.” Vee said, taking closer steps to the duo.

“I know you are in a space where you are trying to be good to her but you can always decline some of her requests.”

Chapter 123

“I’ll be good. I promise.”

“Honey, Daddy needs to go to work. He will be back soon. You’ll stay with me. We can watch your cartoons together.”

“It’s fine, babe. I’ll take her with me.”

Vicky frowned a bit. “Are you sure? Isn’t this a board meeting?”

“Yeah, it is. She will sit with me.”

“Babe, you sure? She can always stay here with me.”

Oscar smiled, “She wants to see what her Daddy does so it’s fine.”

“Are you sure you will be Okay here?” He asked her.

“Yeah.”

“I’ll tell someone to bring you something to eat.”

“No, I’m fine. I’ll try to get some rest until you both are back.”

Oscar nodded. They exchanged kisses after which he took his leave with little miss Sophie.

Vicky walked over to the chair in the visitor’s area. She placed her bag on it and was about to sit when a knock came through on the door.

She said nothing and the person didn’t come in either but the knock came through again very shortly.

“Come in,” Victoria responded, feeling quite unsure with her eyes plastered against the door. The door opened and an awfully familiar person walked in.

“Muna?!”, Victoria said in disbelief, standing to her feet.

Muna smiled, “Oh my God, look at you.”

“You still work here?”

“Yes, I do. I was done conducting a meeting with some trainees that we have when I heard people saying the Boss is back with his family. I had no idea it was you. I saw Mr Wayde right now and he said you were here so here I am. It’s so good to see you.”

“It’s good to see you too.” Vicky was already by her side at this point and they both exchanged a hug.

Muna used to be her partner when she was working here. They had worked on a lot of projects together.

“How has work been? I hope Wayde Enterprises has been treating you well?”

“Fair enough.” She said and they both chuckled.

“Sorry about the way we parted. It was so unfortunate. We didn’t see it coming either. We were only ordered not to share work information with you that you would be living soon. Even though I didn’t know where you lived, I tried reaching out to you on the phone but your number never went through.”

“Same here.”

“I should get back to work. And if you need me for anything, don’t hesitate to reach out.”

“Definitely.” Vee smiled. They shared another hug after which Muna took her leave.

Victoria always kept to herself and that was why people hardly knew anything about her, including where she lived. But she was definitely on good work terms with everyone.

Vicky went back to the couch and occupied herself with her phone.

She was about locking her phone and taking a rest when a call came in. She smiled upon seeing the caller ID.

“Hi Sis,” Vee said to the other side.

“Okay, I think you and your husband just broke the internet.”

She chuckled, “We broke the internet?”

“Hell yes!”

“I open my phone and the first thing I see is a gorgeous-looking family, showing love in front of Wayde Enterprises. You all are so cute.”

Victoria blushed. “That was fast. I had no idea someone would take our pictures. I don’t remember seeing any paparazzi.

“Those pricks are always loitering around Wayde Enterprises. They were probably at a distance. I’m glad the world knows that you and Oscar are together.”

“Yeah, me too. I don’t want to keep our love a Secret anymore. Well, not that that is actually possible since we are married.” Vicky chuckled.

“I know. I’m really proud of you both and I’m glad that you both have each other.”

“Thank you.”

“Hope you are settling in well?”

“Yes, I am. I haven’t really explored the city but I know I’ll do that gradually. I’m still trying to search for a school for Sophie.”

“You can always look up Amie’s School. I can text you the address. They will definitely not be in the same class but maybe Sophie would be a bit safe knowing she would attend Amic’s school.”

“That’s a good idea. Please send the address and I’ll let you know what Oscar and I decide.”

“I got a call today. I haven’t told Oscar about it because he woke up in good spirits and I couldn’t bring myself to ruin the joy.”

“Holy shit, let me guess, my mom called you?”

“Yes!”

“I’m honestly so sorry about that, Vee. You’re right. If Oscar, knows, he is going to freak out. There’s a restraining order out to any of you.”

against her. She has no right to come close to or reach

“She sounded really sincere though! She apologized for everything.”

Fedora sighed. “Do I pity her? Yes. Do I wish things between Her and Oscar would get better? God knows I would do anything to see that happen but Oscar wants nothing to do with her.”

