Chapter 686

The perfect opportunity Due to her fragile mental state, Charis committed many mistakes at work.

At first, Brandon thought that was normal. After all, He had just suffered such a traumatic blow.

While the employees complained about their carelessness, he could only try to appease them saying, “Miss Turner just got out of a serious accident.

We have to be patient and give some time for him to recover.” Since Brandon himself had given the order, the employees could no longer say anything. They did not have no choice but to put up with Charis.

All the days, employees of the Larson Group received tea pm.

One afternoon, a group of employees gathered for tea and dessert “When I went to the bathroom today, I accidentally caught Miss Turner taking off her mask..” one of they whispered softly.

“She looked in the mirror, she talked to herself and then screamed madly” “Really? I’ve never seen her without a mask since he went back to work. Another colleague surprised.

“Well, I saw it with my own eyes... She saw me....

Let’s just say he was shocked when I saw his face... Anyone who saw his face would have died of fear.

He looked like a living corpse! Of the kind rotten, of course.” said the first employee with a deep sigh, shaking his head.

At that time, a cup of hot tea poured on his face.

She screamed and covered her reddened face, rolling on the floor in pain..

Charis dropped the empty cup in her hand and he spat on the woman on the ground.

“Spreading rumors about me? I’ll rip your mouth out.” Without warning, he pounced on the colleague and wrapped his fingers around her neck, slapping her across the face several times.

The people around him were scared.

Some were bold enough to jump into action and tried to stop Charis.

However, when Charis finally went washed away, the poor woman was so broken She had to be rushed to the hospital.

This affair caused such a sensation that the employees they couldn't help but complained to the management about Charis's disgusting behavior.

But Charis didn't stop there.

later that same day, he made a mistake in a meeting and had a big fight with a business partner of the Group Larson.

That was the straw that broke the camel's back.

Finally, Brandon called, took her to his office to talk... As soon as Charis sat down across from him, Brandon slid a business card down the table and went straight to the point: "You can't go on like this, I know a psychologist who is very good at what does.

You should go see it." Tears began to roll down the cheeks of Charis.

He put his trembling hands on it.

desk, her breath hitched.

knew that the day Brandon would drive her away would be late or early.

And this was it!” Do you think I’m crazy?” she asked with a trembling voice.

Brandon shook his head and explained his patient reasoning.

“I don’t think you’re crazy, but I do think your state of mind is delicate right now.

of course i can understand How do you feel now.

I don’t want to blame you.

only you I strongly suggest you seek help professional, or will affect your work and life in the future.”

Charis clenched her fists tightly.

in his eyes, Brandon was just making excuses.

knew that he must be upset with her.

After all, his face was disfigured now, and not even he could work as skillfully as before.

How the hell was he supposed to fall in love with her? “Okay, I hear you.” He scoffed coldly.

So As soon as he left Brandon’s office, he He collapsed and ran out crying.

did not take the Brandon’s card Obviously I didn’t want to see a psychologist.

Rubbing his aching temples, Brandon he waved and sighed.

In its current fragile state, Charis couldn’t do anything right.

But considering the fact that they were friends, no he could just kick her out of the Larson Group.

Only he could hope that she could figure things out.

 At first, Janet didn’t know how bad she had gotten.

put Charis.

It wasn't until Brandon told him realized the seriousness of the situation.

He also realized that this was the perfect opportunity, Charis used to be a woman serene and intriguing that it was extremely difficult to specify.

But now, he was in his most fragile.

Finally, it was time for Janet to knock down!
