

The Day I Kissed An Older Man #Chapter 1231 - 1235

Corinne never expected that after all this time, Jeremy could still hurt her.

“No! I’m not going to apologize to her!”

Apologizing was akin to admitting to wrongdoing.

The waiters did not dare to intervene, so they went to get the manager. After all, it was a bad look for the restaurant if a fight broke out at the entrance.

The manager’s hurried arrival attracted the attention of other diners. They, too, came along with him to see what was going on.

Pamela asked Francine to help her over to the entrance when she heard someone say Jeremy and a woman were fighting with another woman. She broke through the crowd and saw Jeremy grabbing Corinne by the collar and forcing her to apologize to Sophia, whose head was bleeding. However, no matter how much he threatened her, Corinne stubbornly refused to apologize. Sophia, on the other hand, kept telling Jeremy she was fine and to let it go.

The livid Pamela rushed over and pushed Jeremy away. “What are you doing? Have you forgotten that Corinne is pregnant?! Have you lost your mind? How can you treat her like this?”

“You see how Sophia is bleeding from her head? Yeah, well, Corinne did that. She needs to apologize to her,” said Jeremy evenly.

With her arms protectively wrapped around Corinne, Pamela turned to look at Sophia. “Sophia, what’s going on? Did Corinne really hurt you?” she asked when she saw the blood on Sophia’s forehead.

“Y... Yes...” replied Sophia hesitantly. “But I’m sure she didn’t mean to! She wanted to leave, but I tried to stop her from leaving because I knew you wanted to talk to her. She...must’ve found me annoying, so she pushed me away gently...and I mean very gently. But it caught me off-guard, so I fell and hit my head. Jeremy started to panic when he saw the blood coming out and wouldn’t stop forcing out an apology from Corinne. I kept telling him I was fine, but he wouldn’t listen to me...”

Pamela frowned after Sophia's retelling of what transpired. She looked at the glowering Jeremy before turning back to look at Corinne, whose eyes were red and teary.

"Corinne, is what Sophia said true?"

Corinne looked at Pamela with wide eyes. She was not in a good mood, so she simply said, "I guess so."

"Since you did push her, Jeremy's right to ask you to apologize to Sophia," said Pamela begrudgingly. "Now, won't you be a good girl and say sorry?"

This stunned Corinne, but it was not long until a chuckle escaped her. 'I shouldn't be surprised. The Holdens are all the same.' She thought Pamela would take her side, but she was obviously wrong about that. 'Of course she'd take her real granddaughter-in-law's side. I'm nothing but a birthing machine to them. They want me to apologize, huh? Fine, I'll apologize!'

The Day I Kissed An Older Man #Chapter

"Alright. I'll apologize to Miss Sophia," said Corinne with a smile.

Pamela smiled, relieved by Corinne's answer. "That's right, Corinne. You're every bit of the sensible girl I know you to be."

Corinne walked up to Sophia, who tried to hide the glee in her eyes.

Sophia waved her hand and lied, “Really, there’s no need, Corinne. I know you didn’t mean—ahh!”

Corinne grabbed Sophia’s hair, dragged her to the counter, and slammed her head down on it before she could finish her sentence.

Everything happened so fast that Sophia did not even have a chance to react. The next thing she knew, she was screaming out in pain.

No one expected that to happen too, so they were understandably shocked.

Corinne had finished dealing with Sophia by the time Jeremy went to stop her. He glared at Corinne when he saw the new injury on Sophia’s forehead.

“What the hell did you do that for?” he hissed.

Corinne pushed Sophia onto Jeremy’s chest before pulling out a tissue from the countertop to wipe her hand.

“Mister Jeremy, there’s nothing more I hate in this world than to be accused of things I didn’t do. I’ll never apologize for baseless accusations. Since you insist I apologize to Sophia, however, I might as well do the things you accused me of before apologizing.”

Jeremy frowned and steadied Sophia before pulling his hand away. He then looked at Corinne with darkened eyes.

Corinne no longer cared what Jeremy thought of her. “Now that I actually hurt Sophia, I don’t mind apologizing to her anymore,” she added.

She turned to Sophia and said solemnly, “Miss Sophia, I’m really sorry for hurting you. Do you need to go to the hospital? I’ll compensate for any medical fees you might’ve incurred.”

Sophia suppressed her anger and looked at Corinne in disbelief. “Why... Why are you treating me like this when we’ve just met?”

Corinne raised an eyebrow. “You don’t have a right to question me when you’ve asked for it yourself.”

“But I didn’t ask for it...” said Sophia pitifully.

Corinne crumpled up the tissue and threw it into the trash can. She then turned to Jeremy and asked, "Now that I've apologized, can I go?"

Jeremy simply looked at her coldly.

Noting his silence, Corinne turned to leave.

Pamela quickly snapped out of her shock. She then put herself in front of Corinne and grabbed her hand. "Corinne, where are you going? Come home with me!"

