

Chapter 1209 Friend

Having resolved all the uncertainties in his mind, Liam suddenly found himself pondering a new question.

Lancy had explained to him earlier that she had intentionally exposed her aura to lure the powerful warriors in the Cosmic realm. Liam wondered whether this was how the Blood Clan had been able to locate Blue Star.

Should Lancy choose to shut down her signal, effectively severing the connection that guided outsiders to Blue Star, would it cause the Blood Clan army to lose their way, leaving the Saint Society stranded and isolated here?

This notion caused Liam's heart to skip a beat.

Liam looked at Lancy, who was like a schoolgirl and appeared innocent and easy to deceive.

After giving it some thought, he asked, "Lancy, if we conceal the signal emitted from the Blue Star, do you think the powerful beings outside will still manage to find their way here?"

Even though Lancy had been alive for a long time, she had never engaged in social interactions. She was akin to a naïve child, devoid of the ability to read the minds of others.

As a result, Lancy did not discern the intention behind Liam's question. She shook her head and replied candidly, "No, if the signal is cut off, the powerful beings outside the Blue Star will not be able to find their way here."

Liam was thrilled upon hearing Lancy's confirmation. After a brief moment of thinking, Lancy continued, "No one can enter Blue Star unless they are a powerful source God."

Liam nodded, his thoughts racing as he suddenly devised a new strategy to avert the looming crisis of Blue Star.

The solution was clear-cut. He needed to persuade Lancy to stop emitting her signal.

After all, Lancy had made it clear to Liam that once the signal was cut off, all outsiders, except powerful source Gods, would be effectively barred from entering the territory of the Blue Star.

"Lancy," Liam said. "You have been wanting to see the Cosmic realm, right? Our meeting here feels like fate, and because you saved my life, I owe you a favor. Since you've already detected the World Power within me, you must realize my background is far from ordinary. Let me be honest with you. My father is a powerful source God. The World Power in my body was passed down to me by my father. He desires for me to gain strength quickly."

After a pause, he continued, "I am certain that I will ascend to the pinnacle of the Blue Star within the next few decades. When that happens, I will return here and take you to the Cosmic realm. If you have faith in me, please wait for me here. However, during this period, I request that you turn off your signal and refrain from searching for other powerful beings. Can you do that?"

Liam was proficient in the art of persuasion. Thus, after a series of compelling arguments, he successfully convinced Lancy.

Although she had been alive for many years, Lancy had had no contact with the outside world. She possessed a simple, trusting nature and believed what others said without question.

Hence, she was easily deceived by Liam.

Besides, Lancy held a favorable impression of Liam. After all, she was aware that he possessed World Power. She wholeheartedly believed Liam when he claimed that he would reach the pinnacle of Blue Star.

Therefore, Lancy nodded without any hesitation. "Okay! I can do that!" she assured Liam.

Lancy even went further and gave Liam a part of the World Power that belonged to Blue Star. "Rest assured, Liam. I won't let you down!" she said, waving her fist with a serious look on her face.

A slight smile crossed Liam's face. As he looked at Lancy, his gaze softened. "From now on, we're officially friends," he said warmly. "Lancy, I'm really glad to be your friend!"

Upon hearing Liam's declaration, Lancy froze in place, as if she had been struck by a bolt of lightning.

Liam felt puzzled, unable to grasp what was wrong with Lancy.

He then noticed her lips forming the word "friend".

After softly mouthing the word "friend" a couple more times, Lancy suddenly jumped up with ecstasy. "I made a friend!" she exclaimed happily. "I have a friend now! Liam, you're my very first friend! I'm going to have lots of friends in the future!"

The pure joy in Lancy's expression reminded Liam of a child's innocent delight. He was also a bit moved.

It was difficult to fathom how Lancy had managed to spend tens of millions of years in Blue Star.

To Liam, the thought of spending so much time with only Flame as a companion seemed extremely torturous.

After a brief moment of excitement, Lancy composed herself and turned to Liam.

"Liam, I forgot to ask, but what brings you here?" she asked in a friendly tone.

Lancy's question jolted Liam's memory, reminding him of the purpose behind his journey here. He couldn't help but reproach himself. How could he nearly forget such a crucial matter?

Upon recalling that Lancy was the master of this world, Liam realized that asking her about the Genmo might yield valuable insights.

So, Liam quickly said, "My master lost something in this area. According to him, the item fell into the core of the earth. I came here to search for it. Lancy, have you seen anything like it before?"

Liam then proceeded to describe the characteristics of the Genmo to Lancy in detail, hoping she might have some information on its whereabouts.
