

Chapter 1156 Go To A Higher Battle Zone

Three days later, Liam was racing across the battlefield.

His hard work had paid off; he had taken down four peak sixth-rank creatures, pushing his score past fifty thousand points!

Liam did the math and realized that at this rate, he would barely hit one hundred thousand points by the time he left the trial realm.

This meant all his battles would earn him just one chance to draw the Shadow Sword.

Naturally, he wasn't thrilled with this.

The points store was packed with great stuff, after all.

Outside the trial, getting those items would be way more costly than using points in the points store.

Liam couldn't just leave the trial realm knowing this.

While thinking it over, a new idea struck him.

If, by day nine, his points were still too low, he would take a risk and head into the territory of seventh-rank creatures.

If he could kill a seventh-rank creature, then points wouldn't be an issue for him anymore.

With his current strength, taking down a seventh-rank creature would get him at least one hundred thousand points!

If he could do that, he would earn more than just one shot at drawing the Shadow Sword; he could get some other great rewards, too.

For example, Liam had had his eye on a set of ordinary-grade armor in the points store.

His old red armor had been wrecked by a punch from the Zephyr Ape.

Liam needed a new set now.

Even though the armor in the points store was just "ordinary-grade", he was almost sure it would be a big upgrade from his previous red armor.

Besides that, Liam also wanted to acquire a Shadow Flower.

When he had been with the Prescott family's team, he remembered Susannah saying she desperately needed a Shadow Flower to save her life.

Liam believed Idris didn't have the strength to get one. If he got a Shadow Flower, he could save Susannah.

After all, Susannah had saved his life and had always treated him well.

If the Shadow Flower could save her, Liam wouldn't think twice to give it to her.

Both the Shadow Flower and the armor cost ten thousand points each.

With the points Liam currently had, after aiming for the Shadow Sword, it seemed almost impossible to save up enough.

Liam clenched his teeth, made up his mind, and then began taking down creatures left and right in the battle zone.

Time flew by, and soon, it was Liam's ninth day.

Liam had earned quite a few points, but he was still stuck at around eighty thousand.

He frowned, realizing that at this pace, he might not even reach the hundred thousand mark.

He believed he might have to return to the lower battle zones and fight some weaker creatures to hit his goal.

But that would take more time...

Thinking this over, Liam's gaze hardened.

It seemed he had no choice but to take the risk.

Liam moved up a level.

His decision was clear.

He was heading to the battle zone meant for seventh-rank creatures!