“I get that she is sincere now but she really ruined things. And Yes, She had no idea that Oscar was getting married and she was really pained to discover that.”

“Do you allow Amie to hang out with her?”

“Yeah! Amie goes to her grandparents for the weekend once a month. Sometimes, it’s twice when my husband and I need more time to ourselves.”

“I lost my parents long ago. I doubt Oscar will ever forgive his parents. That means Sophie and the twins won’t know what it’s like to experience love from their grandparents.”

“I feel like they would still bond with them. The wound is just still very fresh in Oscar’s mind. I’m sure it’s still fresh in your mind too. But just give it time. I know Oscar will come. around.”

“And yeah, you are the key to his heart, which means he can never refuse you. Do have that in mind.”

Vee nodded, smiling.

“I just called to check on you. Amie and I would probably pop in this weekend to see you all. We will remember to come with gifts for my niece and some housewarming gifts too.”

Vicky chuckled. “There is no need, Dora. Her playroom can hardly contain more stuff.”

“Oh, don’t worry. I won’t come with something that takes too much space.”

Vee playfully rolled her eyes.

“Take care of yourself and I’ll see you this weekend.”

“Take care of yourself too,” Vicky said, ending the call.

The meeting went on for about 40 minutes and once it was over, Oscar made sure Sophie stayed with his Secretary while he had some private conversations with a few members of the board.

“Is this how you are going to continue to ignore me?” Oscar saw his father approach him.

“What do you want?” Oscar asked.

“Why are you sounding like we are enemies?”

“We aren’t friends exactly and I’m sure your wife made it known to you that I’m an orphan.”

“Don’t say that. You didn’t invite us to your wedding and you got a restraining order on us. We are your parents, Oscar. Not your enemy. We made mistakes and we are really sorry about it.”

“This is the only time I can talk to you. Whenever we are in the office because it is work-related. My granddaughter is there and I can’t even approach her and introduce myself as her grandfather just because you will sue me.”

“Don’t you dare say anything to try to guilt trip me. You stand here to call her your granddaughter when your wife almost killed her by humiliating her mother when her mother was still pregnant with her.”

“You have no point and I promise you that there is nothing you can say that will make me change my mind about you and your evil wife. You both should stay the fucking hell away from me and my family.” Oscar said and left his father’s sight, not caring if his father had anything else to say.

He got his daughter from his Secretary’s arms and exited the conference room.

“Mommy!!!!!!” Sophie ran towards Vicky the moment they were back at Oscar’s office.

“My love,” She smiled, hugging Sophie.

“Were you good at the meeting”

Sophie nodded, smiling. “Yes, Mommy. And I made new friends too.”

“Friends Vicky chuckled, knowing the board room was probably filled with old men and women.

“Yes, She was charming and almost everyone had a bit of conversation with her. She sat on my legs throughout the meeting and was surprisingly attentive. She was very well-behaved

“Yes, Mommy And Daddy said we are going to get Ice Cream after the Babies’ appointment.”

“Speaking of the appointment, I think we should be on our way. Oscar mumbled, taking a glance at his watch. He noticed they were already running late as it would take them a while to get to the hospital.

Oscar, his wife, and his daughter arrived at the hospital at 1.12 p.m. They were directed to the Doctor’s office. The Doctor went through Wee’s medical report from her past checkup in Australia. She asked Vee a couple of questions about her health after which She ushered the family to the examination room

Vee was given clothes to change into after which she got into bed. Oscar was standing to her left while Sophie was sitting on the chair to her right. The little girl couldn’t stop smiling since they stepped into the room

“So sweetheart. What do you think Mommy is having The Doctor asked.

“Two boys” She smiled brightly, showing Dr Natalie her two fingers

“I love how confident she is but I’m afraid she’s going to cry if she finds out we aren’t having boys,” Victoria whispered to

Oscar.

“She won’t.” He smiled, assuring her:

“You’re so sweet. I have no doubt you are going to be an amazing big sister.”

“Yes! I’m going to take really good care of my baby brothers.”

“Have you heard their heartbeats before?”

Sophie shook her head.

“This is her first time coming for a check-up with us,” Vicky answered.

“I see.”

