Chapter 1141

Francine was a little puzzled when she saw so many guests at the house. She looked at Corinne who was feeding Joey, then at Annie who sat next to Corinne. Finally, her gaze shifted to Aaron sitting beside Annie. She frowned without hiding her displeasure. “Why are you still in touch with this jerk, Annie? You’re supposed to stay away from him!”

Annie had been thoroughly focused on her food as she was hungry. When Francine made that remark without considering the occasion, she felt embarrassed and did not know how to respond.

Aaron, meanwhile, smiled at her instead of getting angry. “Why do I get the feeling that you have a problem with me?”

Francine was usually very bossy, more so when at her home. “I do! I don’t like you! Why would someone like you come to our home? We don’t welcome you here!”

Her attitude was a little too direct, and it made everyone at the table feel a little awkward.

Pamela chastised her, “Don’t be rude, Francine! This gentleman is Corinne’s friend! Watch your tone!”

Francine was a little unhappy when her grandmother reprimanded her. She looked at Corinne and said, “I’m not trying to single you out, but I think it’s for the best if you avoid having any contact with jerks like him. Aren’t you repulsed by how...casual he is?”

Corinne silently glared at Francine. Aaron was a nonchalant person whose attitude was far from perfect, but Corinne could not stand to hear other people badmouth him!

Francine felt a chill down her spine when Corinne stared at her like that. However, Francine was a very straightforward person who never held back when it came to things she disliked. She glared at Aaron and said, “You have no idea how terrible of a person he was. He plays with Annie’s feelings and leads her on, even though he doesn’t feel the same way about her! When Corinne was hospitalized, he got a room with another woman and told Annie to send some contraception to him! What kind of person does that?”

Pamela was old enough not to have heard about such uncouth acts. She could not contain her shock and immediately asked, “What?”

Before Pamela could say anything else, Annie was so embarrassed that she lost her appetite. She put down her chopsticks, got up, and said, “Sorry, please excuse me. I’m already full, and I need to go to the bathroom!”

The atmosphere at the table became even more awkward when Annie left.

Aaron glanced coldly at Francine before getting up to chase after Annie. Everyone else at the table looked unhappily at Francine.

Francine felt a little uncomfortable when everyone stared at her, but she did not think that she was in the wrong.

She hated jerks, and she felt that she was in the right for calling Aaron out!

Corinne lost her appetite too. She down his chopsticks and said, “I guess Francine doesn’t welcome my friends over. Forget about the meal, then. You people can continue! I’ve had my fill!” She then left the table with Joey.

What was supposed to be a decent meal ended up becoming a truly embarrassing situation.

Pamela frowned and glared at her stubborn granddaughter. “How could you say something like that about Corinne’s friend?”

Francine had an innocent look on her face. “I’m telling the truth! He’s a jerk! He made Annie cry! I’m only looking out for her!”

Pamela felt her head throb. “Annie doesn’t seem to be holding it against him, so who are you to complain about what happened?

Are you satisfied now that they’ve left the table?”

Francine pursed her lips. “Tch! It’s their business if they leave. We can just continue with the meal!”

Pamela snorted. “It’s bad enough that they all left without eating, but Corinne is pregnant. She left even though she barely ate anything! If something happens to her pregnancy, you’ll never hear the end of it from Jeremy!”

Francine felt aggrieved but did not dare to talk back to her grandmother. She fiddled with the food on her plate with a fork, and the fork slipped out of her hand.

She was already in a bad mood, and her mood worsened when the fork fell. She muttered something to herself and was about to bend down to pick it up when Chester bent down to take it before could.

Since the fork was already dirty as it fell on the floor, Chester put it aside and handed his clean one to her.

“Here. I haven’t used this yet.”

Francine blushed at Chester’s gesture and thanked him. Chester did not reply and got up before politely bidding Pamela goodbye. He then picked up his backpack and walked out.

As soon as Francine saw that the apple of her eye had left, she felt a little downcast and got up to chase after him.

She ran out to the yard and finally caught up with Chester.

She stood in front of him and asked uneasily, “Why did you leave without eating? Are you angry? Do you think I’m in the wrong?”

Chester had an insipid expression as he answered, “Your family’s affairs have nothing to do with me. I don’t have any particular view to say about what happened.”

