Chapter 1491

Zachary looked at his younger cousin.

Callum immediately pretended as if nothing happened and ate his food.

However, his mind was not focused on the food.

He originally wanted to go directly to the Newmans' residence, but he had no choice but to come here since Josh had invited him. Thus, he did not go to the Newman residence but came to his family's hotel first.

Serenity saw Callum's reaction and figured out what was going on. She turned her head to look at Zachary.

Zachary asked her gently, "Are you full, honey?"

Serenity hummed.

He fed her until she was full.

"Stop glaring at Callum."

Serenity whispered while taking out her phone. When she called Camryn's number, what answered her was a mechanical voice saying, "The number you've dialed is unavailable."

Camryn's phone was turned off.

Since she could not see, she did not have messaging apps. It would be hard to contact her if she did not pick up her calls.

"Her phone is turned off. Go to her place tomorrow to have a look. I'll drop by her shop tomorrow morning and put in a word for you while buying some flowers for Liberty.

Callum regarded Serenity as the only person who could help him, so Serenity had no choice but to give him a hand.

"Thank you, Serenity," Callum hurriedly uttered.

He still wanted to go to the Newmans' residence later.

However, Camryn was not at home. After Callum forced a kiss on her and her assistant returned to the store, she left Spring Blossoms.

Then, she called Dalton and told him she was waiting for him at the roadside about a hundred meters from the store and asked him to come and pick her up.

After Dalton fetched her from the roadside, she asked him to send her to a seaside villa in Wiltspoon. Camryn had a villa by the sea, but it was not registered under her name; it was under Dalton's name.

That way, it would not raise any eyebrows.

Camryn liked the sea.

Before she became blind, she would often hail a cab to the seaside alone when she was wronged and bullied at home. She would sit on the beach by the shore, quietly looking at the sea and enjoying the breeze.

She thought about her father.

After her father's death, her mother burned all of her father's photos. All the valuables left behind by him were sold by her mother, and all the worthless ones were thrown away.

If Camryn wanted to know what her father looked like, she had to look at the album kept by her youngest aunt or see his photo on his grave when she went to the cemetery to visit her grandparents' graves every year.

Her father's grave was far from her grandparents'.

Her youngest aunt told her that her grandparents liked her father the most. Back then, her youngest aunt had suggested that he be buried next to her grandparents' graves so that he could be reunited with his parents in the afterlife.

However, her uncle strongly disagreed and insisted on burying her father far away from her grandparents. He also bought the two empty burial pits next to her grandparents with the intention of having his wife and himself buried next to his parents when they died.

Camryn did not understand what it meant when she was young.

After growing up, she understood.

Her uncle was jealous of her father, so he did not want her father's grave to be too close to her grandparents after his death.

In the sea-view villa, Camryn was accompanied by Dalton and held an afternoon video conference with the senior management of Newman Enterprise, telling them that her family had undergone great changes after her mother and sister were arrested.

Her uncle was also implicated and was temporarily being held by the police for investigation.

Of course, she did not tell them that she was the one who reported on her uncle.

At first, her uncle was just taken in for questioning, but he was detained not long after.

Chapter 1492

Camryn knew that it was not because the police had found evidence of her uncle harming her father so quickly. It was because of the incident with her mother, as well as the evidence that Mr. York provided, that made it so her uncle could not escape.

Out of the evidence that Josh found, most of them pointed to Mrs. Newman on the surface. He suspected that Mr. Newman used his wife as a scapegoat. However, who was Josh Bucham? He managed to find more evidence against Mr. Newman.

In the end, Mr. Newman lost his freedom.

The incident with Mrs. Newman caused a huge stir in Wiltspoon. After being reported on extensively by the media, not only people in Wiltspoon knew about it; people in other cities who watched the news also learned about the incident.

Of course, the people in Newman Enterprise were in the know too.

They were wondering who would be in charge of the company after Mr. Newman and his wife went to jail. Who would inherit Newman Enterprise?

Mr. Newman's only son?

However, he was still a high-school student. Mr. Newman protected his only son very well, so they had never seen the young man before.

Camryn usually learned about the happenings of Newman Enterprise through Dalton. Many people felt that since she was blind and young, there were many things that she did not know how to do. When she held the video conference with everyone, they doubted if she could manage Newman Enterprise.

However, the conference dispelled the doubts of the senior management. The eldest daughter of the Newman family was very well-informed about the company's situation.

Moreover, the deputy managing director, Dalton, was sitting next to her. Dalton had always been deeply trusted and relied on by Mr. Newman. If he supported Camryn, what else could they say?

They were just senior executives.