The assistant in the examination room finished setting up the ultrasound monitor and called Dr Natalie’s attention Knowing it was almost time, Vee caressed her daughter’s cheek with her hand and then intertwined her hand with Oscar’s

Own

Dr Natalie applied some gel on Victoria's belly and placed the wand on it. Suddenly, everyone's eyes were glued to the monitor. Including Sophie's

After carefully studying the monitor for two minutes, Dr Natalie turned to the family with a big smile on her face.

Chapter 124

"Congratulations!!!! You are having twin boys."

"Yessssssssssss!" Sophie's voice came out the loudest. She literally jumped down from the chair she was sitting on beside her mother and started dancing with so much joy while humming to a happy song.

Right before the Doctor announced, Vee remembered intertwining hands with Oscar but he eventually left her and joined Sophie in the celebratory dance.

Victoria smiled at them as happy tears welled up in her eyes. It was so fulfilling seeing her family happy and also enjoying this moment with her family. Never did she think a day like this would come when her heart would be filled with so much joy.

"So you guessed differently?" The Doctor said to Vicky.

Victoria smiled, nodding, wiping tears off the corner of her eyes. "I honestly thought it was going to be a boy and a girl. But it turns out my husband and daughter know my body better than I do."

"Maybe. Or they probably prayed harder than you. Especially your little girl. She has a very admirable confidence. One that can actually make things happen. You have a beautiful family and Congratulations once again on your twin boys. I can't wait for them to meet you all. Your family is going to be filled with so much love."

"Thank you so much, Doc." She smiled, turning her attention to her husband and Daughter who were still celebrating with dances and loud giggles.

Sophie walked up to her mother with the biggest smile on her face. She tiptoed to kiss her mother's cheek then intertwined her hand with her mother's own.

“Thank you Mommy for being brave. Thank you for giving me, my baby brothers. I’m going to be good to them, I’ll play with them and share my snacks with them too. I love you, mommy.”

“Come over here,” Vee mumbled, trying her hardest not to cry, wondering what she did to deserve such an amazing daughter.

Vee placed a deep kiss on the crown of her daughter’s head and caressed her cheek with the back of her palm, looking at her with nothing but adoration in her eyes.

“I love you too, my princess. I have no doubt that you are going to be the best big sisters ever to your baby brothers. Thank you for coming into our lives and making us the happiest parents ever.”

Sophie grinned before turning her attention back to the monitor.

“Let’s see how these little angels are fairing.” Dr Natalie said. She punched in a few things on the monitor and before they knew it, the ward was filled with the sound of a heartbeat. Vicky started crying all over again. Oscar was back to her side, holding her hand but he had smiles all over his face.

Dr Natalie left the sound on for about two minutes so the family could bond with it before She turned it off.

“What was that, Mommy?” Sophie asked, turning her attention to her mama the moment the sound went off.

Victoria smiled with her glossy eyes, though Oscar had wiped her tears away. “That was one of your brother’s heartbeats.”

“He has a small heart already?”

“Yes, my love. A small kind heart just like yours.”

She grinned. “That’s cute and really cool.”

“Yes, my love.”

“So that is Baby A’s heartbeat. Very strong and he’s growing fine. So let’s listen to Baby B’s heartbeat” Dr Natalie said and almost immediately, the sound of the second heartbeat came through.

“Thank Goodness!” Vee mumbled after which she closed her eyes for a while to savor the sound of the heartbeat.

The day after her accident, which was a couple of weeks back, an ultrasound was done and the second baby’s heartbeat was visibly weak.

Vicky couldn’t identify which baby was which yet but the first heartbeat was really strong and it was the same for the second one which made her feel instantly relieved.

“Perfect Heartbeat.” Dr Natalie smiled, making her way over to the monitor. She pointed at a few things to the family, showing them Baby A and Baby B. She also described to them how far they had grown and every other thing they had to know.

Oscar went ahead to wipe the gel off Vicky’s belly after which she changed back to her clothes and they exited the examination room, waiting for Dr Natalie in her office.

Vee and Oscar were seated beside each other while Sophie occupied her father’s lap. “One ice cream for me, One for you Daddy and one for Mommy, and two for baby brothers.”

