

Chapter 1188 The Last Round

"How is that possible?"

Morris' face was twisted with anger and the muscles in his hands flexed so hard that he almost crushed the phone in his grip.

However, Doris' little tricks could only fool Morris and Aldwin, but certainly not the middle-aged dealer.

This dealer had been studying gambling for a very long time. He was the best in Poly Casino. He knew all the loopholes and various ways to cheat.

He cleared his throat and began talking based on his previous experiences.

"Sir, there's something strange about this man. He must have cheated!"

A frown appeared on Morris's face.

"Cheating? How did he cheat? He can't even touch the dice cup. Also, we prepared the place, table, and dice by ourselves."

The middle-aged dealer glanced around and said, "Perhaps, someone sent him secret signals."

Aldwin also looked around briefly and caught sight of Doris, who was near the gambling table behind him. All at once, he realized what had happened and shouted angrily.

"You bitch! You slimy snake! I have warned you not to interfere with anything, or I'll be forced to break your Aldwin had already lost several rounds in a row and was feeling very frustrated and angry. He raised his fist and was about to attack Doris.

Trevor's eyes grew wide with shock. He slammed his fist down on the gambling table and shouted, "Enough!"

Everyone was stunned into silence by Trevor's outburst, and so was Aldwin. His fist remained frozen in midair and he looked quite embarrassed.

If it were someone else, Aldwin would have ignored him. But he couldn't ignore Trevor.

There was a simple reason behind this. He could never defeat Trevor!

Before Trevor's hands and legs were restrained, Aldwin wouldn't dare to piss him off.

Trevor snorted and asked, "What's with that expression on your face? You can't afford to taste defeat? You promised that you would let her go if I won. How many rounds have I won so far? Why won't you let her go? And you even dared to raise your hand to hit her in front of me? Do you think I'm done yet?"

Trevor placed his hand on the edge of the gambling table as if he was going to overturn it.

Morris shrank back and gritted his teeth.

"That's not what we meant."

Feigning impatience, Trevor knocked restlessly on the gambling table.

"I don't have the luxury of time to waste with you. Didn't you want me to be restrained with handcuffs? Okay, that won't be a problem. I can oblige to it. But the only condition is for her to be released first!"

Trevor decided to take Doris to his side first so that she would be safe.

Aldwin glanced at Doris' innocent face and there was an expression of wild excitement on his face.

All he had done so far, including the kidnapping and gambling, was so he could handcuff Trevor.

"Okay! You have yourself a deal!" Aldwin agreed without much hesitation.

Morris was also visibly excited by the new development. He quickly pushed the metal handcuffs on the gambling table toward Trevor.

Trevor reached for the handcuffs and picked them up. Then he said, "Release her now."

Aldwin raised his chin and gestured at Doris. "Go there quickly!"

There was a worried expression on Doris' face as she glanced at Trevor. Then she began walking slowly in his direction.

Morris followed up quickly and was about to handcuff Trevor.

As soon as Doris was beside Trevor, Morris finished cuffing him.

"Aldwin, it's all done." Morris shouted at the top of his voice.

Aldwin laughed and lit a cigarette. He was now in a good mood.

He exhaled sharply and stared at Trevor.

"Dragon, how about we play the last round now?"

Doris was quite worried. She knew that she stood no chance against Aldwin.

And with Trevor's hands cuffed, they were now in a very bad situation.

However, it appeared that Trevor didn't seem to notice the anxiety on Doris' face.

He leaned his back against the chair and looked straight into Aldwin's eyes.

"Okay, I'm ready to play whenever you are ready."