In the end, Newman Enterprise belonged to the Newman family.

As long as it was a member of the Newman family who continued to pay their salaries, it did not matter to them who was on top.

At that moment, Camryn was still at the sea-view villa.

She did not know that Callum went to beg Serenity for help after failing to contact her.

Serenity did not know that Camryn had changed her phone number.

She was also considering whether to tell Serenity her new number, but if she did, then Callum would find out as well.

Camryn lay on a recliner in the yard. Next to her was a table, and on the other side of the table was another recliner as well as a large parasol that could shelter her from the wind and rain both during the day and night.

Dalton came out with the cooked dishes and placed them one by one on the table. Then, he went back inside and took some empty plates for Camryn and himself.

"Let's eat."

"Sorry for making you cook, Dal."

Dalton laughed. "There's no need to apologize. Try the chowder first."

He gave Camryn a bowl of seafood chowder.

"Thank you."

"You don't need to be so courteous with me either."

He also served a bowl of chowder for himself.

“Do you want me to take you back to the city after eating?” Dalton asked gently.

“Yes. I’m sorry for the trouble.

Camryn had originally wanted to stay, but she figured that Dalton would not leave Wiltspoon tonight since it was late now. If she stayed, Dalton would stay as well because he was worried. Although they were like siblings, she was afraid that living together like this would cause his girlfriend to misunderstand.

Thus, she decided to go back to the city.

Her younger brother would be back in two days.

He usually came home once a month.

Camryn and her mother did not tell him about the changes in the family since they did not want to affect his studies.

“If you want to stay here for a few days to avoid Mr. York, I’ll let my girlfriend know and have her fly over tomorrow to keep you company.”

He was a man, so it was inconvenient for him to take care of Camryn.

Moreover, since he had decided to be her brother figure, he had to keep a certain distance from her. He would help her with everything, not just with work.

After all, she could not see yet.

He was the one who helped her set up the video conference in the afternoon.

“There’s nothing going on between Mr. Callum and I,” Camryn hurriedly explained herself.

Duncan placed some food on her plate and looked at her for a long time before saying, “You were in your first year of middle school when I first met you, and it’s been fourteen years now. I know very well what kind of person you are.

“Although you seemed very busy and dedicated during the video conference, I can tell that you’re a little distracted. Your mind starts to wander as soon as you stop talking. I don't know what happened between Mr. York and you, but when I saw him coming over, he was obviously jealous,

“He misunderstood our relationship, didn't he? Then, he questioned you, you didn't explain anything, and then you guys fought?”

Camryn paused from eating, then continued to eat as if nothing was wrong.

“We didn't fight, Dal. We're just ordinary friends. What's there to explain? Stop asking. I'm fine. I was just thinking that Trenton is coming back. Will he hate me when he finds out about everything?”

In the Newman family, Camryn could not care less about her own mother, let alone her stepfather and half-sister. However, she cared about her younger brother.

Although she was always cold to him whenever he tried to care for her, her heart had long been melted by the warm man. She thought of him as her real family.

Trenton was different from Carrie. He treated her like a real sister and was extremely protective of her.

However, it was because he defended her that Carrie told her mother to send him to a boarding school after he started elementary school. He only came back once a week.

Now, he was in his third year in high school and could only come back once a month. He would have to take his college entrance exam soon. Camryn was afraid that the matters at home would affect him.

“He's having his entrance exam soon.”

Camryn said softly, “He has good grades, so my uncle and mother both hope that he can get into Poltham University, but he said that he doesn't want to go to a university that far. He wants to take the exam for Wiltspoon University and stay in Wiltspoon.

“He said he would be able to come back and see me often if he went to a local university.”

Dalton was well aware that of all the people in the Newman family, only Trenton Newman was a good person.

He thought about it and suggested, “Don't tell Trenton the truth when he comes back this weekend. Just tell him that his parents and older sister went out on a trip together and tell him the truth when his entrance exams are over.

“I think Trenton is an understanding person. He’s seventeen now and knows how to tell right from wrong. After you explain everything to him, give him the choice to resent or hate you, if he wants to.”

After a moment of silence, Camryn agreed with Dalton’s suggestion.

When she was investigating her father’s cause of death, she knew that one day, her brother and her would stand on opposite sides.

“Don’t think too much about it and eat first. Seafood doesn’t taste as good when it’s cold. I’ll send you back to the city after you finish eating.”

Dalton filled Camryn’s plate with more food and said, “You don’t want to tell me about you and Mr. York, but I’ll tell you the truth. If you have the chance, you have to grab onto him.

“The York family can be your backing. They won’t care about your family assets. I don’t believe that there’s another man who would approach you if not for your family fortune.”

