

Read Novel Married At First Sight Chapter 2089

Married at First Sight Chapter 2089—"You can't just think about you and the poisonous woman, Jessica. You should also consider us. You and me were both scratched by the poisonous woman in order to save you. We stayed in the hospital for a few days. Now you have to listen to us. Hurry up and divorce that poisonous woman. Also, you can't issue a letter of understanding. She stabbed you to death. You still forgive her! Even if you teased her first, If she didn't have an idea, the two of you wouldn't be able to make things happen, and you can't slap your hands."

When you tease her, why doesn't she resign? Why doesn't she stay away from you? She flirts with you, and accepts all the gifts you give her. It's not because you forced her made.

Obviously she is the one who is degrading herself, and she still acts like a victim. You still forgive her, why don't you forgive your parents, and your sister? Didn't you see that your parents' hair was all white because of you?

Get away from her quickly and let her give a heavy sentence. You are not dead, so you can't sentence her to death. For her crime, you can sentence her to life imprisonment. Just let her stay there for the rest of her life. After you are divorced, go after your wife and son."

Chelsea couldn't wait to chase Liberty back for her younger brother.

Mr. Brown, who had been silent all this time, said at this moment: "Hank, I'm afraid you won't be able to chase Liberty back, but you still have to divorce Jessica, she almost stabbed you to death, our family will never forgive her of.

"Your mother and I are getting old and can't stand the trouble. If this happens again, your mother and I will be scared to death. If you still recognize us as parents, you will be divorce with that poisonous woman, and don't publish that kind of book, she is not worthy of forgiveness for doing this."

If Jessica hurt Hank unintentionally, she could be forgiven, but she did it on purpose. Her purpose was to stab Hank to death, then committed suicide, and the two of them would go to h-e-l-l together.

It was intentional homicide and unforgivable.

After Hank was stabbed so many times by her, she also scratched Chelsea, before the police came, it would be easy for her to commit suicide, but she didn't.

Mr. Brown felt that Jessica only wanted to stab his son to death, and when she was about to commit suicide, she was afraid and did not dare to use the knife.

Hank was about to say something when there was a knock on the door.

Chelsea's daughter approached the door of the ward, and when she heard a knock on the door, she went to open it.

Liberty led Sonny and stood at the door, she was carrying a bag of apples, Sonny was holding a bouquet of flowers, the person next to the mother and son was Duncan in a wheelchair pushed by a bodyguard.

"Aunt." The little girl habitually called Liberty her aunt.

Liberty corrected her title lightly, "Your uncle and I have divorced a long time ago, so call me auntie."

The little girl moved her lips, but in the end she didn't say anything. She staggered her body, let Liberty and Sonny into the ward, and looked at Duncan again.

Teenagers actually knew a lot.

The little girl often heard her parents talk about her uncle's divorce, saying that her aunt seemed to be a different person after the divorce. Now she had a career, rich money, and a rich man who pursued her aunt.

"Liberty, Liberty, you are here." As soon as Chelsea saw that it was Liberty and Liberty who came in, she immediately went forward, with flowers piled up on her face.

"Aunt." Chelsea's two sons also called Liberty. Like their sister, they are still used to being called Aunt Liberty.

Seeing Sonny holding the bouquet, Lucas habitually wanted to go forward to grab it, but was grabbed by his brother. His brother was taught a lesson by Zachary before, and now he was much more sensible.

Recommended Novels