Corinne pulled her hand back and put some distance between herself and the old woman. "Miss Pamela, I'm sorry you went to all this effort to come here, but I'm not going home with you. I'm going to go back to my own home. Please ask Jeremy and Francine to send you home."

Pamela did not like Corinne addressing her as 'Miss Pamela', but she decided not to correct her on that since there were more important matters.

"Corinne, the baby is going to be due soon, so it's not safe for you to be wandering outside. Be a good girl and come home with me."

Corinne took another step back to prevent Pamela from grabbing her hand again.

"I'm not wandering outside. I have friends and a house, and I know how to take care of myself. You can rest assured I'll be living a very good life," said Corinne impassively. "Miss Pamela, I hope you stop seeing me as your family. Your real granddaughter-in-law is over there. You should ask her to give birth if you want to have a great-grandson. As for the baby I'm carrying right now, he doesn't have anything to do with the Holdens. You don't have to worry about him anymore."

Corinne walked around Pamela to exit the restaurant.

“Corinne...” Pamela tried to stop her again, obviously worried about her.

“Let her go,” said Jeremy emotionlessly.

Stunned, Pamela turned to look at Jeremy with a frown.

Corinne paused for a second before walking out of the restaurant without turning back.

Francine quickly chased after her. “Corinne! Wait!”

Corinne could not walk fast since she was eight months pregnant, so even though she did not stop, Francine managed to easily catch up to her.

Francine stood in front of her with her arms spread. “Corinne, how can you talk to Grandma like that?” she asked angrily. “Do you have any idea how worried she was about you?”

Corinne smiled. “Was she worried about me or the baby?”

Francine frowned. “Both, of course!”

Corinne chuckled softly. “Oh, please! Do you think I was just born yesterday? Why don’t you go back to Miss Pamela?”

She then walked around Francine, wanting to leave as fast as possible.

“No! Corinne, don’t go!” Francine walked with her. She was not going to give up easily, but no matter what she said, Corinne remained unmoved. In the end, she grabbed her elbow and said, “Please stay! You’re my sister-in-law!”

Corinne stopped walking. Annoyed, she looked at Francine coldly. “You’re wrong. Your real sister-in-law is in the restaurant with your brother.”

Francine was taken aback. Books Chapters Are Daily Updated Join & Stay Updated For All Books Updates...

“Do you mean Sophia? I’m never going to accept her as my sister-in-law. Corinne, there must be some misunderstanding. Nothing is going on between Sophia and Jeremy!”

Corinne pulled back her elbow. “Nothing is going on, you say? How can you say that when the two of them are legally married to each other?”

This was the first time Francine learned of the news. “What?! When did that happen? How... How come I’ve never heard of it?” she sputtered.

Corinne did not even bother to analyze whether Francine was putting up an act. “Why don’t you go ask them?”

Francine stood still, worried that Corinne would escape if she went back to the restaurant.

“Corinne, I don’t even know they’re married!” she shouted. “Even if you don’t care about Jeremy anymore, you should still care about Joey! That kid has been shutting himself up in his room ever since you left! He wouldn’t talk to Jeremy, me, or anyone else! Do you have the heart to abandon him like that?”

‘Oh, Joey. That poor kid...’ thought Corinne. She really pitied and liked him.

However, as much as she was worried about him, she could not let herself be dragged back to the Holdens’ mansion because of him.

After a minute of silence, Corinne calmly said, “It sounds like he’s experiencing some psychological problems, but I’m not a psychologist, so I can’t help him. You should get him to see a psychologist as soon as possible.”

Noticing bringing up Joey did not even work on Corinne, Francine grabbed her elbow again. “No! I’m never going to let you go!”

Corinne grew impatient. “Let go, or I’ll hit you!”

She might not be able to do a lot of things because of her huge baby bump, but beating up Francine—who had never been in a fight before—was still easy for her.

“Hit me, then! I’m still never going to let you go even if you beat me to death!” said Francine fearlessly.

Frankly, Corinne did not have the heart to hit her anymore. “Has every one of you Holdens lost your minds? Just what the hell do you think I am?”

At that moment, Annie and Marcus came running over.

Annie sighed when she saw how stubborn Francine was.

“Corinne, Francine only means well,” she said worriedly. “Maybe...you can consider going back to the restaurant to talk things out with Uncle Jeremy? I just feel like there’s a misunderstanding in all of this.”

Corinne looked at Annie. Suddenly, she pushed Francine toward her.

“Take her back to her brother. I don’t have the time to involve myself with the Holdens anymore!”

A hot pink Panamera was parked at the roadside, and Corinne got into the front passenger seat.

The car window slowly rolled down, revealing Aaron’s cheeky face. He looked at Annie and said, “Don’t worry. I’ll take very good care of Corinne.”

Annie’s heart skipped a beat when she saw him. She nodded awkwardly at him. “Okay. I’ll leave her to you, then.”

