Chapter 1276 Everett's Elimination

Liam couldn't resist a chilling laugh at Everett's arrogance.

This self-proclaimed man was nothing but a pompous fool.

"Thinking about your exit strategy already?" Everett sneered. "This arena fight may not be fatal, but I guarantee you'll feel real pain!"

Liam scoffed, unfazed by the empty threats. He didn't say anything more. The outcome would speak for itself.

The screen flashed with the words "Match Start", officially signaling the beginning of the fight.

Everett moved like a ferocious beast. His eyes burned with deadly intent as he lunged forward with a roar.

"Time for your elimination!" he snarled.

Everett moved with surprising speed, aiming to end the match in the first round.

However, his confidence shattered in a heartbeat when he found that Liam was faster than him.

Liam's speed were inhumanly fast, leaving a trail of afterimages as he effortlessly dodged Everett's attack.

Suddenly, a blinding light erupted behind Everett.

Instinctively, Everett glanced down to find a beam of light silently piercing his chest.

A searing pain lanced through his back, but before he could react, the Network of Human Sovereign had teleported him out of the arena.

"I... I lost?" Everett stood bewildered outside the arena.

He couldn't believe he had been eliminated by Liam in a single move.

The reality of his defeat was crushing.

Everett stared at Liam with a mix of humiliation, disbelief, and a flicker of curiosity.

How could this Liam have defeated him so effortlessly?

Unable to figure it out, Everett walked away from the arena, his head hung low in shame.

The moment he stepped outside, his power surged back to its full potential—Primogem King level.

As he had boasted earlier, he had come here to crush weaklings.

The Network of Human Sovereign only allowed participants up to the Primogem Warrior level to enter the Human Sovereign Arena, so Everett had suppressed his power to the peak of the tenth level just to enter.

He had expected to crush all his opponents in the arena. However, he had been defeated by Liam!

Everett burned with anger and humiliation.

"Liam Hoffman," he muttered, the name etching itself into his memory.

But he wouldn't be looking for revenge. This arena was a test of pure skill.

Instead, Everett found himself oddly intrigued by Liam's prowess. He wanted to have a battle with Liam again one day.

Meanwhile, oblivious to Everett's thoughts, Liam stood poised within the arena.

He knew he was in the Human Sovereign Arena, which meant all the contestants had to limit their power within Primogem Warrior level.

Within these limitations, Liam knew he would be invincible.

The arena boomed with a notification following his victory over Everett.

"Congratulations, contestant, on your first win! You've earned 100 points. Rewards will be distributed upon completion of the task. Your next opponent will be with the strength of level ten with two stars. Please confirm if you want to continue."

Without a moment's pause, Liam opted to continue.

The Network of Human Sovereign acknowledged his choice and swiftly matched him with a new opponent.

Soon, a figure materialized across from Liam.

The level-ten two-star opponent exuded a powerful aura that rivaled Everett's.

And just like Everett, he smirked and said to Liam, "Well, well. You seem to have run out of luck. How do you prefer to be eliminated?"
