Chapter 871

“What on earth are you guys talking about? I can’t make heads or tails of it!” Cornelia stared at the two people in front of her, her best friends, the companions she had grown up with since childhood.

However, at this moment, their faces seemed alien to her, she felt like she didn’t even recognize them anymore.

Abigail stepped forward, trying to hug her, but Cornelia quickly backed away, avoiding them as if they were poisonous snakes or wild beasts. “You’re not Abigail and Zack. The real Abigail and Zack would never say such things.”

Cornelia kept her distance from them, looking at them as if they were strangers. Her eyes were full of alienation and caution. “Tell me, who are you really? Why are you pretending to be my best friends?”

“Cornelia, we are Abigail and Zack... Abigail and Zack were very worried seeing Cornelia like this.

Afraid that Cornelia’s emotional outburst might lead to something rash, Abigail quickly tried to soothe her, “Alright, we’ll stop talking. If you don’t want to hear it, we won’t say it.”

Right now, stabilizing her emotions was the most important task.

“No, you’re not Abigail and Zack... Tell me the truth, who are you?” As she questioned them, Cornelia noticed Marcus arriving.

She immediately ran towards Marcus, “Marcus, these two are impersonating my friends, tell them to leave and bring back the real Abigail and Zack.”

Marcus picked Cornelia up and made her sit on the nearby couch. He knelt in front of her, helping her put on her shoes. “Cornelia, we’ve prepared everything for Granny Rebecca’s funeral. Before she’s taken to the funeral home, go say your last goodbyes to her.”

Cornelia’s gaze changed from dependent to detached as she looked at him.

“You’re also impersonating Marcus. You must be a fake Marcus...”

She jumped off the couch, trying to run away, but Marcus didn’t give her a chance to escape. He knew it was better to face what had to be faced sooner rather than later. “Cornelia, you know this isn’t a dream. Avoiding reality is not a brave act. Your grandma wouldn’t want to see you like this. She’d want you to face reality and be a brave, positive, and optimistic girl.”

Cornelia covered her head and started screaming, “Stop talking, I beg you, stop talking. She’s fine, why are you saying such weird things? What did I do wrong?”

Marcus, “Cornelia!”

As though she suddenly realized something. Cornelia started laughing. “I know, I'm still dreaming. You're all part of my dream... Leave, I don't want to dream about you anymore."

She reached out and pinched herself hard, "Why does it hurt? Am I not dreaming?"

Marcus said sternly, "Cornelia, you know very well you're not dreaming. Stop lying to yourself. Your grandma can't lie there forever. The hearse from the funeral home will be here in half an hour.

You have half an hour to think about whether you want to see your grandma one last time. Or you can continue to hide inside your protective shell, like a turtle."

Cornelia lifted her head and looked quietly at Marcus.

He thought she had come to her senses, that she was about to accept reality. However, she just stared at him quietly, not uttering a single word, as if she was looking at a stranger. "Who are you? What right do you have to criticize me?"

Marcus, "..."

Cornelia, "If you criticize me, I'll tell my grandma. Let me tell you, even though I don't have a mom and dad, my grandma loves me very much. She won't let you awful people bully me."

Chapter 872

Cornelia grew up parentless and was often bullied by other kids in elementary school, a fact that both Abigail and Zack were well aware of Back then, little Cornelia couldn't defeat those bullies. When others bullied her, she would do just as she did now, telling them that she had her grandmother, and her grandmother would protect her.

But those bully kids wouldn't back off just because of her words. Instead, they'd bully her even more whenever she threatened to tell her Grandma, and they wouldn't even let her go home to snitch.

Luckily, her Grandma spotted something was off and found out about her troubles in school. She talked to the school teachers, and that put an end to the bullying

In Cornelia's eyes, even though her Grandma was now old and didn't do things as well as Cornelia herself, she was still her hero. Her Granny Rebecca was the superhero who protected her. She was the irreplaceable superhero in her heart!