Camryn said faintly, “I’m blind, Dal. I’m not a good match for Mr. Callum.”

“It doesn’t matter as long as his family and he doesn’t dislike you. Look at Mr. Zachary York and his wife. They’re not well-matched either, but aren’t they lovey-dovey now?

“Don’t care about what others say. What’s important is that you two love each other.”

Chapter 1494

Camryn fell silent.

Dalton said everything that he should say. When he saw her remain silent, he knew that it was because she felt inferior.

If it were other men, perhaps Camryn would not feel unworthy just because she was blind. However, it was the second son of the York family they were talking about. The Yorks were the richest family in Wiltspoon, while all of the Newman family’s assets barely broke a billion dollars.

Furthermore, some of their assets might be seized. The lawful businesses that they were able to keep in the end might only amount to a few hundred million in assets.

It was not comparable to the hundreds of billions that the York family had.

Due to her own problems, Camryn developed a sense of inferiority and felt unworthy of Callum.

The two finished their meal and took a short rest, then Dalton drove his car and sent Camryn back to the city.

When he arrived in the city with Camryn, Callum and the others left the hotel.

Callum had a few drinks and did not drive. He borrowed a bodyguard from Zachary to drive his car and went straight to the Newman villa after leaving the hotel.

He had a villa there anyway, so he could return to his villa to rest after going to the Newman family's villa to find Camryn.

If she was not at home, he would go to her flower store.

Wiltspoon was large, but those were the only two places she could go.

He did not believe that he would not be able to find her tonight.

Serenity carried the drowsy Sonny and said to Zachary, "Babe, call Mrs. Lane and tell Liberty that I'll take Sonny back today. I'll have Jim send Sonny to class tomorrow morning."

Liberty should be resting at this time.

Zachary hummed and took out his phone to call Mrs. Lane, asking her to relay to Liberty not to worry and that they would bring Sonny home with them to rest today.

Mrs. Lane said, "Ms. Hunt has already gone to bed. She waited until nine o'clock but didn't see you bring Sonny back, so she guessed that you would bring him home with you."

"Okay. You rest early too."

Zachary hung up the phone and took Sonny from Serenity.

Sonny opened his eyes, saw that it was his Uncle Zack, and called out to him softly before closing his eyes again. He leaned on Zachary's chest and fell asleep.

Zachary's heart melted at the child's soft voice.

He really, really wanted a child too.

A child with Serenity..

Their baby would surely be as cute as Sonny.

Zachary's heart looked forward to having a child, but he did not dare voice out for fear of putting pressure on Serenity. She was already worried that she was infertile since she was unable to get pregnant even after half a year into their marriage.

If he said that he wanted a child, Serenity would overthink again and ask him to go to the hospital together with him for another checkup..

Zachary sighed in his heart.

He told himself, 'Don't rush, don't rush.

'We'll definitely have a child of our own.

'The psychic said that we're destined to have a son and daughter.

'He also said that it'll only happen during fall.'

After getting into the car, Serenity asked her husband, "Are you really going to introduce that psychic to Mr. Bucham?"

Zachary adjusted Sonny's position so that the boy could sleep more comfortably.

"Of course. Nana might be asleep now, so I'll ask her for his contact tomorrow and pass it on to the head of the Bucham family, Walter. Then, he can ask the psychic to read Julian's fortune.

That way, Julian could not run away.

If they gave the contact information to Julian, he might just throw it away.

"Do you think Mr. Bucham is telling the truth? Does he really have a condition?"

Zachary thought about it and said, "It might be true, but it might also be an excuse. The only one who can prove it is the head of the Bucham family."

He believed that Walter had already received the news.

There was nowhere for Julian to run.

Like Zachary, Julian was a very powerful person. However, no matter how amazing he was, Walter was more powerful. Julian was no match for his father.

If the psychic also divined that there was no wife in Julian's life, then the Bucham family would give up.

Ring ring ring...

Zachary had just finished speaking when he received a call from Julian.

He answered the call.

"Zachary, I've helped you out a lot before. You have to help me this time."

Julian did not beat around the bush. "Give me the contact details of that psychic your nana trusts. I'll go meet him first. Also, I really do have a condition."

He was genuinely unresponsive to women.

Of course, he was unresponsive to men too.

However, he was healthy both physically and mentally.

He just had no response to that kind of thing.

The doctor said that if he met the person right for him, he would be able to become a true man. Otherwise, he would have to live like a priest for the rest of his life.

Julian did not mind.

