

Chapter 898 A Kiss On The Sofa

Trevor breathed a sigh of relief. Finally, the two women's shopping spree came to an end because it was getting dark.

They said goodbye to Cecelia. Then he forced himself to cheer up, put all the shopping bags into the trunk of the car, and took Luisa back to the villa in the south of the city.

"Is Evie not home?" Luisa asked in confusion. She was surprised that the entire villa was pitch-dark.

As soon as Trevor opened the door, he turned on the light, lay weakly on the soft sofa, and replied lazily, "Maybe she went out to have some fun. Or maybe she went to inspect the property I bought in Dreles."

He felt exhausted today.

Trevor felt like accompanying Luisa and Cecelia going shopping in the afternoon was even more exhausting than the training arranged by Bradly.

As he leaned against the soft sofa and closed his eyes, he felt he would fall asleep the next second.

"This is too exaggerated. I've never felt this tired before," Trevor murmured as he rubbed his shoulder and smiled helplessly.

When Luisa saw this, she felt a little guilty. She quietly walked behind the sofa, reached out, and massaged his shoulders.

Her slender fingers gently kneaded Trevor's strong muscles, relaxing his soul. But his heart got so excited that it became restless.

Trevor squinted his eyes slightly.

He sat up straight to make it more convenient for Luisa to massage him.

But as soon as he straightened his body, his head accidentally touched her plump and soft breasts, making him subconsciously shrink his neck.

Luisa felt strange when Trevor's head touched her breasts. Her face immediately flushed, and she turned her eyes away to avoid meeting his gaze.

But when she noticed that he also took the initiative to dodge, her embarrassment eased a lot, and she couldn't help feeling funny.

"Don't move," Luisa said softly.

Then she gently pressed Trevor's shoulders with both hands and let his head slowly rest on her chest.

She felt shy, thinking that she proactively created intimacy between them.

Her eyes became misty and seductive. And her breathing quickened.

She started to massage Trevor's shoulders gently again.

Trevor felt like he was running out of breath, and his heart pounded heavily.

When his head leaned against her soft and plump chest and a faint fragrance lingered in his nose, he couldn't help thinking about sex.

He raised his eyes just in time to see her seductive looks. She was shy and charming.

"Luisa..." Trevor called out Luisa's name in a hoarse voice.

"Um?" Luisa responded in a delicate nasal voice, full of seduction.

"I love you," Trevor said softly.

Luisa's fingers on his shoulders trembled. She felt nervous and shy at the same time. Her eyelashes flickered shyly. "I love you too."

She mustered the courage, bent over, and kissed Trevor's forehead and then his lips.

The romantic atmosphere around them quickly heated up.

Trevor's heart beat wildly. He stood up and held Luisa's soft and delicate hands, and his breathing became uneven.

Both of them were excited and about to have another kiss.

But at this moment, the door of the villa opened.

"I'm back!" Carrying a handbag, Evie entered the house. And the first thing she saw was the shopping bags all over the floor. Then she found the two people holding hands across the sofa.

For a moment, the three of them were all stunned.

The romantic atmosphere immediately dissipated.

Evie blinked her eyes a few times and smiled awkwardly. She didn't turn around but quietly stepped back. It was as if she was afraid that a little sound would disturb the young couple in the villa.

As she stepped back, she said in a low voice, "You are not seeing me. Just continue."