Though Chester's answer suggested he was not angry, Francine did not think that was so. As stubborn as she was in front of other people, she discarded her attitude and lowered her head to explain, "But Aaron's a jerk. I just couldn't hold my anger back earlier. I hate it when he bullies other girls!"

Chester could not bear to ignore her when she admitted her mistake to him like that.

"You don't need to explain anything to me. This involves your family, and I have no right to say anything. But, I do think you should control your temper, Francine. If you show your dissatisfaction all the time and speak your mind without any filter, society will give you a lot of flak in the future."

Francine blinked in confusion. "But I don't have to go to work in the future. No one's going to do anything to me if I stay at home!"

Chester was a little surprised at that answer. He smiled self-deprecatingly and said, "You're right. Your family's financial background is secure enough that you don't need to work for the rest of your life. You'll always be protected by your family. I'm just thinking too much." He walked past Francine and continued toward the gate.

Francine felt very uneasy, so she ran up to him and grabbed his clothes. “You’re right, Chester. I’ll change my temper! I’ll learn to control it! Please don’t be angry at me.”

Chester felt helpless. “I’m not angry. Let me go!”

Francine asked carefully, “Then will you be coming over to help me with my homework tomorrow?”

Chester nodded. “I’ll keep my end of the promise since it’s already been agreed upon that I’ll help you to finish everything.”

Francine sighed in relief and released him. “I’ll see you off!” She wanted the family driver to send him home, but because he was an independent person who stuck to his principles, he would be unhappy if he was driven home every time.

Once or twice was more than enough.

Since Francine insisted on seeing him off, Chester allowed her to accompany him to the gate.

A row of bodyguards stood guard at the gate. They had a serious look on their faces, and it was a little stressful to be in their presence.

Chester looked at the bodyguards and asked with a frown, “Is your brother treating Corinne as some kind of prisoner?”

Francine looked helplessly at the bodyguards in front of the house. “I have no idea what’s going on. It wasn’t like this yesterday, but then they had an argument, and it was already like this earlier today!”

The thought of Jeremy left Chester feeling some animosity. He said coldly, “I hope your family will treat Corinne better. She’s a good girl!”

After some hesitance, Francine eventually asked him, “I’ve always wanted to ask you something, Chester. Do you like Corinne?”

Chester kept quiet. He slung his backpack over his left shoulder and left without even turning to look at her.

Back in the house.

Annie looked in the mirror after washing her face in the bathroom. She felt a deep sense of self-loathing when she stared at her smudged makeup.

She felt as though no man would ever love her.

She foolishly thought she was the happiest woman in the world when she almost got married, but her groom had a quickie with another woman inside a storeroom right before the wedding. After he had been exposed, he showed no sign of regret and even threatened to leak her nudes.

It was Jeremy and Corinne who helped her deal with him.

Had it not been for the intimidating fact that Jeremy was her uncle, all the guests would have laughed at her.

Then, she fell ignorantly in love with Aaron despite Corinne's repeated warnings and reminders. She stubbornly set out to win his heart, thinking she was special enough to make Aaron change his ways.

In the end, she made a fool of herself. It was no surprise that Francine would chastise her like that. After all, who would buy contraception for their crush to use with another woman?

The knocks on the bathroom door snapped Annie back to her senses. Thinking someone wanted to use the bathroom, she decided not to hog the place to herself. She wiped her face with a tissue before opening the door.

As soon as the door opened, she saw Aaron standing at the door. He looked poignantly at her.

Annie said embarrassedly, “I just finished using the toilet. It’s your turn!”

She lowered her head and walked out of the restroom. However, Aaron dragged her back into the bathroom before she even managed to step out.

Aaron then closed the bathroom door and locked it.

Annie reeled from the shock. “Mister Aaron?”

Aaron’s cool fingers rubbed her tears away gently. “Your makeup is smudged. Did you cry?”

Annie looked away a little. “No. I washed my face.”

That was one of the few times that Aaron had an apologetic expression. “I’m sorry that everyone looks negatively at you because of me.”

Annie was startled. She did not expect Aaron to apologize to her. It took her a while to snap out of her confusion.

“No, I thought too highly of myself. My existence is a joke, anyway. It has always been like that since my wedding failed.”

