

I'm A Quadrillionaire chapter 1663 –

Chapter 1663

Time passed slowly.

On that day, David was sitting cross legged on his bed in the room with his eyes closed. He was practicing how to control his surging power.

Suddenly, he felt a violent shaking

He opened his eyes immediately.

'What happened?

'Does anyone dare to mess with one of the Central Sacred Continent's top five trading companies?'

However, he did not use his mind power to investigate.

The situation was unknown now so it would be better to be careful.

In truth, even if David used his mind power, it would not matter if he was discovered.

After all, he was already a mid-Sovereign Ranker and there was nothing wrong with him having mind power. Thus, he would not cause a sensation.

He would be fine as long as he did not fully expose himself in front of a Saint.

Outside the merchant ship that David and Alba were on, a luxurious spaceship at least several times larger than it blocked the way.

The word 'Lightfoot' was engraved on the side of the luxurious spaceship.

On the Central Sacred Continent, any discerning person would know the origin of any ship named 'Lightfoot'.

It was the special means of transportation that only direct descendants of the Lightfoot family could use.

The Lightfoot family, like the Fellowes family, controlled one of the Central Sacred Continent top's five trading companies.

The Fellowes family controlled Treasure Trove, while the Lightfoot family controlled Splendor.

The two trading companies were very similar in strength.

Treasure Trove ranked third among the top five trading companies, while Splendor ranked second.

The violent shaking just now was from the two ships colliding.

However, there were no casualties.

Both ships had decent defenses.

The collision just now did not even break through the defense, and the ship was unscathed.

However, the Lightfoot family's ship was much bigger than the Fellowes family's ship.

Even if it was not damaged, there was still a violent shake.

Alba frowned when she saw the Lightfoot family's ship.

Then, she ordered her crew to bypass the other party.

Unexpectedly, they still collided.

She knew that the other party did this on purpose.

She also guessed who was on the ship opposite her.

There was only one person in the Lightfoot family of this generation who would insistently pester Alba.

That was Cornelius Lightfoot, one of the top descendants of the Lightfoot family.

At the same time, he was also the second-in-line heir of the Lightfoot family, so he had a high status in his family.

Sure enough, not long after the two ships collided, a voice came from the Lightfoot family's ship.

"Miss Alba, how are you?"

"Cornelius, how did you know it was me?" Alba asked in a deep voice.

She was traveling on Treasure Trove's merchant ship which was not exclusive for the direct descendants of the Fellowes family. How did Cornelius know her exact location and even run directly into her?

“Hahaha! Miss Alba, if I, Cornelius Lightfoot, didn’t even have this ability, how could I be the heir to the Lightfoot family?” Cornelius said with a loud laugh.

Alba was lost in thought.

‘What went wrong?’

‘Is there a spy around me who reported my whereabouts to Cornelius?’

‘Impossible!’

‘Those around me were all cultivated by the Fellowes family since childhood.’

‘So how could they betray me?’

‘What the hell is going on?’

Most of the readers are now reading this novels:-

I’m A Quadrillionaire chapter 1664 –

Chapter 1664

Alba could not find out the answer for a while.

“Cornelius, why did you stop me?” Alba asked.

“Nothing. I just want to invite you over for a meal and a chat. Will you do me the honor, Miss Alba? I have prepared good food and wine here,” Cornelius said.

“Sorry! I still have something to do, so I won’t accompany you!” Alba directly refused.

“Miss Alba, I came all this way just to see you, don’t you think it’s disrespectful for you to do this? How do you expect me to show my face on the Central Sacred Continent if you do this?”

“You can show your face however you want. How is that any of my business? I don’t have time to mess around with you. Goodbye!”

After Alba finished speaking, she commanded the merchant ship to avoid the other party and prepared to leave.

Yet, as soon as the merchant ship set off, the Lightfoot family’s ship stopped in front of them, blocking the way.

They changed direction several times in a row, but the other party still stopped them.

Alba was fuming so she asked loudly, "Cornelius, what the hell do you want?"

"Miss Alba, as I said before, I want to have a meal and a chat with you. As long as you say yes, I will get out of the way immediately after eating. You can think about it slowly, I have plenty of time," Cornelius was not in a hurry said slowly.

Alba's pretty face was flushed red by Cornelius' words and her ample chest heaved violently.

She wished she could kill him with a sword.

However, she could only imagine such a thing in her mind. Alba could not do this in reality.

Aside from whether she could kill Cornelius, even if she could, she would not dare to.

On the one hand, Cornelius, as the second-in-line heir of the Lightfoot family, had a high status.

Alba's status in the Fellowes family was not comparable to his.

On the other hand, although Treasure Trove was not much different from Splendor, it did not mean that there was not much difference between the Lightfoot family and the Fellowes family.

Many aspects were at play here.

Simply put, the Fellowes family was their backer's affiliated family.

To put it bluntly, they would offer a large number of resources every year to seek asylum.

Even so, they would need to act according to their backer's wishes.

Especially in recent years, the backers of the Fellowes family intended to swallow the Fellowes family.

However, the Lightfoot family was different.

The Lightfoot family already had someone who had established a firm foothold in the backing family behind them.

Once upon a time, a daughter of the Lightfoot family married into the family that was backing them.

Just like Alba right now.

After the woman from the Lightfoot family got married, she counterattacked and was now an important figure in that big family.

The Lightfoot family's situation also changed from that.

The Fellowes family was likely to be ruthlessly abandoned by the backers behind them but the same would not happen to the Lightfoot family.

This was the gap between the two families.

If Alba killed Cornelius and the Lightfoot family decided to pursue it, the Fellowes family could only apologize and obediently hand her over after paying a huge price.

Both families had Sacred Saints as their backers.

However, their situation was completely different.

The Lightfoot family lived a life of comfort and security while the Fellowes family was living in dire straits. Furthermore, their family might be destroyed at any time.

"Cornelius, I have something urgent to take care of now, how about I accompany you when I have a chance?" Alba took a deep breath and said aggrievedly.

"No way! Who knows if you will keep your promise after you go back? I dare not go to your Fellowes family to get you. Since I met you today, you have to have a drink with me before leaving no matter what." Cornelius was not moved at all.

Tears welled in Alba's eyes.

There was nothing she could do when it came to a scoundrel like this.

Should she go have a meal with Cornelius?

That was absolutely impossible.

She could not go even if she died.

Alba was not stupid. She had a fiance nominally so if she got into Cornelius' ship alone, she would face an extremely miserable life no matter if something happened between them or not.

Most of the readers are now reading this novels:-