They all knew how much Granny Rebecca meant to Cornelia. Everyone knew she couldn't bear to face the fact that Granny Rebecca was gone, and they all wished she could accept it sooner and start a new life.

"Zack, Abby, come..." Cornelia walked towards Zack and Abigail, taking each of their hands, "Zack, Abby, my Granny said your parents are working late today and won't be home until late. So, you guys are coming to my place after school. We're going to have dinner and do our homework together"

Both Abigail and Zack turned to look at Marcus.

Marcus made the decision straight away, "Just go along with it for now. She hasn't eaten in hours, just coax her into having a meal.

Abigail and Zack nodded and said to Cornelia, "Let's have dinner first then, we'll do homework afterwards."

"Alright, let's eat first." Cornelia led them towards the dining room, "My Granny must've made something delicious for us. Make sure you two eat a lot."

Abigail hugged Cornelia, "Nelly..."

Cornelia looked at her, "Abby, what's wrong? Don't you always love the food my Granny makes? You don't look too happy today."

Abigail replied, "I'm not unhappy, I'm just..."

Cornelia asked, "What? Having trouble with today's homework? Don't worry, if there's anything you don't understand, you can ask my Granny. She loves kids who study hard."

Abigail nodded vigorously, "Alright."

Cornelia turned to Zack, "Zack, what's up with you? You're usually the chatterbox, why so quiet today?"

Being immersed in past memories can be blissful, but it can also have unexpected consequences. Zack didn't want to see Cornelia continue like this. He wanted to pull her back to reality, "Nelly, come with me."

Without thinking twice, he grabbed Cornelia and headed towards the room where Granny Rebecca's body laid. He was strong, and Cornelia was pulled along by the arm to Granny Rebecca's side.

He pointed at Granny Rebecca's body and said, "Cornelia, look closely, your Granny's gone. She can't cook for us anymore. She can't tutor us on our homework anymore..."

Chapter 873

Granny Rebecca was lying there still as a statue, looking like she was just taking a nap. If it wasn't for the fact that she wasn't breathing, you wouldn't have guessed that she had passed away.

Cornelia lifted her eyes and looked at Granny Rebecca silently, not moving at all. No one knew what she was thinking at that moment.

Zack, standing beside her, said, "Cornelia, take a good look now. Remember what your granny looks like because you're not gonna see her again."

Abigail nudged Zack, whispering, "Zack, cut it out. Don't push Cornelia too hard. Give her some time to process."

But Zack was hell-bent on pushing Cornelia to the edge, hoping she could find some hope in her desperation. "Cornelia, your granny always hoped you'd be a brave and strong girl. In her eyes, you always were. But now, you can't even face reality. Where's the brave and strong girl she saw in you? You're acting like a scaredy-cat. If your granny knew how weak you're being, she'd be so disappointed."

"Everyone out, I want to talk to my granny alone." Maybe Zack's words struck a chord, but Cornelia finally spoke up, her voice steady, her emotions under control. But that calmness in her was equally worrying.

Zack and Abigail turned their pleading eyes to Marcus. "Marcus..."

Without hesitation, Marcus said, "You guys go ahead. Give her some time alone with Granny Rebecca."

Even though Abigail and Zack were worried, they left. They hadn't interacted with Marcus much, but as long as he was there, they felt at ease. They believed that Marcus could help Cornelia through this pain.

Abigail and Zack left, but Marcus stayed. He stood behind Cornelia, not saying anything, just quietly waiting.

Eventually, Cornelia said, "You should go too. I want to be alone with my granny for a while."

To Marcus, any normal word from Cornelia was a sign of improvement. He believed that given a little more time, Cornelia would come to terms with Granny Rebecca's departure and adjust her emotions. All he could do now was to make her aware that she still had him.

Marcus walked up to her and embraced her. "Cornelia, remember what you said today. No matter what happens, you've got me. I'm always by your side."