Aaron’s expression soured. “Who says your existence is a joke?”

Annie continued to remind herself not to overthink things and read too much into how he was acting toward her. “I know you don’t have feelings for me. There’s nothing wrong with you rejecting me in that sort of tactful manner. I don’t blame you at all.”

Aaron stared silently at her before taking out a few small square foil packets from his pocket.

Annie looked at what Aaron was holding and blushed.

Those were the condoms she helped Aaron to buy! ‘Why did he take them out and show them to me?’

Chapter 1144

Annie stepped back almost instinctively. “What are you doing?”

Aaron held them tightly and said, “I didn’t use any of the ones you bought for me the other day.”

Annie was speechless. ‘And? What is he trying to tell me? Is he saying he didn’t use them because he did it raw with his girlfriend the other day? Is he trying to say he doesn’t mind having a baby with her? Is he warning me to stop having feelings for him?’

She felt a little embarrassed. “Okay, okay. I get it. I won’t bother you again in the future. You don’t have to do this to me.”

Aaron did not know how to react after concluding she had misunderstood. “What I’m trying to say is, I can’t bring myself to use what you bought for me, so I didn’t do anything with that woman.”

‘What do you mean by that? You’re acting super weird today! I can’t even understand what you’re talking about!’ Annie thought to herself. She then asked, “Umm... What are you even talking about?”

Aaron smiled and leaned over to her ear. He then whispered to her, “Since you’re the one who bought them, I’ve decided to save them and use them with you in the future!”

Annie’s face turned red in an instant. Her lips twitched too, and she felt incredibly offended. She raised her hand and slapped him twice. Then, she opened the bathroom door and left. Aaron walked out of the bathroom with two very clear slap marks on his face.

Corinne and Xante stood at the door and looked at him with disgust.

Xante chided smugly, “Serves you right!”

Aaron shrugged. “I don’t mind this at all!”

Corinne rubbed her temples and said, “Come upstairs with me.”

Aaron and Xante followed her to her bedroom.

Someone brought food to their room, perhaps as a gesture of apology from Pamela who felt that Francine had crossed the line.

Joey was already fast asleep by then.

After Corinne placed him down on the bed and covered him with the blanket, she walked to the door and opened it slightly to peek outside. Once she confirmed no people were in the vicinity, she closed the door and sat on the sofa. She then said to Aaron and Xante, “In two days, I’ll ask Grandma Pamela to bring me out of the house so I can clear my mind. I’ll let you know when and where. There will be a lot of bodyguards following us at that time, so you two will have to find a way to lure them away. That’ll be my chance to escape.”

Aaron and Xante looked solemnly at each other before nodding to Corinne.

Xante said, “Okay. Don’t worry. We’ll arrange everything and synchronize with you.”

“Where do you plan on escaping to?” Aaron asked.

“Should I book the flight in advance?”

Corinne said curtly, “Your sole responsibility is to distract those bodyguards. Don’t bother about anything else.

Where I head to

after that isn’t important.”

Aaron frowned and asked unhappily, “What do you mean by that? You’re not going to tell us anything?”

Corinne glanced at him. “That’s not it. I haven’t even decided where to go yet. I can’t leave the country through the two of you.”

“Then who’ll help you by then?” Aaron asked again.

“Jeremy knows I’m in contact with the two of you,” she reminded. “When I leave, he’ll definitely demand answers from the two of you. If he finds out that you facilitated my departure, you’re going to have a hard time dealing with him. That’s exactly why I’m seeking someone else’s help!”

“Who?” Aaron and Xante asked.

“You’ll know soon enough if he’s willing to help me.”

Corinne felt that it was best not to tell them who she planned to seek help from until she was sure that person was willing to help.

Aaron and Xante looked at each other. Neither could guess who Corinne wanted to seek.

The three of them had lunch in the bedroom. When Corinne asked someone to come in to clean up the dishes, Bowen followed the servants in and passed on a message. “Ma’am, the card table has been set up. Madam Pamela invited you and your friends for a round of card games.”

‘Guess she hasn’t forgotten about the card game, then...’ Corinne thought. She nodded and said, “We’ll head down right away.”