Oscar chuckled at his daughter’s excitement. “Yes, my love. We are definitely going for lunch and ice cream when we leave here.”

Dr Natalie finally came in. “Sorry for keeping you all waiting. I was trying to get this.” Once she was seated, she handed Oscar a brown envelope.

“Pictures of the ultrasound. It has today’s date and time underneath it.”

“Thank you, Doc.”

“Thank you.” Oscar and Vee said respectively.

Oscar took out the pictures. There were about five of them in there and he showed one to Vicky and another one to Sophie who couldn’t stop smiling.

“Your babies are growing perfectly. Continue to rest well and eat well. I went over the list of medications you are taking and everything seems perfect but I'm going to be adding two vitamins prescription." Natalie wrote something down on the paper and handed it to Victoria.

"You have my number so feel free to call me if you need anything."

"I will. Thank you."

"Sophie Darling, Don't forget to always take care of Mommy okay?"

"Don't worry Docky, I'll take good care of mommy and baby brothers." She sounded really confident, making the adults smile.

"Thank you, my dear. And thank you too for the nickname."

"It's good to have you all here, Mr Wayde. I had a great time attending to your family. Please take great care of your wife. You both can have fun as long as you want and as long as she is comfortable with the positions. It's really healthy for the Babies."

Victoria tried to hide her blush

"Don't worry, Doc. I'll do as you've said," Oscar assured, smiling.

They said their goodbyes, then took their leave.

Oscar made sure his wife and daughter were well settled in the car after which he went to get Vicky's prescriptions. Then they went for their lunch/ice cream date and eventually got home at past 4 pm.

Sophie was asleep so Oscar went straight to put her in her room while Vicky made her way to the master bedroom.

Opening the door, her eyes darted straight to the bed and she instantly blushed at what was there. It was a rectangular shaped box with a note beside it.

Vee shook her head in disbelief, shutting the door behind her. She left the room after Oscar this morning so she was sure that she left the bed empty.

Vicky took her time putting her stuff in the right places and finally changed into a green silky free satin dress.

She went to the bedside, sat on it, and reached for the note beside the box. It was handwritten and she blushed even more, recognizing the owner of the cursive writing.

She smiled when she saw who the letter was addressed to. "To the mother of my twin boys"

"Life would be so boring without you, Vee. I can't thank you enough for being in my life. Thank you for giving me the best gifts I could ever ask for. I love you to the moon and back."

Vicky sighed, trying not to tear up. "What will I do without you?" She mumbled, putting the note aside, then went ahead to open the box.

It was a gold necklace with matching stud earrings.

"I'm definitely the luckiest girl in the world." She whispered, feeling the jewelry with her finger.

The door opened and Oscar strolled in.

"It's crazy how you are always a step ahead of me."

"What do you mean?" He asked, feigning innocence as he started to take off his jacket.

"This gift. It wasn't on the bed this morning."

Oscar shrugged, smiling. "That's why it's a gift."

He went into the closet to change and was back in a minute in his sweats and tee.

"You like it?" He kissed her forehead before taking a seat beside her.

"It's so beautiful. Thank you. But isn't it too early for a push gift?"

"No. This isn't a push gift. I'm still working on that for you. I really want to blow
Vicky blushed, "You're making me excited."

“You should be.”

your mind.”

“I saw your note. Mom of Twin boys. I’m starting to get suspicious of you and Sophie.”

Oscar laughed. “We definitely prayed really hard. That’s why we were so confident.”

“Losing doesn’t look so bad.” Vee smiled, staring at the necklace. “At least I got a consolation gift.”

“You didn’t want to join the winning team.”

“I knew we were going to have a boy. I just didn’t think it would be two boys.”

“But are you happy about it?” Oscar couldn’t help but ask.

“I am. We are definitely going to have our hands full but I’m really excited to see your lookalike in mini versions.”

Oscar blushed, “I’m excited too.”

“Thank you for my gift. I love it.”

Oscar leaned closer and kissed her cheek. “You have nothing to thank me for.”

“How did your meeting go? We didn’t really talk about it.”

“It was good. Sophie made it fun. My father almost ruined the mood but it was okay.”

“He spoke about how sorry they were, how terrible they feel because I didn’t invite or tell them about the wedding, and how everyone in the boardroom could interact with Sophie and he couldn’t because of the restraining order.”

