

When His Eyes Opened Read Novel Chapter 3066

Novel Chapter 3066 -It seemed that what Tessa said was true.

Hayden's company was facing a problem and he would never ask his father for help.

Joanna was very stressed, but also very entangled. She couldn't help Hayden at all.

If Hayden found a more capable wife, he wouldn't be able to fight alone.

This was just the beginning, a lifetime was so long, Hayden might encounter more difficulties in the future...

Thinking of this, Joanna felt ashamed.

"Joanna, you just need to be his good helper." Avery said with a smile, "He will take care of things at work by himself. You don't have to worry about him."

"Auntie, is it the same with you and uncle?" Joanna asked curiously.

Avery's cheeks were slightly flushed: "Your uncle is a cold-faced and warm-hearted person. When I started my business, I encountered a lot of troubles, and he would try to help me every time. I sometimes accept his help."

Joanna: "Then have you ever helped uncle?"

Avery laughed out loud: "I wanted to help, but he didn't give me this chance. In my impression, his company has never encountered any troubles. Or there have been troubles, but I never knew."

Joanna nodded and asked, "If you knew that Uncle's company was in trouble, you would definitely find a way to help Uncle, right?"

Avery: "Of course. When I see that he is in trouble, I will definitely help him as much as I can. That's how love is, supporting each other."

After hearing Avery's words, Joanna felt less entangled in her heart.

"Auntie, I understand." Joanna smiled, added, "Let's go back to the house!"

"You go in first! I'll take a look at the fruit trees in the backyard." Considering that Joanna came back from work, Avery definitely wanted to get along with the two children.

After playing with the two children for a day, Avery had enough fun.

The two little children were used to each other's existence today, and they often babble and talk, which was very cute. Of course there were fights.

Both the two children played together and liked to fight for things. Because they couldn't speak, they did it directly.

Dorian grew stronger, but he also cried a little more.

Avery also reflected on Elliot today.

The two of them usually raised Dorian too well, and didn't take them out to play much, which made Dorian look like a flower in a greenhouse.

However, the bearing capacity of Gia was obviously much stronger than that of Dorian.

Although the brother and sister occasionally fight each other, there were also times when they played very intimately.

Avery really wanted to show off the two children to everyone around her, but she still needed to be patient.

After the baby in Layla's womb had stabilized for three months, she would hold a big party, and then she would introduce the good news one after another to her relatives and friends.

When Joanna entered the room, the two children were hugged by two nannies.

Dorian had tears on his face, while Gia was holding a toy and playing with it very attentively.

Joanna knew at a glance that the two children were fighting over things just now.

Joanna immediately hugged Dorian into her arms and comforted her son not to cry.

Gia frowned when she saw her mother hugging her brother.

The little Gia threw the toy in her hand to the ground, and stretched out two little hands towards Joanna, asking her mother to hug her.

"Gia, how about playing on the sofa? Mom can't hug you both at the same time!" Joanna said. She sat down on the sofa with Dorian in her arms.

The nanny who was holding Gia immediately sent Gia to Joanna.

After Gia arrived at her mother, she immediately struggled to hug her.

“Baby, don’t beat your brother all the time, okay?” Joanna patted her daughter’s head, trying to reason with her.

Gia immediately put her head on her mother’s chest.

Dorian imitated the example, and put his head on Joanna’s other chest.

Recommended Novels