After Bowen excused himself, Corinne turned and told the two of them, “We’re playing card games with her.” Although Aaron and Xante were hardly interested in card games, they did not dare to disobey their boss’s orders. Pamela had told her servant to arrange the card table in the quiet and elegant tea room.

After Corinne assigned two maids to keep watch over the soundly asleep Joey, she brought Aaron and Xante down. When she arrived at the living room, she saw Pamela interceding between Annie and Francine. She specifically requested Francine to apologize to Annie.

Annie was never the kind of person who held grudges, so she just nodded and forgave Francine without another word.

However, Aaron was not too happy to see that.

When Corinne came down with Aaron and Xante, Pamela waved at them with an affectionate smile.

“Over here, Corinne! Tell your friends to play some card games with me. It’s been a while since I last played, and I’m feeling like it today!”

Corinne smiled and brought her two friends over to sit around the table.

Annie did now know how to play cards, so she took a chair and sat next to Pamela. She helped the old lady hold the cards while learning the rules. Throughout the entire time, she did not look at Aaron at all and seemed to be deliberately avoiding him.

Aaron, who sat opposite Pamela, glanced at Annie from time to time.

Francine insisted on joining the game since she knew how to play cards. Meanwhile, Xante sat next to Corinne and played as a team.

Their agreement with Corinne was to take it easy and ensure Pamela was happy. However, as soon as Aaron sat at the table, he seemed to have forgotten what Corinne told him and targeted Francine deliberately.

After a few rounds, Francine got so angry that she wanted to flip the table. That was when she remembered the advice Chester gave her before leaving. He had hoped that she would change her temper, so she decided to take a deep breath and bear with it.

Pamela was astute enough to tell Aaron was deliberately making the game difficult for Francine. She could not find it in herself to blame him either after those remarks that Francine made about him.

Nevertheless, Aaron still made a point to lighten the atmosphere around Pamela. As a result, her mood improved even more.

It was already evening by the time they were done with a few rounds.

Pamela invited them all to have dinner, but both Aaron and Xante declined. Annie turned down the offer politely too, and she walked out of the house together with Aaron and Xante.

Rather than get into Aaron's car, she politely waved goodbye to Xante and went off alone.

Aaron told his driver to follow her slowly. He then lowered the window and said to her, "Get in. I'll send you home."

Annie continued walking and did not even bother to look at him. "Thanks for the offer, but I'm good. I'm not planning on going home right now."

Annie had been offended by what Aaron said to her in the bathroom earlier that day. She did not want to talk to him anymore and even considered skipping work the next day.

Perhaps he genuinely did view her with contempt. There seemed to be no other explanation for why he would say such humiliating things to her!

“You’re not planning on going home? Where are you going, then?” Aaron asked. He was leaning against the car window with his head jutting out slightly.

“I don’t have to report everything to you now that I’ve clocked off work,” retorted Annie without looking at him.

Aaron frowned slightly. “You came with the two of us today, so it’s considered official company business. We’ll have to bear the responsibility if anything happens to you on the way home. Please get in the car, and stop being so unreasonable.”

Annie insisted, “Don’t worry. Even if something happens to me, I’m not going to blame you and Miss Xante. You should go home and get some rest! Bye!” She then turned into an alley that cars could not drive into.

She was incredibly annoyed at that moment and did not want to hear Aaron’s disruptive voice.

It was wintertime, during which the sun set much earlier. When Aaron saw Annie turning into the dark alley alone, he narrowed her eyes and thought for a moment before asking the driver to stop the car.

Xante glanced at him and could immediately tell what Aaron was thinking. She adjusted her gold-rimmed glasses and said, “Men are such jerks.”

Aaron shrugged. “I have no shame in admitting that.” He got out of the car and chased Annie into the alley. Xante did not want to wait for him any longer, so she raised her chin and signaled for the driver to leave.

The alley that Annie ran into was dark, but Aaron caught up to her in no time. In response, Annie quickened her pace and ran out of the alley. She arrived at a lively area with many people. Aaron rushed out after her. He was about to go up to her when he saw Annie coming up to a man.

Annie panted and said to the man, “I’m sorry, Marcus. Did I keep you waiting long?”

Marcus’s eyes lit up when he saw her. He shook his head and said, “I’m happy you’re here! I thought you wouldn’t show up!”