He graciously announced his condition tonight because he wanted to shut Josh's mouth. If word of it spread to his parents' ears, they might finally stop pushing him to marry. He would gain some peace and quiet.

However, Zachary's words made him worried. He was worried that the psychic was actually good and divined that he had a partner in his future. If that happened, his parents would definitely drive him out of the house so he could pursue his destined person.

How would he know who his destined one was?

He could not hug every woman he saw just to see if he reacted to them, right?

People would think he was a pervert.

Zachary said apologetically, "I haven't asked for the psychic's contact information."

He did not believe in such superstition in the first place.

He simply cooperated with his nana out of respect for her.

"I'll need to ask Nana for his contact, but she should be asleep by now, so I can't disturb her. I'll help you ask her tomorrow."

Julian paused before saying, "You didn't bother asking for the number of such a powerful psychic?"

"I don't believe in such things."

"Why did you bring it up if you don't believe in it? It'll be too late even if you ask your nana for the contact information tomorrow. My dad acts faster than I do."

Zachary laughed. "Then there's nothing I can do to help."

"Zachary, I have a feeling that you're trying to set me up. I just don't have proof."

Zachary laughed again. "How could I try to set you up, Mr. Bucham? I just want the people around me to be happy and blessed like me."

"You mean you want us to be as henpecked as you." Julian spat at him.

Zachary turned his head to look at his beloved wife beside him and said, "I think my life now is pretty good. I hope that Seren and I can go on like this forever."

Even when their hair turned gray far into the future, their relationship would still be as good as it was now—just like his grandparents'.

Chapter 1496

Zachary's grandparents' relationship was remarkable. His grandfather doted on his nana until the end of his life.

Julian choked and then hung up the phone.

Serenity listened to the conversation between the two men and laughed. "Mr. Bucham's parents are also pushing him to get married pretty insistently, huh?"

“He’s about the same age as Duncan. You’ve seen how anxious Mrs. Lewis is about Duncan’s marriage-that’s how anxious Julian’s parents are. As parents, they probably have the same mentality. They start to grow anxious when their children reach their thirties.

Zachary was the same. When he turned thirty, his nana began to push him and made him marry Serenity.

In the past, he had many misunderstandings about Serenity.

Now, he was thankful for his nana.

“I don’t care about other people, but I want my brothers and friends to be happy.”

Zachary was not a nosy person.

He only cared about the people around him and wanted them to be as happy as he was.

Serenity leaned on his shoulder. “Me too.”

Zachary held Sonny with one arm and wrapped the other around Serenity.

In the Newman family villa, only the first floor was lit.

Callum’s car was parked in front of the villa. He told the bodyguard to honk.

Soon, someone came out of the house.

It was a maid.

When she saw a car parked outside the gate, she thought Mr. Newman was released by the police and hurriedly went to open the gate.

Then, when she opened the gate and saw Callum’s car, she realized that the car did not look familiar-it was not her employer’s car.

The maid tried to close the gate.

Callum lowered the window and poked his head out to ask, “Is Ms. Newman back?”

Callum saved Camryn and sent her home before. At that time, Mr. and Mrs. Newman looked full of gratitude for him and invited him into the house for tea.

The servants of the Newman family had seen Callum before.

“Are you here for Ms. Camryn, Mr. York? She hasn’t returned yet. I don’t think she’ll be coming back. She has been staying at her flower store lately.”

Callum hummed.

“I’ll leave a number with you. Please call me when she comes back. I have something urgent to discuss with her.”

The maid agreed easily.

The servants felt that the person in charge of the house was about to change.

Callum gave the maid his cell phone number.

The maid remembered it.

Only then did he ask the bodyguard to drive him back to his villa.

He had the bodyguard make a detour to Spring Blossoms prior, but Camryn was not there either.

When he arrived, Spring Blossoms was not yet closed. He walked around the store and even searched the small room inside the store, but Camryn was nowhere to be seen.

He thought Camryn had gone home, but she was not there either.

Where did she go?

Not long after Callum left, Dalton and Camryn came back.

“I won’t go in. Don’t let anyone know that we’re acquainted for the time being. Wait until you have full control of Newman Enterprise.”

Mr. Newman had been in charge of Newman Enterprise for more than two decades. He naturally had trusted aides in the company.

Dalton was five years older than Camry and worked for her. In order to help her, he joined Newman Enterprise as soon as he graduated from university. However, he was naturally not as good as Mr. Newman since he only worked at the company for nine years.

However, in the eyes of others, Dalton was Mr. Newman’s deeply trusted confidant.

Mr. Newman had sounded and observed Dalton for many years and only trusted him after determining that Dalton was wholly committed to Newman Enterprise’s future.
