

Chapter 1455 Janet Is Getting Married

Brandon tightened his grip on the steering wheel, his eyes clouded with a myriad of emotions.

The atmosphere between the two of them was dark and heavy.

Janet's vigilance heightened upon seeing Brandon like this.

She swallowed hard and tried her best to remain calm so as to hide the fear within her.

"I... I'm nearly three months pregnant."

Although she had lost her memory, she was still as clever as before. She racked her brains to try and come up with an idea to get rid of Brandon.

She figured it was best to tell him she was pregnant.

Janet had a hunch that this man held an indescribable feeling for her. Hopefully, he would leave her alone if she convinced him she was pregnant.

She believed that her excuse would make the man in front of her give up.

Brandon narrowed his eyes upon hearing what Janet had just said.

It had been nearly three months since she had disappeared.

Was she simply fabricating a story to push him away? Or could there truly be a man who had taken advantage of her during her memory loss and got her pregnant?

Anger surged in Brandon's veins.

If that was the case, he swore to himself he would make that man's life a living hell!

Seeing that he looked unhappy, Janet pressed on, her voice trembling with fear and trepidation. "I was supposed to meet my boyfriend. Let me out when we're finally safe."

Brandon regained his composure. He inhaled deeply to calm himself down and asked with a tentative tone, "Does your boyfriend happen to be from around here?"

A sense of relief washed over Janet as she noticed that his expression softened a little. She nodded and calmly answered, "Yes, we've been together for years. We're gonna get married soon."

"You've been with him for years?" Brandon pursed his lips and added, "Then why didn't you get married before having a baby?"

Thinking she had tricked him into believing her, Janet relaxed and started blurting nonsense, "Well, we were supposed to meet to discuss our wedding plans before I give birth. Oh, by the way, since you saved me and my child, I'll invite you to my wedding."

Based on Brandon's appearance and accent, she had concluded that he was not a local and would not be staying for long. To her surprise, he nodded earnestly and spoke with a serious tone. "Alright then. When's the wedding? I'll make sure to attend."

"What?" Janet uttered in surprise. He had agreed so quickly that she did not have time to process what he had just said.

Brandon could not help smirking when he saw that the smile on her face froze. "What's the matter? Didn't you want me to go to your wedding? Since you invited me so enthusiastically, I'll be sure to attend it."

It took Janet a moment to regain her composure. And once she did, she smiled awkwardly and reasoned, "Well, uh, our wedding won't take place soon. You don't look like you live here. I don't think you'll be able to attend it."

Brandon chuckled and repeated, "When is it? I'll come."

Janet's face flushed with embarrassment. She opened her mouth to retort. But before she could do so, Brandon had already shifted his gaze and concentrated on driving.

She could only shut up and lean her head against the car window in resignation. In her heart, she cursed the man next to her for his apparent lack of empathy.

Meanwhile, Brandon glanced at her and chuckled when he saw the scowl on her face.

Now, he was fully convinced that Janet was only lying. Her feeble attempt at lying made him want to laugh. 3

However, her evident effort to distance herself from him left him feeling a sense of injustice and melancholy.

Did he look like a bad guy?

After a long moment of silence, Janet finally break the ice. "Are we safe now?"

Brandon glanced at the rearview mirror. Although he did not see anyone suspicious tailing them, he remained vigilant. In response to Janet's question, he shook his head and explained, "I need to drive a bit further."

Janet's skepticism grew. She furrowed her brows and looked at him warily. "You've been driving for quite a while now. We must've already threw them off. Besides, you're driving slowly. Are you sure you're really trying to get rid of them?"

"I'm a little tired..." Brandon replied, his thin lips pale and his face haggard.

Chapter 1455 Janet Is Getting Marri... 🎁 +90 Points at most Janet noticed that Brandon lacked vitality, and he appeared weak and vulnerable. It suddenly crossed her mind how brave he was for saving her at a critical moment. He did not deserve to be looked at with suspicion. At this realization, she bit her lip and stopped talking.

Neither of them spoke a word until Brandon drove to a secluded yard.