"You'll always be with me?" Cornelia scoffed and said, "My granny also said she'd always be with me. But she still left me."

Marcus replied, "We can't control life and death. Death is a fact of life that we all have to face. It's something that can't be changed. Only death can separate us."

He added, "We're all here for you. If you need anything, just holler."

Chapter 874

Cornelia didn't respond, but Marcus knew she had heard him. After he had said his piece, he left Granny Rebecca's room, even thoughtfully closing the door behind him for

Cornelia

As he stepped outside, he saw Abigail and Zack eavesdropping at the door. Those two really took after Cornelia in some ways. "Go wait in the living room. Quit snooping around here."

"But Nelly's in there all by herself, we can't just leave her," Abigail said.

"Trust her, was Marcus' reply.

Abigail and Zack wanted to stick around, but seeing Marcus' confidence made them decide to follow him to the living room.

As she called out to her grandmother, she couldn't help but cry. Her heart ached as if it was being carved out, making it hard for her to breathe. It took her some time to calm herself down before she could continue. "Granny, it's been a while since we had a proper chat. Let's talk today."

Granny Rebecca's hand was cold and stiff, but Cornelia held it against her face. "Granny, are you upset with me for not having a baby like you wanted? Granny, I've been trying to get pregnant. If you could wake up, you'd be holding my baby in a few months."

But no matter what Cornelia said, Granny Rebecca didn't respond. Cornelia knew her grandmother couldn't respond anymore, but she still held out hope for a miracle, hoping Granny Rebecca could come back to life.

She waited, and waited, but the miracle she was hoping for never came.

Alone in the room, only her voice echoed. "Granny, have you really left me? Do you know how important you are to me? You must know, you must know how much you mean to me, yet you still left me.

"Granny, do you remember what you told me when I was 18? You said if I worked hard and got into a good university, you'd grant me a wish.

"I did work hard and got into the University of Riverton. When you asked me what I wanted, I said I wanted you to always be with me. You laughed and agreed, saying you'll be there for me, through my wedding, through childbirth, till I become a granny myself..."

Thinking about this, Cornelia couldn't help but smile. Those times felt so real, as if they just happened yesterday.

"And all those years when I was little, you always let me make a wish. I always wished for you to be with me, to never leave me. You asked me what I wished for, but I never told you the truth because I heard that if you say it out loud, it won't come true.

"If I knew then that even unsaid wishes won't come true, I would have told you, so that you would know how important you are to me. Granny, I'd give up everything just to have you wake up and be with me."

If possible, Cornelia would trade everything she owns for her grandmother's life. But she knew that even the most precious thing in the world couldn't bring her grandmother back.

The clearer she realized this, the more it hurt.

She had to suppress her pain, so she could continue talking to her grandmother. "Granny, I know you've been blaming yourself for me being framed. You think it's your fault for not protecting me, leading me to be left without a home."

Chapter 875

"You might think that incident had a huge impact on my life, a stain that can't be wiped clean... but that's not quite right. We're the victims here, why should someone else's mistake become the stain on our lives?

"I used to think the same way you do, just like a lot of people I was scared that people would criticize me because of it, scared that they'd look at me with judgemental eyes.

"Then I met Marcus, who firmly told me that such things shouldn't make the victims feel shameful, it's the perpetrators who should face the severe punishment of the law." Speaking of Marcus, Cornelia continued the conversation, "Granny, I know you like Marcus a lot. He's indeed a great husband, not only rich and influential but also handsome with a good physique. Men like him are rare. I'm lucky to have met him and I will cherish him, so you can rest assured.

"More importantly, Marcus is a really good person, he treats me so well that sometimes it feels like I'm dreaming

“He just told me that he will always be with me, but I’m scared to believe it. I’m scared that if I believe it, he might suddenly leave me one day just like you...” Cornelia reckoned, “if you harbor hopes, you’ll face disappointments. If you don’t expect anything, there’ll be no disappointments.”