“I wasn’t moved by his speech. I promise you.”

“Your mother called me this morning!”

Oscar frowned, “Lisa called you? When was that?”

“Before you found me in the kitchen.”

“What-the-hell? Why would She call you? Does she want to end up behind bars?”

“She called to apologize about everything.”

“I’m going to talk to my lawyer. Mom and Dad need to be taught a lesson.”

“Don’t.” Vicky reached for his hand, thereby stopping him from reaching for his phone.

“You don’t need to stop me, babe. I’m not going to let anyone disturb our peace.”

“No one’s going to disturb our peace. Especially not them.”

“We are in the same city as your parents so it’s normal to expect actions like this from them.”

“They know they made a Terrible mistake. They feel so bad that it’s eating them up that they are probably unable to sleep and stay sane. That’s why they are trying to reach out to ask for forgiveness.”

“Why are you supporting them?”

“I’m not. I’m just trying to be realistic. No one would see you this happy and successful and not want to be close to you.”

“I didn’t say a word. She spoke her heart out and I ended the call eventually. She seemed really remorseful about what she did to me. I doubt she’s going to call again because I know they wouldn’t want to do anything to piss you off.”

“I want nothing to do with them so they should stay away.”

Vicky nodded, yawning, covering her mouth.

“You’ve been up since morning. You should get some rest.”

“Sorry. I do nothing but eat and sleep lately.” She said shyly.

“You have nothing to be sorry for. You’re breathing, eating, and resting for three remember? So it’s normal to be tired. I’ll watch over you while you take a nap.”

Vicky nodded. She was about to lay properly on the bed when she felt a move in her belly making her scream a bit.”

“Ouuuuch!” She screamed, her hand instantly moving to her belly.

“Are you fine?”

“Are our boys okay?”

“You want me to call the Doctor?” Oscar said at a go, closing the gap between himself and her. His voice and face filled with nothing but worry.

Vicky felt more relaxed when she felt the move again and the look on her face was replaced from that of worry to relief. “Your Babies moved.” She smiled.

Oscar was still there, looking confused so she reached for his hand and placed it on her belly. He felt the movements, making him almost tear up. The feeling was indescribable.

Chapter 125

A Few Months Later

“You know you don’t have to stay back. We are going to be just fine.” Oscar heard his wife’s voice, making him look up from the laptop.

“Babe,” He called out her name immediately, standing up from where he was seated. “I thought you were asleep?” He said as he approached her where she was standing, which was the entrance of the home office.

“I can’t sleep. They wouldn’t stop playing around. I love them so much but it’s so discomfoting. They aren’t taking it easy on me.” She said with teary eyes and her hand on her heavily pregnant belly. She was still feeling the twins kick and move around.

Oscar smiled sadly. He leaned closer to Victoria and placed a deep kiss on her forehead. Then he crouched down and placed multiple kisses on her belly. He eventually placed his hand on her belly and felt how active their boys were.

Oscar rose to his feet and placed a deep kiss on her forehead again. He could see that she was almost in tears and was trying very hard to hold it back.

“I feel so exhausted. I need my rest but they are not letting me have some time alone.”

“I’m so sorry, my love,” Oscar said sincerely. In situations like this, he used to wish he could share in her pain, and as much as he wanted that, he knew it wasn’t possible.

“You want me to give you a massage? I could read or sing to them. Maybe it will calm them.”

“I don’t know. I feel tired. I want them out already. I thought they were going to be out last week/I can’t wait to have them in my arms. My body is exhausted already.”

Dr Natalie let her know that with twins, the delivery might be early. But it wasn’t looking like these two little angels were ready to be out. She had completed her 36th week and they were still having fun in her womb.

“Sorry, my love. Just a little more while and we will have them in our arms. You have done so well and I’m really proud of you.”

“Are you craving anything? I can make it for you and spend time with you.”

“You’ve been truly supportive. I feel I nag a lot, get too cranky, and also get on your nerves. I’m sorry for always nagging like a bitch. I honestly don’t deserve you.”

“Honey....” He cupped her face in his hands. “Please don’t speak that way. You are doing so much by carrying our boys and I’ll do all I can to support you till the very end. I know I can’t feel the discomfort you are feeling but I’ll try my best to make sure you are happy and that you feel good.”

