

Chapter 1986 Norma Was Arrested

Norma began to relax, convinced that Janet rarely kept up with internet news.

Notably, Rowena Studio had gained significant popularity online, attracting a large audience interested in her designs. Norma felt confident that selling their designs could bring substantial earnings.

Over the next few days, orders poured in, and Norma found herself making a considerable amount of money.

Then, one day, a customer made an enticing offer, expressing interest in purchasing original copies of some of Rowena Studio's high-fashion dresses at a premium price.

Initially hesitant, Norma found herself unable to resist the temptation of the large sum of money offered.

She formulated a plan to sneak into Janet's studio after everyone had left for the day.

Inside the studio, Norma discovered that the original copies were not adequately secured. Seizing the opportunity, she retrieved them effortlessly and quietly shut the door behind her.

However, just as she was about to escape, a blinding light suddenly illuminated her surroundings.

Squinting against the brightness, Norma discerned the presence of two vehicles; a police car flashing its lights and a sleek black car.

Moments later, several police officers emerged, moving to apprehend Norma, declaring, "You're under arrest for theft."

In a flustered response, Norma retorted, "I'm employed here. Are you certain about this?"

The police officers exchanged glances, their attention drawn to the black car where Janet appeared, leaning casually against the door with a smirk playing on her lips.

Janet addressed the officers dismissively. "Indeed, Norma is a member of my studio staff."

Relief washed over Norma as she shot a defiant glare at the policemen, demanding, "Let me go!"

Stepping out of the vehicle, Janet approached, her expression hardening as she continued, "It appears Norma is the culprit behind the theft of our design drafts. Despite her employment here, I insist you take appropriate action."

Janet swiftly retrieved her phone, revealing a string of incriminating messages sent by Norma.

In a sudden revelation, Norma realized Janet had orchestrated the entire charade, masquerading as a customer to ensnare her.

Enraged, Norma cursed vehemently, "Janet! How dare you set me up like this! Curse you! May you suffer a fate worse than death! Listen to me, officer! Janet orchestrated this entire scheme to frame me!"

Janet intervened, delivering a sharp slap to silence Norma's outburst.

With a look of disdain, Janet revealed, "I've known about your scheme from the start, including your involvement in Hannah's accident and her subsequent exploitation. I've bided my time, waiting for this moment."

Norma's shock was palpable as she absorbed the truth: Janet had orchestrated it all.

The revelation struck her hard, sending a shiver down her spine. With dawning horror, Norma realized Janet's cunning had been at play long before this moment.

Fear gripped her as she understood the depth of her predicament.

Without sparing Norma a glance, Janet addressed the police with an air of finality. "Officer, please escort Norma away. I intend to pursue legal action against her for theft."

Norma's actions undoubtedly warranted a severe prison sentence, and the officers wasted no time in escorting her to the awaiting police car.

Watching the police car depart, Janet returned to her car, where Brandon awaited her.

"It's all settled now. Why do you still seem so troubled?" Brandon inquired, assisting Janet with her coat.

With a weary sigh, Janet responded, "I can't shake this feeling of unease. Norma will only be incarcerated for a few years. I'll have to contend with her once more when she's released."

Brandon's demeanor hardened as he reassured her, "Leave it to me. You need to focus all your energy on our baby. You have a pregnancy test scheduled for tomorrow afternoon. Don't let this distract you."

Upon returning home, Janet confided in Hannah about Norma's stealing.

Fuming angrily, Hannah declared, "She got what she deserved!"

Expressing her pent-up emotions brought Hannah a sense of relief. Now, she no longer felt obligated to remain at the estate. She didn't want to burden Janet any further.

After deliberating momentarily, Hannah said, "Janet, I want to return."

"Of course, I'll arrange for someone to accompany you back tomorrow," Janet replied, not deterring Hannah from leaving.

Understanding that Hannah preferred the tranquility of rural life, Janet took comfort in Brandon arranging for a servant to assist her. With this assurance, Janet could let Hannah depart with peace of mind.