She dared not to have high expectations of Marcus now, because even her granny could leave her, maybe Marcus would deceive her too...

“Granny, my mom left me, my dad left me, and you left me... did I really annoy you all? If not, why wouldn’t you all stay with me longer?”

As she spoke, tears rolled down her cheeks like a flood breaking through a dam, and she couldn’t control her emotions, “But I’ve always behaved.”

“I’ve been obedient since I was a child. Anything you didn’t want me to do, I didn’t do. Whatever you wanted me to do, I did. I’ve been so good, why did you all leave me?”

Sometimes, Cornelia would wonder, if she had been a naughty child, would her parents not have left her?

“Granny, is it because I married Marcus, you thought he could take care of me for a lifetime, so you don’t have to worry about me anymore, that’s why you left me? If that’s the case, I definitely wouldn’t have listened to you and got married. I’d be a child who makes you worry, as long as you’re constantly worrying about me, you wouldn’t leave.”

Cornelia spoke and thought in confusion. She said a lot, a lot of things she had thought about but never spoken out loud.

Some of the things she said, she had said to her granny countless times. She kept repeating them, because this was the last time she could talk to her granny.

From then on, she would never have the chance again.

She had completely lost her granny.

She didn’t have her granny anymore. In this world, there were no more family related to her by blood.

On the other side.

Chapter 876

Zack paced anxiously in the living room, finally staring at Marcus Hartley, but his demeanor was instantly suppressed by Marcus’ serious gaze “Marcus.”

Marcus glanced at him “Speak.”

Zack gathered his courage and said. “Cornelia has been in there for over two hours by herself Shouldn't we go check on her? If something happens to her, won't you feel guilty?"

Abigail nodded beside him. "Yes, if something happens to Cornelia, we'll feel guilty for the rest of our lives."

Compared to their anxious mood, Marcus remained calm as if he didn't care. "You both grew up with her, so you should know her better than I do. Cornelia is a very strong girl, and once she overcomes this difficulty, there won't be anything that can bring her down in the future."

"Strong" Zack sneered "What more do you want from her?"

Marcus raised an eyebrow at Zack but didn't say anything.

Zack continued "When she was very young, her father left her, and she was forced to grow up and be strong. Later on, no matter what happened, she learned to endure, learned to be strong, because besides her grandmother, she had no one else to rely on. But it's different now. She has you. You need to be her solid support, you need to protect her, take care of her, and let her know that sometimes she doesn't have to be so strong

Marcus said, "I am her solid support, I am her reliance, I will take care of her, protect her, but she is still an independent individual. She is not my appendage, and there are some difficulties she must overcome on her own. After overcoming those difficulties, she will truly feel relieved in her heart."

He could protect Cornelia, take care of her like a flower in a greenhouse, but he believed that wasn't what Cornelia wanted.

Marcus believed that a marriage was always a mutual support system, and both parties had to grow together for the relationship to be more enduring. In life, there were many cases where couples were compatible before marriage, but after getting married, one person couldn't keep up with the other, gradually losing confidence, and the gap between them grew, leading to divorce.

If he wanted his marriage with Cornelia to last, he had to let her grow with him, become stronger, and not fall behind. And this time, Cornelia had to figure it out on her own and become strong, or else she would remain in pain.

"When will the funeral home people come?"

Just as they were discussing, Cornelia came out and calmly asked Marcus about the situation. Marcus was slightly stunned, then said, "The staff and the car are already waiting outside. As long as you agree, they can take Granny Rebecca's body away."