“You are not in any way being bitchy to me. I understand that You need your rest and the boys want to play. You are doing so much already by having them in your womb. Then the least I can do is to be here for you.”

“But if you attend to me, what about your work? You are meant to be in Germany but you didn’t go because of me and yet I’ve been disturbing you.” She said, looking at him with guilty eyes.

“You’ve got nothing to feel guilty about, Babe. If I choose to retire today. Our children’s children would still have so much to benefit from.”

“Yes, I’m meant to be in Germany but the board knows I’m on maternity leave with my wife. I have people taking care of all I need to do so there is nothing to worry about.”

“I shouldn’t be here. I came down here to send an urgent email but I’m done. You should have called me and I would have carried you downstairs or brought you food. I don’t want you stressing yourself.”

“You do so much for me. Besides, I happily took the stairs. Anything to enhance the boys to come faster.”

“We all want them out so bad but are you sure you are not going to miss them in you?”

She shook her head. “I don’t know. Maybe and maybe not.”

“They only have a little time left to spend in your belly so let’s cherish the moment.”

“And I’ve always told you, you don’t have to feel Indebted to me as though I’m doing you a favor. We are in this together and I made you a promise to love and cherish you at all times.”

“I missed so much with Sophie and I don’t want to make that mistake anymore.”

“What will I do without You?” She pouted.

“I don’t think I can do without you either. That’s why we are a couple. To compliment each other and to take care of each other.”

“We are going to make the best out of life together, okay?”

She nodded.

“Let’s go get you something to eat.” Placing a kiss on Vicky’s cheek, Oscar placed an arm on the small of Victoria’s back and ushered her out of the home office to the living area. He made her sit comfortably on the couch after which he came back in a few minutes with sandwiches and some ice cream.

Vicky took three bites from the sandwich and decided she was done. Oscar served her some ice cream which she seemed to be enjoying.

Oscar happily watched her eat and once she was done having her ice cream, he cleared the place.

Coming back, he cuddled next to Vee on the chair, extending the blanket she had over her body to his body.

His hand went to her belly and he smiled when he felt no movement. The twins had calmed down a bit.

“Do

you think they were being naughty to you because they miss their big sister? Sophie would always sing and read to them every night. They probably know their big sister isn’t here so they were being all fussy.”

Vicky smiled. “You’re right. They miss her. But I’m glad they are calm now.”

“Me too. I don’t like it when you are sad or worried.”

“I wasn’t sad or worried. I just felt so exhausted. My body was tired and I needed to sleep so badly.”

“You’re a strong woman.”

“I’m only able to go through this because I have you and Sophie. You both take care of me real good.”

“At some point, I was battling with my confidence about looking like a whale but the way you always look at me filled my heart with so much joy.”

“You are so far from looking like a whale, my love. If there’s anything, you are even more attractive than I’ve ever known you.”

“You can’t take your eyes and hands off me. Even up to this morning. That made me realize.”

“I love you and I will do anything for you,” Oscar said, kissing her cheek.

“I love you too,” she said, yawning.

“Let’s get you to bed.” Oscar rose to his feet, picked up his wife in a bridal style, and carried her to the room. He tucked her in, then undressed and got under the duvet, cuddling her to sleep.

Oscar had no idea how long he slept for. But he knew he was enjoying his sleep when he felt a nudge by his arm.

“Hmmm!” He answered, half awake.

“I peed on myself.”

“What do you mean?” He mumbled, still with closed eyes.

“Or maybe my water broke. I don’t know. I feel so much pain.” This time around, Oscar heard her crying voice loud and clear. His eyes flew open and he literally jumped down from the bed, forgetting any form of tiredness he was feeling.

Chapter 126

Oscar reached for the clothes he discarded earlier and wore them back as fast as he could. He went over to the nightstand and picked up his phone and car keys. He tucked his phone in his pocket but still held onto the car keys. He rushed over to where Vicky was, lifted her from the bed, and carried her out of the room in a bridal style while saying soothing words to keep her calm.

He placed her in the car, buckled her up then went over to the driver’s seat, driving as fast as he could with a very nervous mind. Since it was midnight, the roads were free but Oscar didn’t bother to obey any of the traffic lights.

