

Chapter 956 Find A Way Out

"Lydia is Jethro's wife. Why do you think she'll help you?"

"Because the Larson Group helped her," Janet replied, thinking that Lydia would be able to help her.

Jethro abandoned Lydia and their baby for money. Meanwhile, Brandon was the one who had helped a lot her when she gave birth to a child that very same day. ①

Jethro was a total scum, so Janet figured that Lydia was probably willing to help Brandon and tell the truth because of her husband's betrayal. ②

"No time for chitchat. I'm going to ask Mr. Wesley for a leave," Janet said. Her attention at that moment was focused on Brandon. She had to go to the hospital and convince Lydia to step up and tell the truth to the public. ③

"Don't be in such a hurry, Janet!" Tasha persuaded. "How are you going to persuade her? Do you even know which hospital she's in?"

Sean was the one who dealt with Lydia's matter, so Janet figured that he must know which hospital she was in.

"I'll call Sean. He knows where she is."

With that, Janet took out her phone and dialed Sean's number.

Sean answered the call after the first ring.

"Mrs. Larson, you should be working right now," Sean said. He had vaguely guessed as to why Janet called him, but he still pretended not to know.

"What's the matter?"

"Send me the address of the hospital where Lydia is staying. Could you also sort out her information and send it to me? Thank you."

Normally, Sean wouldn't refuse her requests, but he had no choice but to refuse her this time.

"I'm sorry, but I'm Mr. Larson's assistant. I won't give any information to anyone else except for him."

Brandon guessed that Janet would try to find evidence when she saw the news this morning, so he reminded Sean to stop her from doing anything reckless.

"If you say so. I won't make things difficult for you, Sean." Janet let out a small smile. "The White family is just as capable anyway. I'll just go to my parents and ask them for help."

Sean's eyes widened in shock. He didn't expect that. Thus, he had no choice but to give the information to Janet. ²

He hesitated for a moment before he said, "You better not go to her right now. Lydia just gave birth and she's quite unstable right now, especially since she has also just lost her husband. She was hostile to the Larson Group because they promised to give her compensation in exchange for the evidence last night. She didn't agree, though. I think she wants more money."

Janet took a deep breath and sighed. "I don't think we can solve this issue with money. I know Brandon asked you to stop me from getting involved, but please trust me on this and don't say a single word to him. Let me handle it."

Sean reluctantly nodded. "Fine. I'll keep my mouth shut. But be careful, okay?"

Janet agreed and hung up the call after that. She then intended to ask Draco for a leave.

"Mr. Wesley didn't come to work today," Tasha told her. "He has some personal issues to deal with."

"Oh," Janet simply replied. She thought for a while, and she eventually realized that asking for a leave wasn't the best choice since she still had a lot of projects to finish. "I can go during lunch break. Our studio is close to the hospital that Sean told me."

At that point, she had a hunch that things wouldn't go well, so she had to adjust her state of mind and stay alert at all times.

She sat back in her seat and went on to finish her work first.

When she noticed that Tasha was still standing behind her, Janet smiled and asked, "Do you have something to tell me?" 2

Tasha fiddled with her fingers. "Do you really have to go? Men are more or less chauvinistic, you know? If something unexpected happens, aren't you afraid that you and Brandon might have an irreconcilable conflict? You also have your own career ahead of you." 4

Janet went silent as she bit her lower lip. Tasha did have a point.