Granny Luisa, who had been busy handling Granny Rebecca's affairs, said to Cornelia, "Nelly, once she's at the funeral home, she will be cremated, and only her ashes will be left. We can let your grandmother stay with us for a few more days, so she can spend more time with us. I have already prepared a refrigeration device, which can ensure that your grandmother's body will not deteriorate for two days"

Riverton's weather was very hot, so if you wanted to store a corpse at home for two more days without it rotting, you had to use a lot of refrigeration devices, which was a complicated and expensive process. However, Cornelia didn't want her grandmother to be refrigerated after her death. "Granny Luisa, don't bother. I want to cremate my grandmother's body as soon as possible and send her back to Rosenberg for burial."

Chapter 877

The tradition here was that people wish to return to their birthplace when they kicked the bucket, to rest in peace there. Ever since Granny Rebecca moved to Riverton, she hadn't mentioned heading back to Rosenberg to Cornelia, but Cornelia could feel the homesickness in her

She decided to take her granny back to Rosenberg to lay her to rest next to her grandpa and dad, so they could look out for each other in the afterlife. Granny Luisa was not keen on parting ways with her good friend, but she respected Cornelia's wishes and didn't put up a fuss. "Alright, we'll go with your plan

Cornelia said, "Thanks"

Granny Luisa patted Cornelia's head, "Nelly, remember what your granny told you. From now on, me, Bri, and Marc are your family"

Briana stepped forward and hugged Cornelia tightly, "I'll protect you from now on, I'll be there for you. In short, I won't let anyone mess with you"

Patricia also said, "Nelly, you've got me too. I'm about the same age as your parents, if you don't mind, I take care of you like my own child"

"Thank you all!" Cornelia managed a small smile, amidst the pain of losing her granny, she felt their kindness and warmth.

The cremation went smoothly and was completed the next morning. After the cremation, Cornelia planned to take her granny's ashes back to Rosenberg for burial. As Cornelia's husband, Marcus would naturally accompany her back to Rosenberg. Abigail and Zack also planned to accompany Cornelia back to Rosenberg, even though Cornelia didn't want them to, they insisted on going. Rosenberg was a dangerous place for Cornelia. Last time she went back to Rosenberg to fetch her sick granny, they didn't accompany her and deeply regretted it. They were hell-bent on going with her

This time,

Once they resolved to accompany Cornelia, Granny Luisa and Briana also found a reason to stick to going to Rosenberg. If they were heading to Rosenberg. Patricia couldn't possibly stay behind

So in the end, a total of six people accompanied Cornelia back to Rosenberg
For convenience, Marcus arranged for a private jet, flying directly from Riverton's airport to Rosenberg's
The Hartley Group also had investments in Rosenberg, and their enterprises ranked amongst the top five in Rosenberg's top ten industries. The Hartley Group contributed more than half of Rosenberg's GDP
This was a personal trip for Marcus and Cornelia, so he instructed the person in charge to prepare a seven-seater minivan for their convenience in Rosenberg, and didn't want any company staff involved in other matters.
The person in charge was named Dylan, who had worked with Marcus for many years and had earned his trust. He also understood Marcus' character well.
Knowing that Marcus liked to keep a low profile, when Marcus asked him to prepare a vehicle, Dylan personally arranged it and delivered it to the airport himself, not letting a second person know
When Dylan saw Marcus and Cornelia coming out of the airport's VIP passage, he quickly went to greet them, "President Hartley, Ms. Stewart, welcome to Rosenberg to inspect our work"
Then, he noticed Granny Luisa was also there, and immediately became nervous, "Granny Luisa, what brings you here?"
Granny Luisa answered, "Why can't I be in Rosenberg?"
Dylan responded, "You sure know how to joke."
Granny Luisa said, "Dylan, there's no need to worry, we're here in Rosenberg to handle personal matters, not to inspect your work."
Hearing that they were not there to inspect his work, Dylan let out a sigh of relief.

