

Chapter 1352 The Second Special Mission

After the initial rush of excitement settled, Liam began strategizing his next moves.

Having ascended to the seventh stage as a Primogem Expert, he was now on the cusp of becoming a Primogem King.

Liam set his immediate goal on completing various tasks to accumulate enough points to upgrade his clearance to level four.

His mind often drifted to the Heart of Life fragments. He wanted to find one soon.

Additionally, Liam planned to gather any leads on Julie and Asher once he made his way to the interstellar battlefield.

He wouldn't find peace until he saved them.

The thought of Asher crying for him in the Blood Clan's realm weighed heavily on his heart.

He sighed deeply, looking off into the distance, and muttered, "Julie, Asher, wait for me. I will find and save you soon."

With renewed determination, Liam evaluated his current situation.

In terms of law powers, he had already harnessed the formidable law power of death. He understood that mastering the law power of the light element and life force would grant him access to two more top-tier law powers.

Among the second-tier law powers, he had already mastered the law power of the metal, wood, water, and earth elements.

By mastering the law power of the fire element and integrating it with the other four to form the law power of the five elements, he would elevate it to a top-tier law power.

The distinction between the first and second tiers of law power lay in their potency; the first-tier law power was significantly more potent than the second-tier law power.

Reflecting on his experiences in the Sea of Laws, Liam felt excited.

Comprehending his first top-tier law power so quickly, even reaching a proficiency of 7%, was almost unbelievable. If he hadn't experienced it himself, he might not have believed it.

Reining in his excitement, Liam exited the training chamber to take on some missions. Earning task points had become his utmost priority now.

Reaching the Primogem King level and obtaining a level-four clearance were essential steps towards his ultimate goal: becoming the City Lord's disciple and venturing into the interstellar battlefield.

Approaching the level-four task machine, Liam scoured the listings for a mission suitable for him.

Despite an exhaustive search, he was unable to find a suitable one. The available missions were either excessively dangerous, requiring more strength than he currently possessed, or offering too little reward for the effort required.

Just then, a notification from the Network of Human Sovereign resonated in Liam's mind.

He checked the message and was taken aback.

"A special mission?" he muttered.

The perfect timing of the appearance of this special mission led Liam to briefly wonder if Caden had orchestrated it after noticing his struggles to find a suitable task.

However, he quickly shelved that thought. The source of the mission was irrelevant; the critical factor was the potential to earn substantial points, particularly from a special mission known for its lucrative rewards.

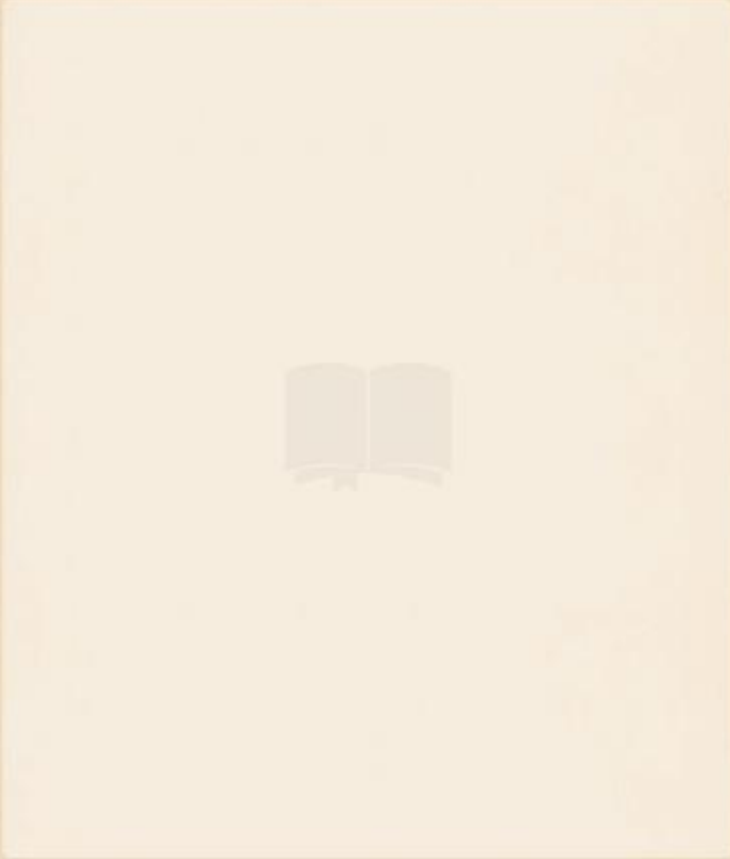

With renewed interest, Liam delved into the mission details. The mission
