The Ex-Husband's Revenge Chapter 901

"Damn it!"

"Leon's such a lucky guy to have escaped the Northern King, the Youngs and the Fields."

"Yeah, what a shame!"

As the others watched while Leon disappeared into the distance, they were all disappointed.

Cynthia and Iris were the most beautiful women in the city, yet one committed suicide for Leon, while the other had her heart broken because of him.

Because of that, most of the men resented Leon and desperately wished to witness his demise, but since even Harold and the Fields failed to kill Leon, they knew that they would not stand a chance and could only watch as Leon left.

Most importantly, Leon already refused to get back together with Iris and Gilbert decided that he preferred Anson as his future son-in-law, so he was not at all pleased to see Leon.

"Uncle Gilbert, Iris is injured and I'm here to treat her," Leon said sheepishly, unable to see Gilbert's eyes.

Gilbert was Iris's father, after all, and since Iris committed suicide because of him, Leon did not know how he could face Gilbert.

"What?!" Shocked, Gilbert focused on Iris, who laid in Leon's arms and soon noticed the blood stain before her chest.

The dagger stabbed into her chest was removed by Leon, but the blood stain remained.

"No way. I'm staying right here to watch!" Gilbert said.

"I'm staying, too!" Louisa bit down on her lips.

Both of them were too worried about Iris to walk away.

"Um, okay, then! Remember! It's fine for you to stay, but you need to stay as far away as possible and you mustn't interrupt me!" Leon said hesitantly.

He could understand how they felt and did not force them to leave the room.

Louisa nodded. "Of course. We won't bother you."

Once everything was ready, Leon turned his attention to Iris, before pressing his fingers onto her. Energy flowed through his fingers and into her body, gradually repairing the damaged internal

He assumed that Leon could not save Iris and launched a punch against Leon at the speed of lightning.

"Uncle Gilbert, th- that's not what this is. Let me explain!" Startled, Leon tried to move away, but he ran out of spiritual energy and had no strength to fight back.

"Uncle, no!" Louisa paled and stood before Leon without hesitation to shield him from Gilbert's attack.

Not wanting to injure Louisa, Gilbert came to a sudden halt and shouted, "Louisa, move out of the way. I'm going to kill him today!"

"Calm down, Uncle. It's impossible to revive the dead. Leon has already tried his best," Louisa's eyes reddened.

Though Iris was revived, she was still in a critical condition and could still die at any moment.

Leon desperately needed to bring her to a place filled with spiritual energy to wake her as soon as possible.

Fortunately, the peak of the back mountain was perfect.

It was the place where Leon started his training, and not only was the peak filled with spiritual energy, he even buried jadeites to create an Energy Convergence Circle. With the circle's help, he was certain that he could save Iris.

"Okay. We'll follow you wherever you take Iris," Gilbert said.

"I'm not dead? How's that possible?" Iris gasped in disbelief, but soon recovered. "Leon, were you the one who saved me?"

"Yeah. I told you I'd bring you back, and I did," Leon held Iris close and shed tears of joy.

He promised to save Iris multiple times, but he was not confident at all since Iris's injury was extremely severe, but the gods were merciful and he had a miracle to his pleasant surprise.

"I see. But, what about Cynthia Shear? I thought that you were getting engaged to her," Iris thought back to what happened before she committed suicide.

"I've called off the engagement," Leon's heart sank when he recalled the sorrowful, yet hopeful look in Cynthia's eyes when she left, his excitement for Iris's revival weakening at the memories.

She was a kind-hearted person all along and she truly regretted hurting Cynthia.
However, love was always selfish in nature and though she felt remorse, she would never allow Leon to go back to Cynthia.
"Forget it. Iris, you're weak right now and you need rest. Let's head back down," Leon said, setting his thoughts about Cynthia aside.
"Okay." She struggled to get up with Leon's help.
"I'll carry you." Leon bent down and lifted Iris up, before heading down the mountain.

roared when he saw Iris laying still in Leon's arms. He assumed that Leon failed to wake Iris and that Iris might already be dead.

In the midst of his sorrow, he gathered his true energy in his fists and was about to Never did he imagine that his grandfather would help Leon escape from the Fields instead of taking the chance to eliminate Leon.

Anson did not dare to defy George in public and decided to suppress his anger at the time. However, as soon as he returned home, he immediately gathered a few martial artists and hurried over to seek revenge against Leon.

Since Leon left with Iris in his arms, it was not hard to guess that Leon came to Dragonbay Villas.

Everyone witnessed Iris's death at the engagement party for Leon and Cynthia, yet Iris stood before them, alive and well; they paled as though they saw a ghost.

"Shut your mouth, Anson Collins! Iris is alive. Stop calling her a ghost!" Louisa shouted in annoyance.

"What?! Is Iris alive? H- How's that possible?!" Anson froze in shock.

He saw Iris committing suicide with his own eyes and he could not believe that she was still alive.

"Anson, what Louisa said is true. Leon cured Iris and woke her up," Gilbert explained.