Dylan took his job seriously and was not afraid of inspections from his superiors. But this time, with both President Hartley and Granny Luisa visiting and keeping their visit low profile to the point that only he knew about their schedule, he felt a bit nervous. Dylan suspected that something big was about to happen

n. He felt uneasy until Granny Luisa said it was a private matter, and then he breathed a sigh of relief

He said "Granny Luisa, President Hartley, if you need anything, please don't hesitate to ask. I am more familiar with Rosenberg than you are, so if there's anything that needs to be handled, I should be able to handle it better"

Marcus nodded "Give me the car keys You can go now"

Dylan quickly handed over the car keys. "Okay"

The business car had seven seats, but no driver, so someone had to be responsible for driving Naturally, the task fell on Zack, who was more familiar with Rosenberg To help Cornelia, Zack didn't complain at all "Are we going straight home?"

Cornelia clutched Granny Rebecca's urn tightly and nodded. "Yes"

Granny Rebecca had a house in Rosenberg Last year, when Granny Rebecca became ill, Cornelia took her to Riverton, and Granny Rebecca asked Cornelia to sell the house, saying that she would never return to this heartbreaking place again.

At the time. Cornelia was worried that Robison would take over the house. She thought that she could sell it for some money and save it for Granny Rebecca's retirement, so she gave the information to a real estate agent

A few days later, when someone called her asking if she wanted to sell the house, she changed her mind and decided not to sell it. She and her grandmother had lived in that house for so many years, and it was filled with memories of their family. It was also a place that Granny Rebecca valued. As long as the house was still there, no matter where Granny Rebecca went, she could feel secure, knowing that she had a place to stay.

So Cornelia didn't sell the house, and kept it for Granny Rebecca.

Zack was more familiar with the route from the airport to their neighborhood than the navigation system. He drove the car with everyone and headed straight for their neighborhood

When they arrived outside the neighborhood, he parked the car on the side of the road “Nelly, you take them out of the car first. Abby and I will go to the market to buy some food We might have guests tonight”

Cornelia said, “Thank you for your help.”

Patricia said, “I am familiar with cooking. I will go with you.”

Zack said. “Okay.”

This neighborhood was an old one, and many of the people living there were acquaintances. The incident where Cornelia was attacked also happened here. After that incident, Cornelia never returned to this place.

Now she was back, and with a tall and handsome man by her side.

As they walked into the neighborhood, someone commented on her, “Is that Cornelia? I heard she said she would never come back to Rosenberg, so why is she suddenly back?”

“Does she dare to come back? Isn’t she afraid of Orlando’s family hurting her?”

“Yes, if everyone hadn’t stopped them, Orlando’s family might have already disfigured her face

“That man with her looks really handsome I wonder who he is to her.”

“I guess he might be her boyfriend That man probably doesn’t know about the bad things she did in the past, otherwise, how could he choose her?”

“And the old lady and the little girl with her both look very elegant. I wonder what their identities are”

“That guy and the little girl kinda look alike, maybe they’re siblings. The old lady could be their grandma”

“I bet they’re all smitten by Cornelia’s beauty”

“Are Robison and his wife home? They should have a word with that guy. Definitely can’t let that shameless girl have it too easy”

As they were talking the man in the distance suddenly looked up at them. Just a quick glance, and they all shivered in fear

“That guy’s got some scary eyes”

“Do you think he’s a fugitive?”

“Could be, why else would he be with Cornelia?”

“Should we call the cops? Get them arrested”

“Call the cops! We can’t have a murderer in our neighborhood”

“I don’t think he’s a criminal though. Doesn’t have the look or vibe of one.”

“You can’t judge a book by its cover.”

As they were heatedly discussing they saw Cornelia walking towards them with a smile.

Cornelia couldn’t hear exactly what they were saying, but she knew it wasn’t anything good. “Leila, you’re Leila right? And you, you’re Marina?”

This time, facing their comments, Cornelia didn’t avoid them but walked over with a smile, “Long time no see, how’ve you been?”

Cornelia greeted with a smile, and they responded quite friendly on the surface, “Yeah, it’s been a while! What brings you back?”