After what felt like forever, he got to the hospital and the nurses assisted in taking Vicky in after which the Doctor attended to her and they started preparing the labor room for the delivery of the twins.

From that moment, Oscar was no longer in control of himself. He had prepared for this day mentally, physically, and in any other way possible. But now that the time was here, he honestly had no idea what he was doing or how he was feeling.

Vicky was eventually fully dilated and was moved to the labor room. According to the Doctor, the twins were ready to be out and Oscar was given an overall to change into since he wanted to be there with his wife.

With shaky hands, he accepted the overall, properly washed and sanitized his hands before he was given access to the room.

“You can do this, Mr Wayde. Your baby girl needs you now more than ever. Go on.” Dr Natalie encouraged, before going to join the rest of the team.

Oscar nodded, approaching Vicky. His heart went out to her. Her hair was messy, despite how cool the room was, she was sweaty and was in so much pain.

Oscar kissed her cheek, then went ahead to intertwine his hands with hers.

Since Oscar was on her right-hand side, Dr Natalie approached Vee on the left-hand side.

“Hey mama, I’m so proud of you. Just a couple of pushes and your little angels will be here Take in a number of breaths, just as we’ve been practicing and then you give us a very big push, okay?”

Vee nodded.

“Thank you.” Dr Natty smiled at her and then went to join the rest of the team.

“You can do it, my love. Hold my hands as tight as you can and let’s push together.”

Just after a couple of pushes, the room was filled with a very loud cry. Oscar burst into tears immediately, crying along with his newborn. He didn’t want to let go of Vicky but he was asked to come and cut the cord so he did that crying, with shaky hands, and then went back to his wife. He kissed her forehead, before going back to holding her hands.

“He’s so perfect. More than we imagined him to be. You can do this baby. Just a few more pushes and his brother will be here too.”

Vicky gave her all and in three minutes, baby number two was out. The cry was even louder than that of baby number one.

“Thank you, God ” Vee mumbled, with tears in her eyes as her head rested on the pillow.

“You did it, baby. I’m so proud of you. We love you so much. Thank you for being so strong.” Oscar said with tears in his eyes, showering kisses all over her face, not caring that they were both sweaty.

His attention was called to cut the cord of the second baby so he did just that. Once Oscar was away from her, a midwife approached Vicky to check all her vitals and ask her a few questions.

Oscar went back to the bedside and saw that she was fast asleep.

“She’s really tired and it’s normal for her to fall asleep after all the hard work that she has done.” The midwife said to Oscar- who nodded.

“We will clean her up so we can transfer her back to the private ward”

“Thank you! He said, smiling at the midwife. They were all so kind and supportive of him and his family since they got in.

“You’re welcome, Mr Wayde.”

Oscar smiled, taking steps to where they were checking up on the twins. He started tearing up all over again when he sighted his boys. One was still crying while the other one had stopped.

They are so small and so alike, I can’t even tell who is who?”

Dr Natalie smiled. “No matter how identical your babies may look, you are going to recognize them because they are yours. You just need to spend a few minutes looking at them then you will be good to go.”

Oscar nodded proudly. "Thank you."

"How are they so far?" He referred to the boys.

"They are perfect. You and your wife did an amazing job in taking care of them."

Oscar smiled even more. "I can't wait for their elder sister to meet them."

Dr Natty smiled, taking a glance at Oscar. "You've got a beautiful family. Congratulations!"

Oscar subsequently went to get changed and cleaned up and now he was back in the private ward waiting for them to bring his wife back.

Since the twins came into the world, he hadn't stopped smiling. Knowing his Wife would want her family and friends to be here so badly, he texted Gabriel about the good news and let Gabriel know that the pilot was on the way to pick him and Lara up with the private jet.

It was just 4:06 a.m., and he wasn't sure if his sister was awake but he was dying to voice the good news out so he decided to dial her number anyway.

Oscar was almost giving up that she wasn't going to pick up when Fedora eventually answered the call.

"You literally called like 6 times yesterday and of course you spoke to Sophie and I assured you that She's doing so well. You needed to call at 4 am to piss me off again! Come on, I can take great care of my niece. Why do you have to doubt that?" From her voice, he could tell that he probably disturbed her sleep.