Aaron glanced at Marcus. After thinking about it, he said, “You can come with us if you’re still worried about her.”

Annie was a little taken aback. ‘Corinne must be keeping all her feelings to herself. I might be able to bring her around if I talk to her!’

With that thought in mind, Annie turned to Marcus and said, “Marcus, I’m sorry, but do you mind going back to the company on your own? I’m going to send Corinne home with Mister Aaron.”

As unwilling as Marcus was, he did not dare to go against his boss' wishes.

After Annie got into the car, Francine ran to the car, too. "Wait, I want to go with you guys!"

However, Aaron had locked the doors, so Francine could not open them no matter how hard she pulled.

"What the hell? Unlock the doors this instant! Hey! Do you hear me?!" screamed Francine.

Aaron ignored Francine. Instead, he turned toward Marcus and said, "Marcus, do you mind pulling Miss Francine aside? She's in my way."

Marcus snapped out of his daze. "Y—Yes, Mister Aaron! Uh... Miss Francine, it's dangerous for you to be so close to the car. They're going to drive off soon."

"Ugh! Let go of me! No, don't!"

Aaron floored the gas pedal and drove off after Marcus pulled Francine away.

In a fit of anger, Francine threw a kick at the direction the car drove off too, causing her shoe to fly up in the air.

In the car, Corinne leaned back into the seat and closed her eyes to get some rest.

Annie peeked her head out from the backseat. "Corinne... Uncle Jeremy..."

"If you bring up that name one more time, I'm going to throw you out of the car," said Corinne emotionlessly, her eyes still closed.

Annie never saw this side of Corinne. She became so scared that she did not even dare to breathe.

Seeing Annie's terrified expression from the rearview mirror, Aaron could not help but smile.

The Day I Kissed An Older Man #Chapter 1235

Soon, they arrived at the apartment Corinne shared with Xante and Aaron.

As soon as she entered the unit, Corinne curled herself up on the sofa. Having not seen her for half a year, her pet cat was so excited that it could not stop rubbing itself against her.

Aaron went to the open-plan kitchen to get her a warm cup of milk. "Here you go, Boss," he said as he placed it on top of the table.

"Thanks," said Corinne, but she did not touch it. Instead, she remained seated with Mimi curled up in her lap, lost in thought.

This was the first time Annie had been at the apartment. She started looking around, and when she saw Corinne stroking a cat, she said worriedly, "Corinne, I don't think it's safe to be around an animal when you're pregnant."

Corinne glanced at Annie. "Who are you to tell me what to do?"

Annie was speechless. Corinne had never spoken to her like that before. 'She must be angry at me because I'm related to Uncle Jeremy,' she thought.

Aaron washed up some fruit and placed them on the table before smiling and saying to Annie, "Don't worry. The cat goes for regular deworming at the vet, so it's safe."

"Oh. Okay..." said Annie with a nod.

She came to persuade Corinne to go back home, but she found herself not daring to even bring up Jeremy's name after Corinne's harsh reminder.

Aaron put on some soothing music on the television before covering Corinne with a blanket. After that, he gestured to Annie with his eyebrow and whispered, "Let's give her some quiet time. Come with me.”Books Chapters Are Daily Updated Join & Stay Updated For All Books Updates...

Annie nodded and followed Aaron to where he was gesturing. However, she did not expect him to bring her into his bedroom! She thought that room would be a study, a gym, or anything else.

When she saw the bed in the room, realization immediately dawned on her.

She felt a little lost, not knowing whether to stand or sit.

Aaron passed her a bottle of Coke. “You can sit wherever you like!”

Annie stood awkwardly after she accepted the bottle.

The only places to sit in the room were the bed and a bean bag chair. Annie thought it would not be appropriate to sit on either.

Aaron cracked open his beer and leaned on the shelf. “What? Are you afraid that I’ll eat you up?” he asked with a smirk.

Annie was not happy at the insinuation. She stood up a little straighter and said angrily, “No! It’s just that I have nowhere to sit. Mister Aaron, don’t you think it’s inappropriate for you to bring me into your room? I think we should go into another room.”

Aaron shrugged. “There’s nothing inappropriate about it since I’m not going to do anything to you.”

Annie started blushing. “I didn’t imply you were going to do anything to me. I just think it’s not appropriate for me to be in your bedroom.”

Aaron threw his head back to gulp down his beer before walking over to her. He then leaned down and smiled at her. “It won’t be inappropriate if no one knows you’re in here.”

Annie took a step back. “Who says no one would know? Have you forgotten Corinne is right outside?”

“Well, she’s one of us. She’s not going to tell.”

“No! That won’t do either. I... I have a boyfriend. He’ll be mad if he finds out I was in another man’s bedroom. I’m going out now!”

Annie hated how her heart would inevitably start skipping like crazy whenever she was with Aaron.
