When Liam awakened, revitalized by the wood-element law power infused in the tea, two hours had elapsed.

Upon opening his eyes, he was met by Ameer's comforting gaze and gentle smile.

Before Liam could voice his thanks, Ameer encouraged him with a smile, "First, assess your condition."

Reminded by Ameer, Liam remembered the transformative experience his body and spirit had undergone after drinking the tea.

He was almost certain that his strength had improved significantly.

Excited, Liam quickly began to evaluate his condition.

He found a strand of wood-element law power within his body, with a mastery now at an astonishing 3%.

Liam was amazed.

Just a sip of the tea had allowed him to comprehend the wood-element law power, elevating his mastery to 3%.

This was a testament to the tea's value.

Furthermore, Liam noticed a significant boost in his soul power.

Upon careful assessment, he realized his soul power now matched that of seventh-stage Primogem Kings like Chad and Everett.

The benefits of such an increase in soul power were boundless, particularly as soul power greatly aided the comprehension of law powers. This advancement meant that his future endeavors in mastering law powers would be easier.

Liam was elated; his quest for the Heart of Life fragments had unexpectedly led to such a fortunate encounter.

This venture had proven to be very fruitful.

With gratitude swelling in his heart, Liam stood, bowed deeply to Ameer, and said with sincerity, "Your kindness has left a deep imprint on me, Mr. Deleon. Thank you for your guidance!"

Ameer, smiling contentedly at Liam's respectful demeanor, said, "There's still some tea left in the bowl. Finish it. I'll ensure your safety as you do."

Liam nodded enthusiastically, expressed his gratitude once more, and swiftly finished the remaining tea.

Despite consuming a larger quantity this time, his mastery of the wood-element law only increased to 5% this time.

Five hours later, when he awoke, Liam was pleased to discover his mastery had reached 5%.

The idea that a single bowl of tea could elevate his understanding of the wood-element law power so significantly was astounding.

Just then, Ameer posed a question. "Young man, are you married?"

This unexpected inquiry left Liam puzzled.

He wondered if his marital status had any relevance to his

Nonetheless, grateful for Ameer's help, Liam replied honestly, "Yes, I'm married. My wife and I have a child."

He chose not to share the challenges Julie and Asher were facing, considering it a private matter.

When Ameer heard this, he shook his head as he muttered, "Just one? That seems insufficient!"

Hearing this, Liam asked with a confused expression, "Insufficient? Mr. Deleon, what do you mean?"

Ameer responded with a hearty laugh. Then, he said, "Young man, with your exceptional talent, why limit yourself to one wife? Imagine the potential of your offspring if you were to have multiple talented partners!"
