

Chapter 1160 Spoil His Wife

"Janet started it," Brenna whispered in Ewing's ear.

Ewing gripped his wife's wrist. His voice was calm and even as he said, "Don't make trouble. I organized this dinner for Brandon."

"You..." Annoyed, Brenna shook off his hand and marched away.

"I'm sorry. My wife is not in good spirits. I'll speak to her later. Mr. Larson, please go on and enjoy the party. It's an honor to have you here." With a wry smile, Ewing trotted after Brenna.

"Don't be reckless. Don't you know what all this is for?" Ewing said unhappily. He tugged her sleeve and spoke in a gentle, consoling tone, "You frequently espouse the value of generosity. Why spoil it with pettiness now?"

Normally, Brenna didn't hold grudges. She was the wife of a diplomat and famous for her magnanimity.

However, Janet had embarrassed her in front of so many rich ladies; Brenna could still hear their laughter.

She couldn't just forgive Janet.

"Do you think I do this for myself?" Brenna sounded aggrieved. "I must avenge Mandy. You have no idea how brutally she's been bullied by Janet. She always comes to me, crying." 4

Frowning, Ewing asked, "Why does Mandy always come to you? We won't discuss this tonight. You are the hostess. Brandon represents the outstanding talents we are celebrating, and Janet is his wife. We don't want to become their enemies. Don't forget how much Brandon loves his wife. If you bully her, you will bring the force of the entire Larson Group against us!"

Brenna understood what he meant, so she followed him back to Brandon.

Brandon looked angry, and the atmosphere in the house became tense. "You have disrespected me. In the future, I will avoid attending any event that has Ewing Olson on its guest list." 2

His words caused a sensation.

Brandon's calm expression made him even more intimidating. He said, "My wife and I are one. I invited her here tonight, and I didn't expect her to be so disrespected. Ewing, is this your idea of entertaining guests?"

Embarrassed, Ewing said, "Mr. Larson, there must be some misunderstanding."

They had heard that Brandon loved his wife, and today they witnessed how strong that bond was.

Seeing her husband in such a dilemma, Brenna apologized to Janet, "I'm sorry for what happened just now, Mrs. Larson. I wanted to protect Mandy, and I am ashamed to admit that I lost my temper. I will contact the media and explain my mistake with regards to the service I received from W Marks."

Janet glanced at Brandon and then at Brenna. "Thank you."

Brandon nodded approvingly and smiled.

Brenna and Ewing were relieved. Smiling, Ewing announced, "Mr. Larson was just kidding."

Brandon didn't argue. Before Janet could say anything, she was pulled onto the dance floor by her husband. The two danced beautifully.

At the outer edges of the party, Mandy stamped her feet. She looked at Draco next to her and complained, "What did Mrs. Olson do wrong? It

Chapter 1160 Spoil His Wife

 +90 Points at most was obviously Janet's fault. She was being very impolite."

 I want no ads >