Annie calmed herself and said, “I won’t stand you up after promising to watch a movie with you. I’m sorry I’m a little late, though.

I lost track of time when I was at my uncle’s place!”

Marcus had sent her another text message earlier in the afternoon. He asked if she had thought about his offer and if she wanted to watch a movie with him. Since she was in a bad mood at the time, she thought that it would be good to keep her mind occupied with something else. She agreed to Marcus’s invitation and sent him the location of their meeting point.

Although she was not interested in horror movies, she might be able to forget those unhappy moments if the movie gave her a bit of a scare.

Marcus smiled happily. “Let’s go, then!”

Annie nodded. “Okay!”

As the two of them walked in the crowd toward the nearby subway station, neither of them noticed that Aaron was staring at the two of them away from the crowd. He had a somewhat contrived look on his face.

‘Tch. She seemed to move on pretty quickly. It seemed she already agreed to watch a movie with her colleagues.’ Men who invited women to watch horror movies would almost certainly have ulterior motives, that much Aaron was certain.

‘What does this have to do with me, though?’

Aaron smirked nonchalantly and turned around to take a taxi home. However, he clenched his fists tightly after barely taking a few steps and headed for the subway. No matter how he tried to wrap his head around it, he could not bear to imagine Annie hugging her colleague at the movie theater during the jumpscars in the movie.

Back at the Holdens, Corinne had gone upstairs after dinner. Joey was playing with some toys on the bed under the watchful eyes of maids. With her in the room, she allowed the maids to excuse themselves.

Corinne brought some baby food for Joey. She told him to stop playing for a while and have dinner first.

Joey was very obedient. He swiftly put down the toy and got off the bed to eat his dinner. Corinne taught him to eat with a spoon, and Joey followed suit with a nod. His movements might be a bit clumsy, but he was able to learn how to eat.

Corinne could not help but feel a little emotional when she watched him use the spoon. She was leaving, and she did not know if the Holdens would take good care of her once she left.

Since he was not blood-related to anyone in the household, there was no guarantee that the jerk Jeremy might treat his adopted son well in the future. Even if he did, he was the kind of man who had little time to take care of his children.

That was one of the reasons she taught Joey to eat with a spoon. He would be independent enough to feed himself if no one fed him after she left.

She was staring at Joey in a daze when her cell phone began to ring. She had two mobile phones at that moment:

One was her own, and the other was left by Xante.

The ringing came from her phone, and the caller was none other than Jeremy.

Corinne was surprised that Jeremy would give her a call. 'Where did he get the time to call her when he was with his legal wife in another country?'

His act proved that Aaron was right in calling him a control freak.

Corinne snorted and answered the phone.

She scoffed and answered the call. She did not take the initiative to say anything, and neither did Jeremy. In the end, however,

Jeremy spoke first and asked, "What are you doing?"

"Keeping an eye on Joey while he eats his dinner,"

Corinne answered.

"And you? Have you eaten?"

"Yes."

She answered his question curtly, monotonously. If she had a choice, she would never have wanted to answer the call in the first place. She did not want to speak with him at all.

However, it was vital to her escape plan that Jeremy let his guard down.

The man seemed to sigh, and his tone sank too. "Did you play cards with Grandma today? Are you tired?"

Corinne tersely replied, "I'm feeling alright."

The man said again, "Just let Grandma know that you're tired so you don't have to play with her for too long.

You're in no condition to be sitting still for too long."

Corinne said, “Don’t worry. A round of card games isn’t going to affect the pregnancy. Relax, okay? You can focus on things over on your end!”

Jeremy was silent for some time at the other end of the line. Then, he said annoyedly, “Do you think I’m calling you just to ask about the pregnancy?”

Corinne answered bluntly, “Yes.”

Jeremy replied with an even more displeased tone. “Let’s end the call, then. I have nothing more to say to you.”

Corinne hung up without hesitation.

Jeremy merely said that in a moment of anger. Truth be told, he was still waiting for Corinne’s explanation, but all he heard was the dial tone.

In his anger, he gripped his phone so tightly that it nearly broke.

At that moment, a woman came over and asked, “Why the long face, Jeremy? Did something happen?”

After ending the call and tossing the phone, Corinne took out a tissue and wiped Joey's messy face. She then lifted the little guy.

