

Chapter 766 Insult From The Young Man

At this moment, Emmeline seethed with anger. She forcefully pushed the young man away and said, "That's your business. It has no bearing on me. Do not disrupt my life again."

Afterward, Emmeline unceremoniously ejected the young man from the house and secured the door firmly.

Upon her return, Emmeline's face was etched with a profound sense of helplessness and concern.

"Who is he?" Liam asked with a frown.

Emmeline explained, "His name is Bryan Davis. We have a history together from our time in the central area. We practically grew up side by side. He even assisted our family after my father disappeared. However, when we were on the verge of getting married, he revealed his true intentions, claiming he wanted to wed both my mother and me. Do you know how disgusting his reason was? He heartlessly asserted that my father's demise left my mother without proper care and that he could satisfy her married, he revealed his true intentions, claiming he wanted to wed both my mother and me. Do you know how disgusting his reason was? He heartlessly asserted that my father's demise left my mother without proper care and that he could satisfy her desires. It was at that moment that I saw his true character, a real pervert. Ever since I decisively turned him down and expressed my anger by slapping him, he's been creating turmoil for us. He even went so far as to make threats about joining the Salvation Society and subjecting my mother and me to a life of servitude."

Emmeline vented her frustrations, and even Claudine, as a mother, couldn't help but blush at such a conversation.

Hearing this, Liam didn't know what to say.

He had never anticipated the despicable nature of Bryan, and he felt more sympathy for Emmeline now. No one should ever have to endure such a situation. While Bryan believed it was love, in Emmeline's eyes, it was a perverted desire.

Liam couldn't help but console Emmeline. "Don't worry. I won't allow this to happen. I'm going to participate in the test as well. If I can join the Salvation Society, I'll bring you and your mother back to the central area."

However, Claudine's expression showed concern rather than joy.

Having spent years on the island, she knew the difficulty of the test. Very few individuals managed to pass it and join the Salvation Society.

Observing Liam's physical condition, Claudine didn't have high hopes; his injuries had yet to fully heal, and adapting to the 'Power Imbalance Syndrome' would be a long process.

Given all these factors, Claudine didn't hold much hope for Liam's words.

Emmeline, on the other hand, held unwavering faith in Liam's abilities. She even said with surprising determination, "Alright, I'll await your good news. I'll marry you then, and that wretch Bryan will be infuriated."

Liam felt awkward about Emmeline's words. He wasn't sure if she was being serious or just joking. However, his initial intent was to repay her, and he had no intentions of marrying her.

Emmeline's words did, however, trigger thoughts of Julie.

How was she now? How was their baby?

Liam's longing for Julie and the burning hatred within him only served to remind him of the need to grow stronger as quickly as possible.
