

Chapter 721 Believing In Brighter Days

---

Once, Julie and Vivian were inseparable.

But time changed their bond, replacing friendship with deep resentment.

The commotion in the dungeon caught Liam's attention. Alarmed by the scent of blood, he hurried inside. When he saw Julie covered in red, panic surged through him.

"Are you alright, Julie?" Liam's voice wavered with worry.

She nodded her head. Liam's heart lightened when he realized the blood wasn't hers.

His eyes darted to a lifeless body nearby. He immediately realized what had just happened.

In recent times, he'd noticed the transformation in Julie, her strength growing immensely.

Wrapping Julie in a protective embrace, Liam whispered, "It's over now. Things will get better from here."

But, in her trauma, Julie's voice emerged, raspy but clear.

She finally found her voice and said, "Vivian... she took our child from us. She was the root of all my nightmares."

Aghast, Liam looked again at the gruesome body and saw a chilling resemblance to Vivian.

Tears streaming, Julie cried out, "She became this monster, all to spite me. Why? I loved her like a sister!"

Liam took a deep breath, suppressing his own emotions. What had transpired was in the past, and Vivian had already paid the ultimate price.

Now, the identity of the person didn't matter to him. Through his life's trials, Liam realized the importance of valuing the present rather than ruminating on the past.

He pulled Julie close, whispering soothingly, "It's behind us. We can have another child. Let go of the past..."

Before she could respond, the weight of her emotions caused Julie to lose consciousness in Liam's embrace.

Days passed.

Ever since the incident in the dungeon, Liam remained by Julie's side, tending to her and offering comfort.

Julie was slowly regaining her voice, and with Liam's support, the bitterness in her heart began to fade.

The past was behind her, and she was looking forward to a fresh start.

Meanwhile, Liam was making good on his promise, busily preparing for their wedding.

This wasn't a fake wedding as before. He was about to marry his true love. He was personally overseeing the preparations, wanting everything to be perfect for Julie.

To help distract Julie from recent traumas, Liam brought her to see Jaxtyn and Annie.

Jaxtyn's recovery was on track. He could walk with the help of crutches now, but his progress might slow down from now on. Nonetheless, with sustained treatment, he would make a full recovery.

Content with his progress, Jaxtyn welcomed Liam and Julie with open arms.

Annie, on the other hand, had a tougher road ahead. Since being rescued on Sea God Island, she remained withdrawn, though she found solace in Jaxtyn's company.

Liam held onto hope, believing in brighter days for both.

When Julie saw their progress, her past guilt began to wane. She hoped both of them would return to their past selves soon.
