

Chapter 953 Destroy Them

Observing Liam's firm stance, Gallagher's face darkened. He spoke in a grave tone.

"Must you be so unforgiving? My support could spare you many troubles! I can offer you up-to-date intelligence on the Hoffman family. Your plans might falter without my help!"

Liam sneered dismissively at Gallagher and turned to Carsen. "Carsen, escort Gallagher and Benedict out."

Carsen nodded, promptly moving to detain Benedict and Gallagher.

Realizing Liam was resolute in not collaborating, Gallagher grew desperate and chose a defiant path.

As Carsen escorted them, Gallagher struggled, furiously pulling out his phone and hitting the send button.

With a wild roar, he announced, "Liam, I've alerted the Hoffman family's senior leaders and the Duncan family! They all know of your return and your intentions! You could lead a comfortable life in Salem, but pursuing your former glory will only lead to your downfall! There are many who wish for your demise! The four great families, the Duncan family, and even an unknown force won't let you rise! You stand no intentions! You could lead a comfortable life in Salem, but pursuing your former glory will only lead to your downfall! There are many who wish for your demise! The four great families, the Duncan family, and even an unknown force won't let you rise! You stand no chance against them!"

Liam looked at Gallagher with disdain and coldly retorted, "Your concerns are irrelevant. Your end is near. Carsen, take them away."

Once the two were escorted out, only guests remained, all showing deference to Liam.

Flanked by Bowen and Tristan, Liam grabbed a microphone and spoke assertively. "Many of you here betrayed me, siding with Gallagher. Yet, I won't take your lives. Instead, I'll offer you a chance to redeem yourselves. Whether you seize it or not is up to you."

Hearing Liam's words, the crowd was visibly relieved and became more subservient.

They cautiously replied, "General Liam, we will follow your lead!"

Liam's gaze then shifted to Casper, Lenny, and Elian. He smirked.

"You can start by dismantling the four families: the Carter, Cortez, Williams, and Haynes families. Succeed, and you'll have redeemed yourselves."

As Liam named them, the individuals he mentioned, including Lenny, turned ashen. Kneeling, they pleaded for mercy.

"Liam, we were wrong! Our past actions were a mistake!"

"We recognize our errors. Please, show us mercy!"

"From now on, we won't dare to oppose you!"

Liam's sneer grew more pronounced at their pleas. His voice deep and unforgiving, he said, "If you truly understood your wrongdoing and sought to rectify it, you wouldn't be in this predicament. You've brought this on yourselves."

He left no doubt about their doomed fate.

Lenny, seeing his pleas fall on deaf ears, shouted in desperation, "Liam! I once aided Julie. Your ingratitude and actions are beneath a five-star general! You're nothing but an ungrateful wretch!"

Liam gave Lenny a cold, dismissive look and turned away.

Julie watched silently, her expression cold.

She had seen the true nature of these people. Just as Liam had stated, they had earned their fate.

The guests present paid little heed to the plight of Lenny and his companions.

Liam had extended them an opportunity for redemption, an offer too valuable to overlook.

Seizing the moment, they promptly pulled out their phones, contacting their respective families. They urged their family members to swiftly gather their strength and target the families Liam had specified.

Chapter 953 Destroy Them

 +120 Points at most

Witnessing this, Lenny and his companions grew ghostly pale, their eyes brimming with despair.

Faced with the onslaught of so many united families, their chances of survival dwindled to nothing.

Exchanging glances, they understood a bitter truth: regret was now meaningless; it was far too late.