"Are you full?"

Joey wrapped his arms around Corinne's neck and said, "Mhm! I'm full!"

Corinne then gave him a mini-lecture, "That's good. You need to learn how to use a spoon so you can eat without an adult's help in the future. That way, you won't get hungry even if there isn't anyone to feed you."

Joey looked at Corinne somewhat anxiously.

"You...won't be with me all the time?"

Corinne smiled at him gently and avoided answering his question directly. She said, "Your father will always be with you, but he'll be very busy with work. He can't be with you all the time, so you need to learn to be independent."

Joey nodded obediently. "Okay. Joey will work hard and learn to be independent! You and Dada won't worry about me all the time."

Ever since she started taking care of Joey, she frequently spoke to him whenever she had time to spare. Their exchanges allowed him to pick up more words and learn to speak too. Although it was still somewhat incoherent baby language, Corinne could understand him.

Joey was a smart kid, but his learning curve had been delayed because of Anya's and Phoebe's antics.

Joey suddenly leaned on Corinne's shoulder and muttered, "Can I call you 'Mom'?"

His question startled Corinne because it came out of nowhere. "Why do you want to call me 'Mom'?"

"Because Dad said you'll be my mother from now on. I need to listen to you and protect you when I grow up. He even said that you have my little sister in your tummy..."

Corinne felt her chest tighten. "When did he tell you that?"

"On the mountain. You were asleep, but Dad wasn't..."

"I see..." Corinne was a little confused. "Why would Jeremy tell Joey those things when he had a legal wife?

Does he want her to raise Joey because the little boy accepted her more? Does he want her to do that in addition to raising her child? Is it because he can't bear to let his legal wife suffer?"

Corinne liked Joey dearly and did not mind taking him with her, but she felt that doing so would let Jeremy get the easy way out.

'What does he take me for?' she thought to herself.

Corinne's silence left Joey feeling a little anxious. "Can I?"

Corinne snapped back to her senses and answered awkwardly, “You shouldn’t just call anyone ‘Mom’. Once your father comes back, you should ask him who you should be calling ‘Mom’.”

Joey felt a little lost. “Oh...”

Corinne could tell that he was sad. There was nothing else she could do except pat Joey’s head gently to comfort him. “Well, if you’re full, you can continue playing again!”

The role of a mother came with a lot of responsibility. She could not bring herself to be responsible in the sense that she did not want Joey to experience abandonment yet again.

For that reason, she could not accept him calling her ‘Mom’.

She would have brought Joey with her if she had the choice. She was more than happy to raise a child, after all. However, her priority was to rid herself of Jeremy.

Taking his adopted son with him would only make him more desperate to go after her.

Alas, she had to forgo it for the sake of the bigger picture. Joey obediently climbed back onto the bed and played with his toys. Meanwhile, Corinne took out the phone that Xante left her and dialed a number.

The call connected after some time. “What can I do for you at this late hour, Miss Xante?”

There was a pleasant ring to the man's tone. Judging from the background, he seemed to be at home.

Corinne said, "It's me, Corinne."

Jason was stunned for a moment. His charming eyes then lit up. "Corinne? I wouldn't have expected you to call me."

Corinne cut straight to the chase. "Can you do me a favor?"

Jason asked with a smile, "Will I get anything in return?"

Corinne frowned. She pursed her lips and asked, "Shouldn't you be asking me what sort of favor I want from you?"

Jason answered flirtatiously, "That's not important! As long as you give me a chance to get close to you, I'll agree without even batting an eye."

Corinne frowned. She always believed Aaron to be a one-of-a-kind flirt, but it was after meeting Jason that she realized that the latter was far ahead of Aaron in that aspect! She could not care less for his sweet-talking and laid out her plans to him right away.

Jason was forthright about it as well and proposed the benefits he would like in return.

After considering his demands, Corinne eventually agreed and ended the call.

Jason had other things to say, but Corinne ended the call before he could do so. He looked poignantly at the phone and sighed.

“Who were you talking to, Jason?” Zeke asked, putting his arm around Jason’s shoulder.

Jason placed his phone away and smiled. “One of my employees wanted to check something with me.”

Zeke did not suspect a single thing and led Jason back to the wine table. “Let’s continue drinking, then! We’ve gotta get Gerald drunk today!”

