

Chapter 2044 Taking Action

Lexi carefully took the dress out of the bag, then proceeded to hang it up.

Unfortunately, she was too short to accomplish that simple task, even though she was already standing on her tiptoes.

Seeing her struggle, Sonia walked over to lend some help.

As she drew closer, she deftly removed a metal accessory from Lexi's purse and slipped it into her own sleeve.

Lexi was completely oblivious to this, but she was instantly on the alert at Sonia's proximity.

"I can manage on my own," she said, glaring at Sonia. "Please step back. I can't run the risk of you damaging the clothes."

She still bore a grudge over the things Sonia had said to her during their first meeting. She had been humiliated, after all.

She wondered why Janet had even sent Sonia when all she had to do was hang the dress on the rack. Did Janet have so little faith in her?

Lexi's thoughts were racing. If she accepted Sonia's help now, wouldn't that only confirm that she was as useless as Janet thought?

Sonia didn't even flinch at Lexi's blatant hostility. She took a step back without saying a word.

Sonia was about to leave when Draco's assistant came in with more times, so she decided to lend a hand.

"Thank you so much for your help!" the assistant said in earnest.

"Don't mention it," Sonia said with a blank expression. Then she discreetly tucked the accessory into the clothing and acted like nothing happened.

Once Lexi was done with her task, she followed the other two to W Marks' garment storage area.

"Wow, this piece is so stunning! Draco is really talented!"

She couldn't help but marvel at the clothes in front of her, her eyes sparkling with a mix of admiration and desire. More than once, she felt the urge to reach out and run her fingers through the fabric, but she withdrew her hand each time.

"We should head back. Janet is waiting for us," Sonia said from behind her.

Lexi whirled around, startled. She pressed a palm against her chest and glared at Sonia. "You scared the hell out of me!"

Her resentment towards Sonia was growing by the minute. She was convinced that Sonia was trying to cozy up to Janet.

But if she didn't follow, Sonia might tattle to Janet.

Sonia was really the bane of her existence!

Lexi huffed in frustration, but she did follow Sonia.

Before making her exit, however, she cast one last glance at the coat.

Sonia glanced at the same piece for a couple of seconds, then turned away and also left.

"Ah, they're back." Janet was the first to notice their return, and she acknowledged it with a smile to Draco.

Draco turned around to see both Sonia and Lexi had sour looks.

"How did it go?" Janet asked curiously.

"It's done," Lexi answered in a rush, afraid that Sonia might beat her to it. "I hung the dress myself and inspected everything with my own eyes. Everything is in order. I also happened to see W Marks' coat, and I must say, it's really stunning!"

Draco smiled politely and said nothing.

Janet patted Lexi's shoulder as a way to commend her. "Well done. I'll treat you to something sweet when we're in the office."

"Thank you, Janet!"

While they chattered away, no one noticed Sonia moving slightly farther to the side. She made quick work of sending the serial number of the clothes Lexi had inspected.

In a matter of seconds, Sonia was already putting away her phone. Her face had remained placid and expressionless all throughout.
