Chapter 1570

The more Alyssa remained quiet and endured silently, the more Jasper felt bad for her. After some time, Julien hurriedly approached with the test results. "The results are out." The Taylors all stood up, with Alyssa being the first to rush to Julien and take the report. "There's no problem?" She stared at the data on the paper in disbelief.

Julien nodded solemnly. "Surprisingly, there are no issues with the medicine Jameson brought. Not only that, but it's a targeted medicine developed in Mosgravia this year specifically for stroke patients. It's even more effective than the medication Aunt Mandy had."

Amidst their astonishment, hope ignited in their eyes.

Despite feeling relieved, Jasper couldn't shake off his deep sense of guilt and sorrow.

He wished he could have been the one to help Alyssa. But it turned out that Jameson had been the one to offer assistance. "Oh! That's great!" Silas exclaimed excitedly. "If we start giving this medicine to Dad, his illness will be treated, right?" Julien frowned, hesitating to speak.

Seeing his expression, Jonah quickly approached. "Julien, is there a problem?"

"This medicine can be considered a national treasure of Mosgravia. It's not just expensive, but the production is also extremely limited. It's only available to the top elites and royal members of Mosgravia.

"Moreover, this medicine is quite potent. It definitely has side effects. But I can't say for sure what exactly the side effects are." Julien's words rained on the Taylors' parade.

"There will be side effects? We can't use it." Mandy fretted.

"If we cure the stroke but end up with more difficult ailments, how will Winston's body handle it?"

The other two wives also agreed with Mandy.

"Given Mr. Taylor's age and the severity of his illness, the fact that he could be saved is already a stroke of luck. Now, the priority is to get him to wake up. Prolonged unconsciousness will cause irreversible damage to his central nervous system."

Julien's tone was stern, befitting a seasoned professional. "I'm his attending physician. In the hospital, I have the final say on his treatment.

"I'll administer this medicine to him soon. If he wakes up tomorrow, everything will become better. Don't worry too much about the side effects for now. They can be gradually treated as long as they don't pose a life-threatening risk. Let's focus on saving his life first. We can't have everything."

Clenching her teeth, Alyssa made up her mind. "Let's follow Julien's instructions and give Dad the medicine. We can deal with future matters in the future. Besides, Dad is not an ordinary man. A little illness won't defeat him."

Though she spoke confidently, Jasper couldn't fail to notice how much she was suffering.

She was forcing herself to be strong. Meanwhile, upon learning about Winston's serious illness, Landon was deeply concerned.

However, since his inauguration was approaching, he was busy shuttling between the office and the conference room every day. The content is on Read the latest chapter there!

With several major projects to handle, he couldn't even spend time with Lauren in bed. Let Kelp find medical solutions. He had to delegate the task to Angelina for now and promise to think of a solution later. The content is on Read the latest chapter there!

Landon finally managed to free up some time that day, eventually) He went to Winston and met with Jasper and Alyssa.

However, as he stepped out of his office, he received an urgent call from Angelina. Landon's heart skipped a beat. He promptly asked about Lauren's condition.

"Did something happen to Lauren?"
