

Chapter 1308 So What

Liam's expression darkened as he extracted the crystal cores from the five Dark Mist Spirits to prevent them from resurrecting.

Turning, he faced the one who had interfered.

It was Jason Astron, who had ridiculed him upon his arrival at the No. 76 resource planetary system just the day before.

Jason was flanked by two men, both formidable level-seven Primogem Experts.

Observing the men's deferential behavior towards Jason, Liam surmised the significant influence of the Astron family.

For the Astron family, even level-seven Primogem Experts served as mere servants.

Despite realizing the Astron family's formidable reputation, Liam was not intimidated.

Facing two level-seven Primogem Experts and Jason, a level-five Primogem Expert, Liam remained confident. Even without his breakthrough earlier, he could easily defeat them.

He was prepared to teach Jason a lesson.

Liam's voice was deep and resolute as he confronted Jason, saying, "Why did you steal my prey?"

What infuriated Liam the most was the disruption of his plan. He had intended to use his life-draining Origin Technique on the Dark Mist Spirits to absorb their life force, a strategy thwarted by Jason's interference.

Jason, unabashed and arrogant, said, "I saw you were tired. I merely had my servants assist you. And since we helped kill the Dark Mist Spirits, those five crystal cores belong to us. Plus, I saved your life. You should really hand over all the crystal cores you have to me."

Jason had maintained this predatory behavior for a long time, having already coerced nearly ten crystal cores from other Primogem Experts.

The mission this time had a ranking system determined by the number of crystal cores each participant collected. The more crystal cores gathered, the higher the completion rate and the better the rewards.

When Liam heard Jason's words, his expression turned into a frown as he grasped Jason's motives. He muttered, "So, you came here just to cause trouble!"

Jason heard Liam loud and clear.

He sneered, "So what? Here, I can't stand seeing you around. Even if I want to kill you, you won't be able to do anything. With your power, do you really think you can stop me? To be honest, I've done this many times. Be smart, and hand over all the crystal cores you have. I'm in a generous mood today, so I might just let you walk away!"

Liam almost laughed in disbelief at the audacity of Jason's words, but his anger quickly overshadowed any amusement.

He had naively thought that within the Human Clan in the Cosmic realm, internal conflicts like this were absent.

But he now realized that such hope was merely wishful thinking!

Perhaps only the warriors on the frontline were different. Away from the front lines, the Human Clan was plagued by many corrupt and despicable figures!

Fueled by this realization, Liam's resolve hardened. He decided he would not give Jason any chance to redeem himself.

Jason, with his blatant arrogance and history of stealing crystal cores, deserved to face the consequences of his actions!

Facing Jason squarely, Liam stated icily, "If you want my crystal cores, you'll have to put your life at risk for that!"
