Chapter 1247

“Ren, could you pass the salad to Sopluc? She can't get that far,” Charlotte reminded her son to be a little more proactive in these things.

Ren put down the fork and grabbed the salad bowl. Then, he placed it in front of Sophie and said, “Here you go, Miss Liamson.”

Charlotte almost rolled her eyes. You can at least put some salad on your plate.

On the contrary, Sophie was certainly disappointed. She expected Ren to serve her a portion of the salad, but he gave her the whole plate. He could have been gentlemanly, but he wasn't romantic. At that point, Ren put down his utensils and said to his parents, “Excuse me, but I must go back to work.”

“Maybe you can take Sophie. It's always good to have company, no matter how short the journey is,” Charlotte interjected.

“I really appreciate it, Ren,” Sophie chimed in before she could decline.

He nodded. “Very good. Come with me, then.”

Sophie's eyes lit up instantly. I was excited to be in the same car as him. It would be the perfect setting for them to meet. She had planned everything because she intended to hold his hand and tell him clearly that she liked him. This was his time to shine.

And he wouldn't let it slip through his fingers.

They strolled under the night sky to the garage next to the garden where four black limousines were parked. Elijah came to them and respectfully greeted Ren, "Mr. Husson."

"Elijah, did you mention earlier that you have something important to report?" asked Ren as he stared at his assistant.

Elijah initially frowned, but soon understood and nodded as he said, "Yes, that's right. It's crucial and I need to let you know right away, or it will become even more chaotic."

Well, then. Let's have this discussion in the car, okay?" Ren then looked at Sophic and said, "I'm sorry, Miss Liamson, but it looks like you'll have to take the other car."

"I-I promise you that I will not be a bother." Sophic made a feeble effort to save his chance to ride in the same car with him.