He knew Fedora not to be a morning person and that hasn't changed a bit.

He chuckled!

"Nothing is funny, Oscar. Sophie is fine and she likes spending time with her aunty and her cousin."

"The Boys are here!" Oscar said proudly.

“The boys? What boys?” Fedora mumbled with a sleepy voice, then it hit her!”

“Holy shit?!!!! The twins are here?”

“How?”

“Fuck! What did I just say? I mean, I know the process it takes for them to be here but when was that?”

“Vee went into labor a few hours ago!”

“Really? And

are just calling me?”

“For someone who almost broke my head for calling around past 4 a.m., you would have definitely murdered me if I had called you by midnight.”

“Come on, I’m not that terrible. I love my nephews and Victoria so much so I would definitely do anything for them. I would have come rushing to meet you guys.”

“You called me countless times yesterday so I thought you were doing the same. I’m your sister, I wouldn’t hurt

“I’m sorry. I never go to bed without reading my daughter a bedtime story. I got so fond of it and we were missing her terribly. That’s why we called multiple times yesterday.”

my niece.”

“The last couple of hours were really insane. I don’t know what to say but it was definitely a life-changing encounter. I was so scared on the inside but I had to appear so strong. I can’t believe that Vicky went through this alone with Sophie.

“We were asleep when she woke me up that her water broke. Calling or reaching out to anyone was the last thing on my mind.”

“It’s fine. How are they? How is Vicky? Do the boys look like me?”

Oscar laughed out loud “Vicky is fine, the twins are fine. They are so identical that I’m scared that I might mistake them for each other. I can’t tell who they look like yet.”

Fedora chuckled, “Don’t be silly. You are their father. You are definitely going to tell them apart no matter the resemblance.”

“The Doctor said so.”

“Vicky was so strong. She did so well. I’m so proud of her.”

“I’m proud of her too. I’m so proud of you all. God, I can’t believe I’m an aunt to twin boys. Congratulations, Oscar!!!”

Oscar blushed, “Thank you, Sis.”

“Oh

my God, Sophie will be so ecstatic. I won’t give her the news yet. Once she and Amie are awake, we will come straight to the hospital. I’ll come with Food for you and Vee. And let me know if you need me to come with anything else.”

“Sure, I will. See you soon.” Oscar said, ending the call.

Oscar offered to lift Vee up from there and put her on the bed after which he tucked her in, placing a deep kiss on/her forehead.

One of the nurses went ahead to adjust the temperature of the room to make sure it was conducive for Vicky and also because the twins would be coming in shortly.

“What about my Sons?” He asked when the nurses were about to take their leave.

“Dr Natalie is still checking them up. But they will be brought in shortly.”

“Thank you!” Oscar smiled at them and once they were out of the room, he went over to the bedside where his wife was. He placed a kiss on her cheek, sat beside her, and intertwined his hand with her right hand.

“You are everything I’ve ever wanted in my life, babe. Thank you for being you. Thank you for your kind heart and thank you for loving me.” He mumbled, staring at her as she slept soundly.

The bed was big enough so Oscar adjusted himself in a way that he could share a bit of space with her. He spent the next few minutes watching her sleep and he had no idea when he fell asleep also.

“Looks like Mommy and Daddy are still resting.” The familiar voice came through followed by whining voices of the babies. That caused both parents to open their eyes and they saw Dr. Natalie pushing a double stroller towards the bed.

“We were here about an hour earlier but you both seem really tired so we decided to let you rest. But these little angels need to be fed.

Oscar kissed his wife on the forehead before helping himself down from the bed.

“My loves,” Vee whispered, her eyes filled with tears and her voice sounding hoarse.

“Can I hold them?”

“Sure, they’ve been dying to meet you.”

Dr Natalie carefully carried the first baby and placed him on her chest while Oscar took out the second baby from the stroller and placed him on the other side of her chest.

Victoria Wayde couldn’t help with the tears that rolled down her cheeks. Her heart felt like it was going to burst with so much pride the moment her babies stopped whining when they were placed on her chest. She had her boys in her arms and she was so grateful for this moment. She leaned close and kissed their little foreheads.