But compared to Cornelia, they were more interested in the strangers behind her, who all had quite an impressive demeanor, “And who might these people be?”

Cornelia introduced them openly. "This is my husband, this is his grandma, and this is his sister."

"Your husband? You're married?" Leila's daughter's husband looked like a durian with a bumpy face that made one want to puke just looking at it

Cornelia's husband was so good looking, even better than TV stars. Seeing him made her feel quite bitter. Her daughter's husband being not good, she didn't want other's daughters to have good ones either, so she said with a sarcastic tone, "Do they know about what you did in Rosenberg? Bet they don't!"

"What did she do in Rosenberg?" Marcus stepped in front of Cornelia, blocking those malicious gazes, "You better have evidence, or else you're just slandering. You know what slander is, right? If you don't, you can look it up online"

And there was Grandma Luisa, there was no way she'd let anyone bully Cornelia, "You're all women. We shouldn't be giving each other a hard time. We know what kind of person Cornelia is, and we certainly don't need you gossipers judging. If I hear you slandering her again, I won't let it slide"

Briana also stood up for Cornelia, "She's the best girl in the world, and if anyone dares slander her, I won't let it slide either."

Every member of this family exuded a powerful vibe, especially Marcus.

He stepped in front of Cornelia, his imposing aura causing the group of gossiping women to step back. The family came together to protect Cornelia, making her feel like she wasn't alone anymore, and it felt really nice to be protected.

She looked up at them, and though words of gratitude were beyond her, she silently looked them to heart, "Granny Luisa, Br let's head upstairs and not argue with them"

Cornelia led them towards the elevator She knew the way so well that she went ahead, not expecting to run into another woman, who was Robison's wife Cristina

The last time Cornelia returned to Rosenberg she had a run in with them. Today, Cristina came up to her as if nothing had happened 'Nelly, aren't you going to introduce your husband? Your Grandma's place must be covered in dust from being empty for so long How about you and your husband stay at my place?'

Cornelia had always disliked this annoying woman. Knowing Cristina's intentions were far from pure, she brushed her off, "Out of my way!"

Cristina didn't take the hint, and turned to Granny Luisa, "Hello, I don't know if Nelly has mentioned me I'm Robison's wife, Cristina. So I'm her family Nelly can be a bit stubborn, I hope you all understand"

Having watched them for a while, Cristina figured Cornelia's husband must be wealthy and was determined to ingratiate herself with them.

If she played her cards right, she might gain something from their wealth.

"Nelly is stubborn? We haven't noticed. And it seems like Nelly isn't too fond of you" Granny Luisa was a smart woman and knew exactly what to say.

Sure enough, Cristina's expression changed at her words But Cristina had no shame. Unfazed, she replied, "You're right, Nelly isn't very fond of me."

Sighing a pitiful sigh, she continued, "After Nelly's mother left, I raised her like my own. Kids rebel sometimes. The more I cared for her, the more she resented me. She blamed me for her mother's absence."

This kind of shameless people, Granny Luisa had seen far too many of them. To deal with them, one really can't leave them with dignity. "You sure do think highly of yourself You know what kind of person you are better than anyone. Stop blocking the way and move."

When Cristina's attempts to win over Granny Luisa failed, she turned her attention to Cornelia's Grandma

She turned to Cornelia. “Nelly why didn’t your Grandma come with you and your husband to Rosenberg? Does she disapprove of your marriage?”

Cornelia lifted the urn in her hands, “My Grandma is right here. If you have any complaints in the future, keep your voices down. I worry she might hear you and come to visit in the night”

“Your Grandma she’s passed away?” Cristina looked at Cornelia holding the urn, a chill running down her spine.

Cornelia ignored her, leading the group towards the elevator.

Watching their retreating figures, Cristina was more convinced than ever of their wealth. She was determined to get some of it for herself. She decided to wait downstairs, believing they would come back down soon. They all seemed too refined to stay in a place that resembled a warehouse.
