Chapter 1011

He agreed to her unreasonable request and tolerated the fact that she robbed him mainly because she saved his life before. If anyone else did such things, he would have shown them no mercy.

“No way. I want it no!” Ruth said.

“Why you! Ruth Collins, I’m warning you. You better take the deal. If you continue to be this unreasonable, I will make sure that you never get your hands on the entire Mysterious Maiden Method no matter what you do!” He roared.

“But,” She hesitated when she saw the anger in his eyes.

She knew that Leon would have never put up with her if she did not save him and since he already agreed to give her the completed Mysterious Maiden Method in the future, there was no point for her to push Leon to the point where he lost his temper.

“Leon, what is it? How’s my grandpa?” Seeing the look on his face, Iris’s heart sank.

“Iris, Elder Young is in a critical state. I think someone attacked him and damaged his central nerves connecting to his brain, which caused him to fall unconscious,” Leon explained.

When he first learnt that Albert fell sick, he assumed that Albert’s pre-existing illness resurfaced again. However, judging from the current condition, Albert was attacked.

"Back when the Holy Doctor saw Grandpa, he reminded me repeatedly to get Leon to look at Grandpa again. I was confused as to what he meant at the time, but looking at it right now, he might have certain difficulties. that prevented him from telling us the truth!"

Iris recalled the hesitant look on Graham's face when he treated Albert and the more she thought about it, the more she realized that there was more to the story.

"Iris, it's bad enough that Leon is running his mouth, why are you agreeing along?" Gilbert gaped at Iris.

"I'm not just agreeing along! Dad, the truth is right before our eyes. Can you stop being so stubborn?" She said angrily, "I was about to listen to Graham's advice and call Leon over, and you were the one who stopped me! If you didn't stop me, Leon would've cured Grandpa a long time ago and the two of us wouldn't suffer this much!"

Gilbert was rendered speechless, because he knew that Iris was right.

"The Shears are the biggest supplier for raw medical ingredients, so who else would have the ability to find a wild Panax that has grown for three hundred years? You might as well say that you can't treat him!" Gilbert scoffed.

Most of the herbs and raw materials for medical purposes were managed by the Shears and while other families might be able to obtain some, any herb that grew for hundreds of years was hard to come back.

Since Gilbert was denounced from the Youngs and lost everything, he could not obtain such a thing.

"That's right! The Shears might have it!" Iris's eyes lit up, "Leon, why don't you visit the Shears and see if Cynthia can help get a wild Panax that has grown for three hundred years?"

Before Leon could say anything, Gilbert blurted out, "Iris, have you gone mad? Everyone in Springfield City knows that the Shears have turned their backs on Leon! You are sending him to his death if you send him to the Shears!" Gilbert gaped at Iris.

"But," Cynthia stilled.
She knew that what Leon said made sense. Though Iris agreed to Leon seeing her, the love triangle between them was far too odd to be accepted by the Shears.
She only made peace with Leon in secret and he was still considered an enemy to other Shears.
If she alerted Benedict about what happened, it would not benefit Leon or her in any way.

Leon grabbed her hand and said shamelessly, "Cynthia, if you believe me now, can you give me the Panax?"

"No way! I said no!" He snorted and pulled her hand away from his grip.

"Why not?" His jaw dropped. He thought that he managed to appease her anger, but women were simply far to read and he underestimated how angry she was.

"I'm upset that all you think of is Iris! Is there a problem?!" Cynthia said wilfully.

"But," Leon widened his eyes, "Cynthia, why would you do this to yourself? You know better than anyone that I love Iris and if possible, I would much rather be your friend forever," Leon sighed and said.

"Cynthia, I remember that I never got to finish my massage for you. I owe you a massage. Are you tired now? Do you feel like having a massage?" He smiled endearingly as he switched to a different tactic.

"You still remember? I guess you're not that horrible after all!" Cynthia scoffed and beamed at him.

It was not that Leon fawned over her that made her happy, but the fact that he remembered the details of the time they spent together. Though it was only a massage, she was over the moon that he cared enough to remember.

"Of course! Cynthia, why don't you lay down? I'll give you a massage!" Leon said enthusiastically, knowing that he used the correct tactic and that it would only take him some time to cheer Cynthia up.

Cynthia sat on her leather chair and lifted her legs wrapped in black stockings and placed them on Leon's lap to enjoy his massage.

Her concern was that the Shears might not have the wild Panax Leon looked for and Leon looked for it elsewhere.

"You'll regret it for not listening to your father! I told you that Leon doesn't have what it takes to get the Panax from the Shears! After what he did to them, asking the Shears for help is just as good as asking to be killed! I told you not to do it, but you just won't listen. Look what happens!" Gilbert snorted smugly. He already warned Leon not to go to the Shears, so if Leon died, he would have no one but himself to blame.

"Who said that I can't get the Panax?" Leon strode into the room calmly.

"Leon! You're fine!" Gilbert was shocked to see Leon return safely.

He thought that Leon would at least be severely injured by the Shears and did not expect him to be completely fine.

"Iris, I'm going to make this into medicine. Once I'm done, I'll start treating Elder Young," Leon said.

"Sure. I'll go with you!" Iris said, before leaving the room with Leon.

Gilbert was left in the room as he stood alone blankly.

Inside the kitchen, Leon cut one fifth of the Panax and boiled it in water to make the medicine for Young.
