

Read Married At First Sight Chapter 2783

Married At First Sight Chapter 2783-Everyone laughed.

Kevin had arranged in advance that after Duncan and Liberty returned, the waiter would start serving the dishes.

The meal was also lively, and everyone was happy.

After the meal, Hayden quickly said goodbye. She needed to return to the Greenrest Hotel to discuss cooperation with Mr. Miles.

Fortunately, the Greenest Hotel and the Fortress Hotel were very close to each other, diagonally opposite.

No matter how close they were, Kevin insisted on sending Hayden there.

Liberty pushed Duncan out of the hotel and wandered around the streets near the hotel, visiting the night market in Jensburg and enjoying the night view of Jensburg.

“Do you feel better?” Duncan asked Liberty behind him.

After Liberty was silent, she said, “I have calmed down. In the future, the things I encounter will be more cruel than what I encounter now. If I can’t face what happened this time, I don’t have to stay in Jensburg. Now, let’s go back to Wiltspoon and continue to manage my restaurant.”

That would be a failure to live up to Audrey’s trust and expectations.

“That’s fine if you can think about it. You’ve been shopping for so long, and there’s nothing you want to buy?” Duncan turned to her and asked, “What do you want? Let’s buy it, and I’ll give it to you.”

Liberty smiled. “I can buy it myself; I don’t need you to give it to me.”

“I am your boyfriend now, and I will be the man you spend the rest of your life with. We don’t have to be so clear about it. I haven’t given you any gifts. If I did, you wouldn’t want them. To be honest, there is a guest room at home, and the guest room is filled with all kinds of gifts that you women like.

They are all gifts I prepared for you. Some are for you, but you don't accept them. Some are gifts I haven't given yet, and I know you won't accept them, so I have to put them there first. From now on, we will become a family. Those things naturally become yours.

If you don't use it, it will be a waste of our little family's money. After all, you are reluctant to let our little family's money be wasted."

Liberty: "..."

In the past, she did not accept Duncan, saying that she did not want to remarry; she only wanted to make money, start a career, and raise her son. Therefore, she almost refused to accept the gifts Duncan gave her, not even the bouquets and expensive luxuries.

It turned out that he had more expensive gifts that he had not sent to her, and he guessed that she would not accept them.

Liberty: "Even if we form a small family in the future, how much jewelry can I wear? How many skin care products and cosmetics can I use? How many sets of clothes can I wear? How many bags can I carry?"

Duncan: "You can change it to a different style every hour."

Liberty said amusingly, "I'm not a model. I wear the same clothes on and off the stage."

Duncan also laughed, "Then I will buy less clothes and more jewelry. If you have worn it and don't want to wear it, you can leave it. When Sonny gets married in the future, you can give it to our daughter-in-law, or you can leave it to your granddaughters to inherit. I want to be a grandfather as well as a father."

Duncan blushed slightly and smiled. "Thinking about the good days in the future, I am confident and motivated to persist in rehabilitation, strive to recover as soon as possible, and marry you. Liberty, I will definitely give you a grand wedding, like Zachary and Serenity's; you will have everything Serenity has, and you will have everything she doesn't have."

Married At First Sight Chapter 2784-Liberty said, "What do I have that Serenity doesn't have? You insist on doing rehabilitation. When I am not in Wiltspoon, you have to take care of yourself. When you are free, go and see Sonny. The boy should also come to see you. He treats you better now than his own father.”

Duncan said proudly, “That’s because I treat him with all my heart. His father will only say bad things about me in front of him, saying how bad I am. Sonny is so smart, and his heart is like a mirror. He can clearly tell who is good and who is bad. The more his dad talks bad about me, the less he likes to be close to his dad.”

At this point, Duncan turned to look at Liberty and saw that she looked calm.

When Hank was mentioned, Liberty’s mood did not change.

Liberty said, “What are you looking at? Do you think I still care about Hank? He is just Sonny’s father now. Do you think I still love him? Do you think that mentioning him will make me feel depressed? How long has it been? How could I still love him? How could I still be susceptible to his influence? He would never have divorced in the first place if he really loved me.

If you are determined to get divorced, it’s better to divorce as soon as possible.”

Hank kept his word. Neither he nor his family disturbed Liberty’s life anymore. The only connection between the two people was Sonny.

But Hank still couldn’t watch Liberty and Duncan together calmly. He was even more afraid that Duncan, the quasi-stepfather, was a better person than he was his biological father, so he couldn’t help but speak ill of Duncan in front of Sonny and discredit Duncan.

When Sonny was still afraid of Duncan, Hank said that Duncan was a bad person in front of his son. Sonny would speak up for Duncan, resolutely denying his father’s denigration of Duncan, not to mention that Sonny and Duncan are now in a very good relationship.

Every time father and son met, Hank could not help but say something bad about Duncan in front of Sonny, saying that Duncan was disabled and that Liberty was dragging Liberty down by being with him.

He also talked about Liberty’s plan for Duncan’s family property and said that Liberty envied her sister for marrying into a wealthy family. If she had the opportunity to marry into a wealthy family, she would marry even if Duncan was disabled.

In short, it was all kinds of destruction.

Especially when Sonny returned to Brown's house, Mrs. Brown, Chelsea, and others spoke even more harshly.

Every time Sonny met Hank, he was unhappy when he came back. He always said that he didn't want to go to his grandparents' house and that he didn't like Hank anymore.

Even Hank would buy something for Sonny. But Sonny was surrounded by wealth; what had he not seen before?

Sonny would not dislike Hank's flattery. He was still a very simple child and would not be too dissatisfied with one thing or another. He simply didn't like that Hank always spoke ill of Duncan, and sometimes he would also say bad things about Liberty.

In the heart of Sonny, his mother is the best. Anyone who spoke ill of his mother was considered a bad guy.

"Next time Hank says those words in front of Sonny, I will go to him to settle the score. How many times have I told him not to say those words in front of children, but he just can't listen? The morality of their family will not change."

Every time Sonny came back and told her mother, Liberty would communicate with her ex-husband and ask him not to speak ill of Duncan in front of Sonny.

What happened to her and Duncan was her freedom, and Hank had no right to care about it. Besides, Hank also promised that he would not disturb her life again. What's the point of saying those words in front of Sonny?

Hank apologized every time and promised not to say it again.

If he didn't say it, Mrs. Brown would say it, Chelsea would say it, and even Chelsea's children would talk nonsense in front of Sonny.

As a result, Sonny became increasingly reluctant to see Hank.

It was the Brown family who personally pushed Sonny to Duncan's side.