On Corinne’s end, she had just ended the call with Jason when another unknown number called.

Since the phone belonged to Xante and the number was not saved, she did not plan on answering calls on a whim and immediately declined it. To Corinne's surprise, the number called again, and Corinne pressed the button to hang up.

It was on the sixth call that Corinne finally answered, and she only did so because she was worried there might be some sort of emergency.

"Why did you keep declining my calls, Xante?"

Corinne wanted to explain to the caller that she was not Xante, but the caller's voice sounded familiar to her.

"Hmph! You even blocked me on social media! What are you trying to achieve? Didn't I already apologize to you?"

Corinne recognized that voice as belonging to Sunny. She was a little surprised, because as far as she knew, they had no business with each other. 'Why would he call Xante?' she asked.

Sunny then said, "Hey! Xante? Why aren't you saying anything? Are you still angry with me? Come on, I've already apologized to you! I didn't even get angry with you when you told on me to my brother and had him send someone to deal with me. You weren't like that when you pushed me into bed the other night!

You can't do this to me! Do you think I'll let you get away with ignoring me after you slept with me? Keep dreaming!"

Corinne finally understood what was going on. Her expression soured, and she massaged her temples. “When did that happen?”

Sunny was silent.

Corinne then asked sternly, “I’m asking you a question!”

Chapter 1150

“W—Why is Xante’s phone w—w—with you?”

Corinne felt a headache coming on. “I’ll repeat my question. When did that happen?”

Sunny did not know how to answer her. He was even more afraid of answering her when he remembered Xante’s warning—he was not to breathe a word of what happened between them to Corinne.

“Oh, Lucas is telling me to do my homework! Talk to you later!” He ended the call swiftly.

Corinne took a deep breath after hearing the dial tone.

Having another problem on her hands was far from ideal. It was bad enough that Aaron got involved with Jeremy’s niece. Even Xante hooked up with one of the Riveras.

Early the next morning, Corinne brought Joey downstairs for breakfast as usual. Having taught the boy to eat with a spoon the day before, he had since picked up the necessary ability and did not even need to be fed at all.

While Corinne was eating some oats, Greg—who never liked her very much and rarely showed any concern for her—said, “Don’t just eat oats. Have some eggs and sausages too. You need the protein!”

Corinne pursed her lips, smiled, and responded curtly and politely.

She was not touched by his words at all. On the contrary, she felt that every single show of concern from the Holdens was for the developing fetus in her stomach!

After breakfast, Francine brought Joey to play while Corinne spoke with Pamela.

Greg went to his study after breakfast, leaving only Pamela inside the room.

Corinne knocked on the door and walked in only after getting Pamela’s permission. Pamela had her glasses on when Corinne came in, and she was busy knitting some baby clothes.

When Corinne came in, Pamela smiled warmly, “Ah, you came at just the right time! What do you think of this little dress that I made? Isn’t it cute?”

Corinne reciprocated with a smile as well. “It’s adorable! But, you don’t have to go to all that trouble. We can just buy them next time.”

Pamela shook her head. “It’s no trouble at all! I’m happy just thinking about your baby wearing the clothes I made! Besides, the clothes I make myself are so much better than buying ready-made ones from the store!”

Corinne smiled, but it was merely a polite smile. She did not feel anything in particular at all.

“Is there something you need from me, Corinne?” Pamela asked, putting down the half-knitted baby clothes.

Corinne nodded. “You said yesterday that you’ll bring me out to clear my mind. Does that offer still stand?”

“It most certainly does!” Pamela said. “Is there any place in particular that you’d like to go to, Corinne?”

Corinne sighed and said, “I’m bored at home, so I’d like to go out for a walk. How about we feed the pigeons at the public park?

Will that be alright?”

Pamela took Corinne’s hand and said, “Of course! You don’t have to ask me for permission. You just need to tell me where you want to go!”

Corinne smiled wryly. “If that’s truly the case, there won’t be so many bodyguards guarding me at the door.”

“Umm, well...” Pamela hesitated.

Corinne finally said, “Well, it’s set then, Grandma. Let’s go for that walk tomorrow morning then. I just checked the weather forecast, and it’s the perfect weather for a walk tomorrow!”
